"Love" was the subject of the Lesson-Sermon for First Church of Christ, Scientist, Peterborough, on Sunday. The Golden Text was, "The Lord is good to all; and His tender mercies are over all His works." (Psalms 145:9.). Selections from the Bible included the following from Psalms 23:1, "The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want." Correlative citations from the Christian Science textbook, included the following, "The Christian Science God is universal, eternal, divine Love, which changeth not and causeth no evil, disease, nor death."

PEAK TOURIST BUSINESS

Tourists who dined at the Elite restaurant from Friday night to Monday night set up something of a record according to Louis Yeotes' estimates today. "Quite a number of them told me they had never been in Peterborough before. That was not surprising for Americans, but it was a surprise to hear people from Ottawa, Montreal and other places east of us say it was their first time here. There was no sign of depression in the number of people we had during those three days. It was the biggest business I think we ever had for three days. The people from the east came over No. 7 highway."

SAN FRANCISCO, Calif.—(CP).—Some time ago Rev. Alexander Bucci started saving cancelled stamps. Now they form a giant American flag on the ceiling of his living-room.

Merchants Will Sponsor Parade

The Peterborough Merchants Parade which is being held in connection with the showing of the stage presentation "Previews Of Progress," will start at 8 o'clock sharp of Thursday evening only from the Confederation Square and proceed directly to the Exhibition Grounds where it will pass in review before hundreds of spectators on the grand stand. Dozens of local merchants agents and manufacturers are planning floats, exhibits, trucks and every kind of locomotive device which can be uncovered from attics, barns and cellars showing their oldest product as compared with the most up to date articles carried by their companys today.

Spectators will be greeted by an array of old motor cars, high wheel and tandem bicycles, old buck boards and covered wagons such as they have never seen since 1888. It is said that Fire Chief Gimblett has a surprise up his sleeve for all except the real old timers.

Any merchant in the city who has not been contacted and who feels he would like to have a truck, or float in the parade to advertise his business is asked to get in touch with Andy Rutter at the Examiner office who will offer suggestions and give any information that may be required.

In case of rain the parade will be postponed until Friday evening and the show will then be advanced one night, being presented on Friday and Saturday.

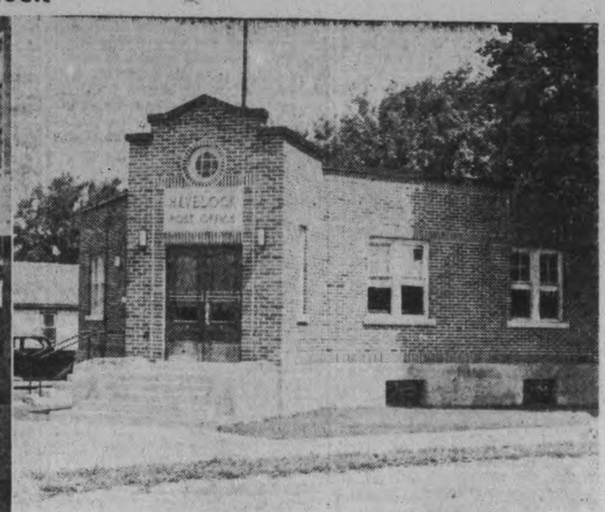
July Building Totals $77,383

Evidence of a building boom in Peterborough is seen in a perusal of permits issued during the month of July. Thirty-one permits for buildings and repairs totalling $77,383 are more than in any July since 1927. To date this year contracting has totalled $203,851, highest in Peterborough since 1930 when it reached $624,370 up to the end of that month.

Largely responsible for last month's figure was the permit issued to the Bell Telephone company to build at $50,000 telephone exchange. Seven permits for private dwellings were issued, totalling $21,100. Since the beginning of the year 28 new houses have been erected in the city, and a large number are going up at the present time in North Monaghan.

Shingelling took the lead in type of repairs being carried out, a large number of owners signifying their intention of refinishing their roofs during the hot weather. Altering windows, repairing sheds, fixing chimneys, altering bedrooms, bathrooms, living rooms, fixing store fronts, were some of the items listed.

New Post Office Is Opened in Havelock



Pictures of the opening of Havelock's new $10,000 post office, on Monday. The building, which was started last fall, occupies a very prominent site in the village, being situated on No. 7 highway, at the corner of Oak and Ottawa Streets. Queer Blackberries

QUINCY, Ill., Aug. 2.—(AP).—Blackberries are white in Quincy this season. Grown on several truck farms, they taste black but look white and don't stain. Several housewives reported that cooked and strained they produce a jelly that looked like apple jelly.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

ONE OF THE BIGGEST WEEKENDS in the year's sports here was run off over Civic Holiday to the entertainment of a great many local and district folk. It started off Saturday aft at Riverside with a junior ball game, Cobourg taking a 5-1 win over the Young Petes to wind up their schedule. Same two teams now clash in semi-final playoffs, winner to meet Oshawa in finals. The locals couldn't hit Bill Bateman of Cobourg at all, and he held 'em to five safeties while fanning a dozen. Bob Todd hurled fair ball but didn't get much help from his buddies. Not a record crowd by any means, but still the game wasn't highly important. But the Young Petes will find themselves in highly important scraps from now on and they've got to get in there fighting for all they're worth or Cobourg will not even give 'em a chance at finals.

* * * * * *

BEFORE GOING any further, let us pause for station announcements, said station being Peterborough and the arrivals being Knotty Lee's pro ball team from Ogdensburg. The Colts will be here tomorrow (Wednesday) eve at six in Riverside to play the Petes an exhibition tilt, and it ought to pack in the cash customers. A dandy game likely and another chance to see that fiery skipper, Knotty Lee, in action—even if it is against us this time. Knotty never smiles till after his team has won—he scowls for days before a game and all during the fray. And can he ever cuss! His Colts are in second place now and playing good ball. It will be well worth seeing, this contest.

O's Come And Go To Town

SATURDAY EVE at the Bowl saw Omemee men softballers pull a real surprise by pasting the daylights at twilight out of the Motorists, 20 to 5. To move up into a second place tie with Shorty Barrett's bunch in the loop standing. They got first-rate flinging by Reeds and good hitting and fielding all around. Motorists' hurling wasn't so hot, their fielding just fair and they were weak with the willow in this fray. Game only went seven heats as it became dark too soon, or else the O's were too late arriving. Skipper A. Williamson of the Omemee outfit has been sick and didn't lead his team to this victory. Schedule ends next Thursday with Omemee meeting Westclox here. Standing is in tonight.

QUITE A LIVELY TIME by lamp light in Riverside Park Saturday night as the Petes beat the House of David pro beardsters, 11 to 10. A big crowd saw the floodlight fray marked with a big early lead by the Benton Harbormen and then a big eighth-inning rally by the Petes. Followed by a big argument when the Sabbath Day law made it necessary to call the game off at midnight. That was all right but when it dawned on the Davids, who had tied the score at 11-11 in the first half of the ninth, that the score reverted back to the eighth well, did they ever argue! They hate like the dickens to lose to an amateur squad and they were plenty sore. Blamed the "Ontario blue laws," the umpire, the rule book and even the scorer, saying they were ahead in the eighth. Whilst in the second, they tried to get us to whittle down their eight-run splash to six on account of it made the game too one-sided! A strange cult, indeed. At least they'll be glad to get out of Central Ontario where they lost to Oshawa and twice to the Petes, after winning about a dozen in a row in other Ontario towns.

Lefty In The Lamp Light

LEFTY McNALLY pitched good ball to get the win, and he had fine support for the most part by his buddies. He hit a wild streak in the second, walking several and having to ease up and get bingled, but when he cut loose with his fast ball they couldn't do much to it. He fanned nine of 'em, no less. Kinsey on the other slab was batted out in the eighth and Murphy wound it up. Starr hit safely three times, Cadd's terrific triple drove in three in that wild eighth and Doll, Murphy and Calladine also hit well. Kearns went good in the field, and infield errors were excusable in the only fair lighting with a fog from the fifth on. A good ending to a fair fracas.

* * * * * *

THERE WAS NO ARGUMENT over the Monday night fray which the Petes won by a 6-5 score. They looked better all the way and appeared to have it cinched by a good margin till the bewhiskered boys rallied for three in the ninth. Big Russ Kitchen pitched a beautiful game, sweeping that sharp hook in there all evening to fan nine and give 'em but six hits till they got three in the ninth. He had first-rate fielding and hitting support, too, with Kearns, Starr, Doll and Whatley having two safe blows each. Including two-baggers by Doll, Burton and Whatley, the latter nicking a pair. Bob Doll did some neat fielding on third and Cadd was good at first. The whole squad went well. Maybe we'd better not brag till after Wednesday when Knotty's gang comes here, but that's three wins in three starts this year over pro teams, Buffalo Fro-Joys once and the House of Davids twice, by golly!

Stepping On The Gas

BOUNCING ALONG a slippery dirt track at 70 or 80 miles an hour on a motorbike isn't our idea of fun. Maybe a thrill but we'll take ours in modified form. Kawartha Motorcycle Club and Lions Club put on a good Civic Holiday meet here and drew around 3,000 people to the Exhibition Grounds. The track was greasy at first after the a.m. rain but two dozen racers put on some exciting events. They'd hit it hot on the stretch and then skid around the corners at close to 60. The experts went by the stands in blurs and the local talent did okay, too. Riders came from Montreal, Hamilton, Toronto, Lansing and Stratford to battle it out for the Canadian dirt track championships. Winners are listed elsewhere. One gee, Jack Couch of Toronto, had a spill, suffering slight concussion and cuts in the face. Officials, riders and spectators all seemed satisfied with the show—and they should. 'Twas a roaring success!

OUR LACROSSERS dropped a 14-5 decision in Orangeville on the holiday, too many of the Petes' players taking a holiday and not making the trip. Red was in goal, with Miller and Chute on defence. One line had Magee, Whitton, Pammett and Reid; while the others were Hendy, E. Creighton, Bowen, Worthy and Sloan. Couldn't get going at all, we're told, and deserved the reverse. The bunch play at East York on Thursday and have a tough time with Brooklin here this Friday eve. Of course, the holidays are winding up and most of the 22 signed players will be available ere playoffs. Owing to the Exhibition, the Friday, Aug. 19th, game will be postponed till Sept. 6th, with East York. Secretary Gene Dopp of the O.L.A. was a visitor in Peterborough on Saturday and viewed the local arena with approval. Jerry Creighton of the Petes will not be playing for a couple or three weeks yet, just getting over an attack of pneumonia and being under doctor's orders.

As C.G.E.'s catcher, Annette DeCarlo had a finger hurt, maybe busted, yestiddy in Cobourg as the Electrics lost out....Omemee and Westclox men softballers finish it up here Thursday....Jack Couch, injured rider at the motorbike race yesterday, spent a "fairly good" night in Nicholls Hospital; he ought to be oke by another day....P.C.I. and Greyhounds have a junior ball game at the Ex. tomorrow e'en....Knotty has assured the local ossifers that he isn't coming here tomorrow to take McNally from 'em; they were ready to battle him....When Kitch gets that foot up in the air on his pitches, then he's really throwing 'em in.... Regatta dope of the holiday is in tonight....C.O.B.L. playoffs start Sat'day with the Petes in Oshawa....After covering three ball games and a motorbike meet—and writing several other stories—over the holiday weekend, we're inclined to grunt: "What holiday?"

Harold Freeman Skips Local Four To Second Place Win For Canoe Company Trophy

Sixty-Four Rinks Entered From All Parts Of Ontario

Notwithstanding the fact that it rained most of Sunday night and even up to 7 o'clock on Monday morning (Civic Holiday), the Peterborough Lawn Bowling club's first Coronation anniversary tournament went over bigger and better than if it had been staged over weekend. Bigger, perhaps, than was really expected, due to so many other tournaments in different lawn bowling centres and better because it gave the players who had entered into this tournament a chance to show just how loyal they can be even in the face of the most discouraging circumstances. Only one default was registered and that an excusable one when you consider the entry was from a far off city.

Sixty-four rinks entered from Paris, Hamilton, Toronto, Kingston, Cobourg, Port Hope, Oshawa, Whitby, Bowmanville, Markham, Uxbridge, Marmora, Newmarket, Lindsay, Brighton, Warkworth, Havelock, Norwood and Campbellford.

In presenting to eastern and central Ontario a tournament such as this one it has been done only by the co-operation of all sister clubs in the district and with the co-operating support of the local members. The committee in charge with Judge S. Smoke as chairman spared neither time or money in their efforts to put Peterborough on the map in lawn bowling circles. This has been accomplished and from now on will have to be recognized as such. It was unfortunate that Judge Smoke, owing to illness, was unable to give the time that he had intended to this great undertaking but his committee stepped right into the breach and the results speak for themselves.

To E. L. Sackville, secretary of the committee, fell the heaviest task and he did his job well, so much so that the club showed their appreciation by presenting him with a gold wrist watch.

In presenting the prizes, the president thanked everybody for their loyal support in this club's first coronation tournament. A Port Perry rink skipped by D. Carnegie won top honors, the Quaker Oats Company trophy while a local four under the leadership of Harold Freeman was successful in winning the Peterborough Canoe Company cup. In the lucky draw prizes, Mrs. Linton of Campbellford won first prize, a pair of bedroom lamps presented by A. Comstock and Sons. Mrs. A. Menie of Cobourg was second for a Westclox Big Ben, presented by the Western Clock Company. In the third draw Mrs. A. Collins of Hamilton won a 5-lb. can of Ovaltine, presented by A. Wander and Company and Mrs. J. Cullen of local club won a pair of Dunlop lawn bowls.

In the gents' section W. Brownlee of Oshawa won the solid leather bowl case and A. Heckman of Peterborough, a gentleman's travelling set presented by Warne Bros.

FORT ERIE, Ont., Aug. 2 (CP).—Thirteen occupants of the 38-foot motorboat Seven Bells waded to shore through shallow water when the craft went aground on a sandbar off Crystal Beach last night. In the party were four men, six women and three children. They declined to give their names, but were said to be residents of Port Colborne. All were soaked as a result of their journey to shore. Steps were taken to remove the boat from the sandbar to-day.

Indians Face League "Crisis" In Sox and Yankee Battles

Cleveland May Hold Advantage In Race

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.— (CP). — Since early this season, one of the big questions, if not the biggest, concerning the American League race, had to do with the staying qualities of Cleveland Indians, the team that always had cracked up before.

"Would the Indians have it in the clutch?" the fans asked. So far Osvar Vitt and his men have picked up their fair share of the chips, but there's another of those important occasions known as "the clutch" at hand.

The Indians, now 2½ games behind the league leading New York Yankees as a result of yesterday's 10-inning, 11-8 defeat by Washington, face their toughest rivals in the next seven games in their home park. The third place Boston Red Sox, who trail the Tribe by only three games, open a four-game series at Cleveland to-day and after them the Yanks move in for three games.

If Cleveland can walk off with a goodly share of these games, the Tribe has a fine chance to take the lead. For after these clubs, the Indians will be tackling such rivals as St. Louis and Detroit for a while and those tough easterners will be fighting it out among themselves.

Detroit Tigers were threatening for a while to become dangerous, winning eight games in a row to climb to fourth place. But they were checked abruptly by the Athletics in yesterday's only other game, going down 4-0 and returning to fifth place.

Star Pitchers Return.

To show how tough things may be for the Indians, Boston has summoned Left Grove and Johnny Marcum, star pitchers who were left behind to nurse sore arms, to rejoin the club and prepare for action.

The Tribe's defeat yesterday is not to be taken as a real sign of weakness, however, for Cleveland had won five straight before it came along.

However, Bobby Feller couldn't hold the 5-1 lead his mates handed him, although he whiffed six. Johnny Humphries also blew a lead in the eight and ninth and when he yielded another tally on hits by Chief Hogsett and Buddy Lewis, Willis Hudlin replaced him. Hudlin put another runner on base by an error and Ossie Bluege doubled to bring them both home.

Lee Ross and Edgar Smith of the A's combined to blank Detroit with nine hits while Ross made two hits and drove in three Philadelphia runs.

The National League also comes in for its share of action in the next few days with New York Giants and Chicago Cubs, second and third, respectively, and only 2½ games apart, tangle in a three-game series. The Giants made a last-minute effort to plug the biggest gap in their line-up yesterday when they bought Chalmer (Bill) Cissell, veteran second sacker, from Baltimore. A smart fielder and a fair hitter, they hope he'll fill Burgess Whitehead's shoes. Lou Chiozza and Alex Kampouris, who tried unsuccessfully, both are on the injury list.

Omemee climbed into a second-place tie in a loop tilt Saturday night at the Bowl with a 20-5 win over Motorists. The game was called for darkness at the end of the seventh. Motorists were guilty of six errors on the slippery ground. Parsons led the O's at bat with five hits while Reeds got four, and Brooks and Weir three each. Brockley and Jones hit homers. For Motorists, Weir hit a homer and Fleming a double. Seymour Defeats Petherick's 19-7

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 2.—Seymour West renewed their claim on the Glover Trophy for another year when they defeated Petherick's Corners before the cheers of a wildly enthusiastic crowd here Saturday. It was the fourth game in the play downs and the bitter rivalry between the two Township league teams was evidenced at the very outset when the two teams were unable to decide who should take the field first and a bitter argument ensued with the supporters for both sides entering into the spirit of the thing with plenty of the good old cheers in the Bronx style.

Locals Lose To Cobourg

Cobourg copped a 5-1 Junior Lakeshore Baseball League win over the Young Petes here Saturday before a slim crowd at Riverside in the afternoon. It was the final scheduled game, leaving the locals in third place but in a semi-final playoff berth. The win gives Cobourg choice of playoff games. It was a neat struggle over most of the route with the young visitors earning the nod handily with fine flinging, perfect fielding and some timely hitting.

Bill Bateman was in rare form on the Cobourg slab and held the homesters to five hits and two walks while he struck out a dozen. He had airtight support. Bob Todd for the Ralph gang also pitched fair ball, but was nicked for 11 hits, four bunched in the fifth, and a walk as he fanned eight. His support was shaky in spots. Three runs were scored in the fifth after a misjudged fly in the field, and two other runs resulted from errors. None of the locals had more than one hit, but Bateman, Woods, Zealand and Lucas had two apiece for the winners. Fine fielding was shown by Collins at short for Peterborough and King at first for Cobourg.

Side Glances

(Herb Martin)

At 8 o'clock on Monday morning no one would have given a used postage stamp for the chance of holding a tournament.

And once again the Peterborough club can hang up a record; 26 entries, well over half the club's membership.

Right in the first round, Rev. Black of Bowmanville hangs up a big 6 on our Fire Chief and then along comes H. Rosevear (Port Hope) with an 8 against our President, and just to keep pace with the top-notchers, Jimmy Kingsbury slips a possible over on H. Renaud.

W. T. MacKay, playing lead for W. Ford's Balmy Beach rink celebrated his 75th birthday Monday by playing in our tournament.

The ladies with Mrs. A. Heckman as convenor made a grand job of the "eating department."

And our greens committee and the ever-popular Charlie Butcher came in for many nice compliments and they were well merited.

The draw was in the capable hands of the veteran Harry Foote and he was ably assisted by George Cairns.

And this wonderful tournament was brought to a close by Robert Hendry reciting "Granny's Boy" in recognition to the many returned soldiers who attended our tournament.

Ogdensburg Colts Here Wednesday

Knotty Lee's Colts of Ogdensburg will play the Petes an exhibition baseball game here tomorrow (Wednesday) evening at six o'clock in Riverside Park. Permission has been granted by the O.B.A. for the local senior amateurs to play against the pros from the Can.-Am. loop. The N. Y. state team is second now in their league standing, and won the championship a year ago. They may prove too tough for the Petes, but the latter gang expect to make it a real battle. As there is no half-holiday Wednesday, the tussle will be a twilight affair, and a huge crowd of fans is expected on hand for it.

It is uncertain yet which of the Peterborough pitchers will get the assignment, possibly several of them seeing action. The strongest local lineup will be on hand to greet the return of Knotty Lee, former fiery and popular coach of the Petes. He will bring his regular squad, made up of hard hitters and good fielders. These Class "D" pros play for the chances of going higher in professional company and, like every other team ever handled by Knotty, are full of pep and fight. It promises to be a fine baseball exhibition and will be first-rate practise for the Petes for their approaching playoffs, and excellent entertainment for the fans.

Ogopogo Returns

KELOWNA, B.C., Aug. 2.—(CP).—Ogopogo, famed sea monster of the Okanagan, has been "seen" again.

Len Leathley, Charles Kirby and Pete King claim they saw several long black oily-looking coils looping through peaceful waters of Okanagan lake over the week-end and are "sure" it was the serpent.

Whitakers Beat Lindsay 92-50

On Saturday, July 30, Lindsay came to Nicholl's Oval to play Whitaker's short-handed but were able to complete their team with Peterborough Club players who had come as spectators and a glimpse at the score sheets reveals a strong P.C.C. flavor. Whitaker's batted first and lost. Colbran at 12, but T. Jones and Hamilton added 56 before the latter was bowled by Dyer for a vigorous 40. Just previously the Peterborough pair Dyer and Kelly had been brought on to bowl by the Lindsay captain. At 75 Jones was also out to the same bowler and the rest of the side scored 17 runs bringing the total to 92. Dyer took 6 wickets for 10 and Kelly 4 for 20. Lindsay lost their first six wickets for 12, but later Kelly, Chambers and Cox improved matters and the total reached 50. Hamilton had 5 wickets for 19. Colbran 4 for 29. HUGE HOLIDAY CROWD VIEWS TITULAR MOTORBIKE RACES HERE

But One Spill On Good Card At Speed Meet

Two dozen roaring motorcycles raced before a Civic holiday crowd of nearly 3,000 yesterday afternoon in the Exhibition Grounds here. The three-hour speed meet was for the Canadian dirt track half-mile championships and had an A.C.U. sanction.

The huge holiday crowd saw a successful show from every standpoint, with expert and novice motorcycle racers flashing past the grandstand in remarkably fast times, considering a slippery track, caused by rain in the morning. The program was sponsored jointly by the Kawartha Motorcycle Club and the local Lions Club, proceeds going toward the Lions Club Boys Band.

Officers of both these clubs were active at the meet in an official capacity. Tony Miller was the A.C.U. referee and timer, while Harry Firth was the starter, Cliff Brien the pit steward and Don Pearson announcer. Dick Lush announced with a megaphone the first few events. A program sheet was distributed to spectators, giving the list of events, pro riders' names, and a message by the Lions Club president, Fred A. Cripps.

Run Five Events

Five events were staged, in addition to a one-heat race for members of the Kawartha Club. Only one spill marred the card, Jack Crouch of Toronto, his first time on a dirt track, upsetting at the quarter pole in the third heat of the five-mile Class "C" novice run. Suffering cuts in the face and a slight concussion, he was attended to by members of St. John Ambulance Corps. Godfrey Neal of Toronto was sent off the track in the second heat of this event for riding with no hands on his machine. Don Whitmore of Lansing, Ontario, had to drop out of the second heat of the five-mile Class "C" experts race when a chain on his machine broke.

The 24 racers represented half a dozen places, including Toronto, Montreal, Stratford, Lansing, Hamilton and Peterborough. At least half a hundred motorbikes were counted in the grounds at one time, many of them used for service or passengers.

Three professional racers from Toronto, Johnny Millet, Harold Bain and Cy Henry, staged three heats in Class "A" competition. Millet took the first of three miles in 3.35 on a wet track with Bain second and then Henry. The time of the next was reduced to 2.10 3-5 for two miles with Millet again leading Bain home. They wound up the show with two miles in 2.26 and four-fifths, Millet and Bain tying and Henry trailing.

Cameron Wins

In the three-mile Class "C" novice event, Doug Cameron of Montreal nosed out Herb Jordan of Toronto in the first event, with Godfrey Neal next, time being 3.25. It was cut to 3.15 next heat, Jack Couch of Toronto first, Wilbur Norman of Toronto second and then Ed Pichette of Montreal. The final saw Norman the winner in 3.48 and three-fifths, followed by Couch and then Cameron.

Sam Davies of Montreal took the first heat of the three-mile Class "C" experts race in 2.11 and four-fifths, followed by Don Whitmore and with Jim Ferguson of Toronto. The heats were two miles. Walter Scott of Stratford blazed his bike around in 2.15 and one-fifth to cop the next heat, O. Pazzi of Montreal giving him a real race, with Matt Sale of Toronto third. Hitting the final on high, Sam Davies won out in 3.16 and two-fifths for three miles, with Whitmore second and Pazzi third.

In the five-mile novice Class "C" race, run off in three two-mile heats and a five-mile final, Cliff Venier of Toronto was disqualified in the first heat, after winning, for using another rider's machine instead of his own, according to A.C.U. rules. His time was 2.27 and three-fifths, while Doug Cameron, who took the second heat, cut it to 2.25. The third went to Wilbur Norman, the time not being clocked owing to Crouch's accident. In the final, Doug Cameron came first for the Canadian novice championship in 5.44 and four-fifths, while W. Norman was second and Ed. Pichette third.

Turns It On

There were two two-mile heats and a five-mile final in the five-mile Class "C" experts race, with excellent times being clocked as the track dried off. Sam Davies won the first over O. Pazzi in 2.13, and Jim Ferguson nosed out Matt Sale in the second in 2.15 and four-fifths. The final was a real race all the way and they roared their motorcycles around the corners and on the stretches. Sam Davies won the Canadian experts championship in 5.34 and four-fifths, with O. Pazzi second and Jim Ferguson third.

The local race event for members of the Kawartha Motorcycle Club was a three-mile one-heat event, entrants being Ken Wyatt, Les Clarke, Sam Carew and Hugh Immings. It was taken by Clarke in 3.55, with Wyatt second, Immings third and then Carew. Les Clarke made a good showing also in the five-mile novice class when he finished third in the third heat behind Norman and Venier.

Jack Doyle Plans Fistic Comeback

LONDON, Aug., 2—(CP)—Jack Doyle, the temperamental Irish heavyweight, is back in training, forsaking for the time being at least, his night club warbling for a fistic comeback attempt against Eddie Phillips, ranking British heavy.

Doyle, whose voice gained him more fame as the "Irish Thrush" than ever his fists did in the ring looks on Phillips as the stepping stone to the ring fame which so far has passed him by.

The former Irish Guardsman meets Phillips-top-ranking fighter of the land now that Tommy Farr is in the United States—at Harringay arena Sept. 13.

Just possibly the winner of the 12-round bout may gain recognition from the British boxing board of control as the British Empire heavyweight because the B.B.B.C. has declared Farr's title vacant after Aug. 5. That is the deadline set for a title fight between Farr and Phillips—a deadline Farr has chosen to ignore.

Russ Kitchen In Rare Form As Petes Win

The Petes made it two in a row Monday night under the arcs when they took a 6-5 win over the House of David pros in an exhibition ball game before a thousand fans. It was a better tilt to watch than the Saturday game, and the locals looked superior throughout. Only in the ninth, when they staged a three-run rally, did the Davids press. Sparkling pitching by Russ Kitchen, some grand fielding and hard bingling by the homesters all helped in the win. The losers got off badly when their young lefthander spotted the Petes two in the first. They booted a few bad ones and found Kitchen hard to hit most of the route.

Lefty Noakes lasted till the fourth when he was driven out, and Murphy finished in good style, allowing no earned runs. Kitchen was in fine form with a fast ball and sharp hook to strike out nine, walk three and give up nine hits, three of them in the ninth. He had good backing, two nifty double plays, some good infield work and a hard catch by Doll all aiding. Kearns, Starr, Doll and Whatley had two hits each, the latter getting two doubles. Burton and Doll also hit two-baggers, the latter's being misjudged in centre. Rhodes and Kinsey got two each for the losers; Rhodes hitting a double and Zachaly a triple. Oceak made a smart catch of a foul near third.

DETROIT, Aug. 2.—(CP)—Hank Greenberg, Detroit first baseman today was well on his way in a determined bid to smash Babe Ruth's all-time record of 60 home runs in one season.

Greenberg, 27-year-old Jewish boy from New York, has scored 37 home runs in 92 games, more runs than any major league ball player has ever hit so early in the season.

Ruth, when he established his record in 1927, had batted out 37 runs in 113 games, by Aug. 16, but the serious-minded slugger Greenberg has not forgotten the marvellous finish Ruth staged to establish the record—17 homers in one month.

While Greenberg's homers keep left-field bleacher patrons busy dodging, New York Giants are mourning their lost opportunity. A great Jewish baseball player, especially a hitter, is worth money at New York box offices, and the Giants refused even to give Greenberg a trial when Greenberg's father begged them to watch Hank perform, around 1930.

Greenberg came up the tough way. He starred in high school, later in sand-lot baseball, and then Detroit and the New York Yankees scouted him. Greenberg refused the Yankees' offer because Lou Gehrig looked like too tough competition. He played two years in minor league ball, and joined the Tigers in 1933. Last season he hit 40 homers.

Harlemites Lose To De Laval 17-13

DeLaval took a 17-13 Southend Softball League win Friday over Little Harlem at the Brinton Field. Loose fielding and walks gave the winners a good lead at the start and they held it. Naish pitched fair ball for the victors, bearing down in the pinches. Price and Craig toiled for Herb Payne's gang, the former walking nine. Abbott and Dallin led the DeLaval team at bat while Hodson and Price were best for the other side. Wiley and Craig looked good defensively. The teams:

Leafs Tighten League Hold On 5th Place

TORONTO, Aug. 2.—Earl Welton Caldwell of Toronto Maple Leafs won't set any league records for games won this year and his name will be missing from the lists of strikeout artists but just the same Earl Welton is a mighty handy fellow to have around as he demonstrated yesterday.

The Leafs consolidate dtheir grip on fifth place, which they consider a jumping off spot for the first division, by beating Syracuse Chiefs 7-5 and 6-2. Caldwell hurled 5 2-3 innings of relief in two games, getting credit for the second win and halting a Syracuse rally in the first.

The double bill supplied most of the day's action. Newark steamrollered Montreal 17-4 and Jersey Giants shaded Buffalo Bisons 8-6. Rochester's night game with Baltimore was postponed because of rain.

The Leafs were bowling along behind a 6-2 lead in the seventh of the opener when trouble developed and starting pitcher John Berly was whisked from the mound. Caldwell came in, halted the rally at three runs and blanked the Chiefs for the next two innings. In the nightcap, when the Chiefs began to hit in the fourth Earl came in and stopped the rally. The Leafs put on a four-run splurge in their half of the inning to win the game for Caldwell—something he richly deserved.

The Bears piled up 23 hits in walloping the hapless Royals. Buddy Rosar smacked out a three-run homer, a double and two singles and Charlie Keller, his closest rival for the league's batting title, banged out a trio of hits. Even Phil Page, who relieved Norman Branch in the third and got credit for the victory hit a double and two singles.

The Jersey Giants clouted Ken Ash and Bucky Jacobs for seven runs in the first inning and coasted home on this lead. Young Johnny Hubbell halted a Bisons' rally in the seventh.

Bearded Pros Are Beaten In Close Tilt

The Petes took an 11-10 exhibition win over House of David pro ballsters before a big crowd in Riverside Park on Saturday night. The bearded ones tied the count at 11-all in the ninth but the game had to be called off at midnight and the score reverted back to the eighth. The Davids had scored eight runs in a big second inning for an early lead but the Petes broke loose in an eight-run rally in the eighth to get the nod. It was played under floodlights, with a pepper-ball act put on by three of the visitors as part of the entertainment in a fair exhibition.

Lefty McNally hurled good ball, barring the second stanza when walks and hits cost him eight markers. He held the pros to eight hits and five walks while fanning nine. Kinsey was knocked out in the eighth by the Petes with Murphy finishing up. They twirled neat ball mostly. Both sides had a few excusable errors in the dim lights, made worse late in the game by fog. Catches by Kearns in centre was a defensive feature, with each team pulling off a double play. Kinsey and Molet had two hits each for the losers, while Calladine, Murphy, Doll and Cadd each had two for the Petes, the latter's mighty triple in the eighth scoring three runs. Starr topped the locals at bat with three hits in five times up.

Feud? Feud? What Feud?

Reporters who greeted Mrs. Helen Wills Moody when she returned from Wimbledon after her victory over Helen Jacobs in the women's singles finals, were taken aback, not to say slightly dazed, when, on asking the world's No. 1 feminine player about her bitter rivalry with Miss Jacobs, were answered with: "Feud? We have no feud. That's just newspaper talk." Anyway, Queen Helen, caught in a not-so-icy moment, makes a charming picture.

IN MEMORIAM

MILLAR.—In loving memory of my beloved wife, Lenore Elenor Millar, who passed away three years ago to-day, August 2, 1935.
There's a face in my memory ever,
There's a voice that I long to hear,
There's a smile I'll remember forever,
Though I try to forget every tear;
There's a sad, but a fond remembrance
Of a dear wife, fond and true,
So here's a token of affection, dear,
And a heartache still for you.
—Ever remembered by her husband, "Dusty."

MILLAR. — In loving memory of Lenore Elenor Millar, who passed away August 2, 1935.
Just when her life was brightest,
Just when her years were best,
She was called from this world of sorrow
To her home of eternal rest.
—Always remembered by "Dusty's" Mother, his Sisters, and Brothers.

NORTHEY.—In loving memory of a dear sister, Mrs. Mary M. Northey, who passed away July 29, 1937.
To-day recalls sad memories,
Of a dear one gone to rest;
And the ones who think of her to-day
Are the ones that loved her best.
—Sadly missed by Mrs. Amelia Gallaher.

Army Bombers Quit Hunt For Clipper

MANILA, Aug. 2. —(AP)— Four days of continuous scouting forced four big United States army bombers out of the vast search for the Hawaii Clipper today and army officials called a conference to determine future moves after another 24 hours of air hunting. The bombers returned to their base at Fort Stotsenburg to be serviced after long daily flights at sea.

Army authorities did not indicate what they expected to develop from the conference or whether it would result in their complete withdrawal from the search.

Withdrawal of the bombers left at least two naval planes, a dozen warships and the army transport Meigs still searching for the Clipper off the eastern Philippines where she disappeared Friday enroute here from Guam with 15 occupants.

More searchers joined in expressing belief the giant flying boat was destroyed and her occupants perished in a mystery disaster. Officials of Pan American Airways, operators of the 26-ton transpacific craft, clung to the hope she yet would be found.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER
By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

PREPARE THE GROUND

WHENEVER there is a "double major tenace" in your holdings—that is an ace-queen-ten—you should prepare the ground if possible before taking the first finesse. If you are able to eliminate all other suits except trumps from both the dummy and your closed hand, one-half of the double finesse is sure to work. After the first finesse loses, the defender must lead into your remaining tenace or else lead a suit which gives you a ruff in one hand and a discard in the other.

	♠ A ♥ A K Q J 8 4 ♦ A Q 9 ♣ A K Q

(Dealer: South. Neither side vulnerable.)

This deal arose in a rubber game and the South player started off with a 2-Heart bid. West overcalled this with 2-Spades and North and East passed. After 3-Hearts by South, North went to 4-Hearts and South contracted for 6-Hearts.

Declarer won the first trick with the spade A and cashed the A and K of hearts. He then went to dummy with the heart 4 to the 5 and finessed the 9 of diamonds which lost to West's J. West returned a club to South's Q. The heart 8 was next played and taken with the 10 in dummy for a second finesse. When this failed, South considered himself most unfortunate that both finesses failed. The kibitzers pointed out to him that the simple expedient of cashing his three high clubs before attempting a diamond finesse would have saved the day.

After the clubs K and Q were cashed and followed by a third club, how should South play to make his contract of 4-Hearts?

He already had dismantled his plane and sent it back to the United States.

Sunday Laws' Queer Quirks Bother Folks

LONDON, August 2 (CP).—Visitors to this country, staggered by provisions of the Sunday Trading Restriction Act, find company in distraught natives who say they cannot fathom them either.

A move has been launched with support of some parliamentarians to gain uniformity in interpretation of the Act. This followed issue by the Home Office of a 22-page memorandum explaining the law and exemptions.

J. F. E. Crowder, Conservative M.P for Finchley and member of a delegation which went to the Home Office to ask something be done about the situation, said it was alleged that in some places the Act was not enforced at all.

"A good many people who would like to close on Sunday find they have to remain open," he said, adding, "but shopkeepers who do open find they may sell at one counter and not at another."

Fine Distinctions

Anomalies in the Act include these:

A druggist may not sell razor blades on Sundays to persons who want to shave. However, he may sell them to men wishing to use them for cutting corns or lancing boils. They are then called surgical instruments.

Seed merchants may not sell fodder for horses or donkeys on Sundays but anyone else may.

Hungry persons may buy fish and chips on Sunday as long as he does not buy them from a fish and chips shop.

Bathers may buy bathing shoes on Sundays but not sand shoes.

Married housewives may buy green peas on Sunday—provided it is summer—but not canned peas. Canned peas are groceries which are banned.

A parent with a crying child may not buy him a tennis ball on Sunday to keep him quiet. He may buy the ball for a club, however.

Grocers who sell wares in their shops on Sunday may be fined. If they wheel groceries around in a barrow and deliver them they are outside the law's restrictions

Resorts Complain

Besides these provisions are others making sales legal at certain hours, illegal at other times. Some seaside resorts enjoy an immunity from the law during 18 Sundays a year.

T. E. Groves, Labor M.P. for Stratford, is drafting a bill which would make it possible for seaside restaurant owners to keep their staffs at work on Sundays and give them days off at other times of the week. As the Act stands employees may work only three Sundays a month. There are five Sundays in July and restaurateurs complain they will be staffless at the rush season unless they are helped.

Cavan Worm Raid Reported Declining

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAVAN, Aug. 2.—The monster invasion of worms in Mr. E. Moore's woods is on the decline; the worms have left in great numbers, leaving the woods completely stripped of leaves. There are still some on the ground and a great numbr of dead ones.

They have invaded other woods, but not in as great numbers.

It is stated that the invasion may not be bad next year, and may only be an epidemic this years, towards which the weather may have been a contributing factor.

Word from Ottawa was brought that any means for their destruction or prevention would have to be undertaken by the farmers.

Mexican Laborites May Lose Power

Apparent gains by Conservative elements in Mexico may be indications that Luis I. Rodriguez, LEFT, president head of the official party of the Mexican revolution, and his backer, RIGHT, Vincente Lombardo Toledano, chief of the C.T.M. (Mexican Federation of Labor), are losing their strong influence in government matters. First sign of this came when two high army officers were "purged" from the Labor party because they refused to withdraw their names from a manifesto declaring against Fascism and Communism and calling for a "democratic front." They were General Ramon F. Iturbe and Col. Bolivar Sierra, and Conservative elements are standing strongly behind them with the army well represented. The fact that the Mexican congress has scheduled a discussion of their cases indicates the lost ground of the Laborite-Extremists.

Buck Passing Now In Vogue

HOLLYWOOD, Aug. 2 — (CP). — The old army game of "passing the buck" is flourishing as at no other time in Hollywood, since the box office turnstiles have stopped clicking as furiously as they did a year ago.

The director is blaming the writer for the sag at the box office, the actor blames the director, they all blame the producer and the producer attaches the fault to anyone and everyone who walks into his office, not excepting the bookmaker for whom he sent.

Certain stock phrases have become accepted logic in trying to explain away the recession.

"Hollywood is trying to be too arty, forgetting that its bread comes from Keokuk and its butter from Peoria."

"Production costs have soared beyond reason—extravagance will not hoist a poor story."

And the man who bears the brunt of the criticism is the director. For it is he who is closest to the picture. He carries it through script, production, cutting and watches cost sheets and the final judgment. On him is heaped the greatest praise and the loudest insults.

And what does the director have to say? Ben Holmes, a director with 32 years of show business experience, believes that Hollywood is suffering from growing pains.

"Like an adolescent, the picture business has become vastly self-conscious," said Holmes. "Fundamentally, the industry is sound. People like motion pictures and they will go to them if we give them what they like and want.

"One trouble is that producers have lost confidence in stories. They are afraid of their own scripts.

"'The play's the thing'—it always has been. And generally the director finds that if the story is good, the players melt into their parts, production is smoother and faster and the producer saves money."

Holmes should know what he is talking about, for he was a writer long before he became a director.

OMEMEE

Miss Carrie McQuade returned to her home today after spending the past three weeks in Toronto.

Mrs. S. Ross and daughter Irene of Toronto were guests of Miss Mary Faulkner this week.

Mr. and Mrs. J. McCrea and son have returned to Toronto after spending their vacation at "Cap's Place."

Mrs. Cook, returned missionary from China, and sister, Miss Annie Thompson of Toronto are guests of Miss Llya Parsons.

Too Much Beating

FREDERICK, Md., Aug. 2—(AP)—Justice Emmert R. Bowlus suspended a six-month jail sentence for Mrs. Harry Perkins on condition she stop beating her husband.

"I'm geting tired of being beaten up and I'm asking you for protection," the husband, 59, testified. "The last trimming she gave me was with a tire lever and a pair of pliers."

Profit-Grabbers Nip Stock Jump

TORONTO, Aug. 2—(CP).—The Toronto stock market worked up a heavy head of trading steam in the last week but profit-taking grades checked the progress to higher price levels. Gold shares came through with an index gain of 2.37, base metals added .63 while the western oils and the industrials lost one to two points in the period.

Aggregate volume for the five full sessions of the week one the Toronto Exchange was 5,716,000 shares the heaviest turnover since the week ended March 18.

The week's outstanding feature was Preston East Dome. Trade in the issue reached 894,000 shares in three sessions and the price advance 62 cents, from 98 cents to $1.60. Yesterday's top price was $1.73. The reported discovery of an unusually rich block of ore on the 500-foot level of the mine was given credit for starting the buying rush.

Preston recently concluded a deal with Toronto financial houses for the raising of about $600,000 on a bond issue to finance mill construction but the proceeds of the issue have not yet been turned over to the Preston treasury.

Atlantic Air Service Nearer Following Hughes' Flight

Stimulate Nations That Are Planning On Sea Operations

NEW YORK, Aug. 2.—Howard R. Hughes' record-breaking round-the-world flight and the swift first leg of his journey—the hop from New York to Paris—emphatically point the question: how near is Atlantic passenger air travel? Speed characterized the Atlantic hop—18 hours 35 minutes for the voyage, or less than half the time of Lindbergh's epic flight in 1927. But it was not speed chiefly that counted; more significant was the facility with which the flight was made.

In his voyage from New York to Paris Hughes demonstrated effectively the technique of navigating a plane over long distances and across the ocean, which has developed rapidly since Lindbergh made his trip with comparatively simple instruments and no radio. The most important instrument which Lindbergh used was the earth inductor compass, a compass not subject to variations, but which has gone out of use since then. Hughes, on the other hand, had every possible radio facility for naviagation, by which he not only kept in constant touch with home stations and ships, obtaining weather information, but was able to get crossbearings in thick weather and chart his course with unfailing accuracy.

Navigation Improved

It is this new technical facility for expert naviagation which will make commercial transatlantic flying possible. There will be no guesswork in the coming passenger flights. The passengers will be able to relax in the knowledge that the naviagtor on the deck above them is aware constantly of his exact position.

For some time persons connected with the aviation industry have believed that regular transatlantic air passengers service was near, and with the fast, sure flight of Hughes and the survey plans of America, England, France and Germany now showing signs of fruition, even the traveler believes he will soon be going to Europe by plane. It is not at all unlikely that by 1940 regular transatlantic passenger service will be as much a routine as transpacific service has been for the last two years.

Last summer Pan-American and Imperial Airway ships, as well as German catapult planes, made survey flights to determine the best routes acros the North Atlantic, and to tst the radio instruments and homing beams, which will be used eventually. Both the American and British lines flew the northern route between Ireland and Long Island with a stop at Newfoundland. The American ships also made a round trip over the southern route, by way of Bermuda and the Azores to Lisbon, a route which the Germans also surveyed.

Survey Flights Coming

This year the Atlantic will be crossed by the survey planes of four countries, for the French have been grooming a large flying boat for this purpose. The British and American lines are cooperating in terminal and weather information service, but will use different types of planes.

Pan American now awaits the final testing of the giant Boeing 314, designed and built especially for transatlantic passenger service. A month ago the Boeing was test-hopped at Seattle, Wash., and five other similar ships are rapidly taking shape in the Seattle factory. Three-deck craft, with a seating capacity for forty to fifty persons and a crew of eight or nine for Atlantic service, the Clippers are monoplane flying boats. They are powered by four twin-row, radial Wright Cyclone engines of 1,500 horsepower each, and will cruise, engineers estimate, at about 150 miles an hour.

Before Fall, Pan American hopes to take the first one on a shake-down hop from this country to Europe, and before the year is out to have it carying mail on regular schedules. As soon as possible, after that, passenger service will be started. Twenty-one ocean- trained crews are now on the company payrolls and, although some of them gained experience flying the Pacific rather than the Atlantic, all are seasoned over-water flyers.

British Flying Boat

The British will try for transatlantic service flying boats and long-range land planes of the Albatross class. They now have under construction flying boats of about forty tons, in design much like the Silkorsky and Boeing flying boats, which are merely a development of the type used last season. The boats used for surveys in 1937 were merely large enough to hold the crews needed for ocean flights and the fuel to cover the ocean hop. Enlarging them gives the space necessary to provid a passenger payload.

Mailman Bickell

VANCOUVER, Aug. 2 (CP).—One of the first things J. P. Bickell did after landing in Vancauver Saturday from Carcross, Y.T., was to look for a mail box and deposit a half-dozen letters,including one official-looking envelope with the stamp of Royal Canadian Mounted Police upon it.

"I'm the Aklavik mail man," he explained with a grin. While in that nothern outpost with Premier Hepburn of Ontario and Bernard E. Smith of New York, he had agreed to carry back the mail for some of the inhabitants. His action saved considerable time in delivery.

July Wheat Drop Features Week

WINNIPEG, August 2—(CP).—Tumble by July wheat featured a comparatively quiet week on the Winnipeg market during the week ended Friday. The cash wheat option skidded to 92¾ cents, a loss of 8⅞ cents from the previous week.

Largely responsible for the plunge were reports of showers in Western Canada, general firmness at Liverpool and a lack of supoprt by traders wha stayed on the sidelines most of the week apparently awaiting release of the minimum wheat prices from Ottawa.

Quotations on wheat futures for the week ranged 8⅞-1¼ lower with October closing Friday at 77¼, November 76½ and December 75¾.

Canada ends the crop year Sunday with a wheat carryover tentatively placed at 26,000,000 bushels or lower. By official sources this is the lowest surplus since 1925. With the new crop almost ready and a keenly competitive export market in sight, because of the large surpluses in other countries, the low level in Canada will allow a new start in the disposal of any surplus arising out of the new crop.

The carry-over contrasts widely with the wheat supply of 1933 when the carryover reached 219,428,398 bushels. In 1934 and 1935 the carryover figures exceeded the 200,000,000 mark and the problem of disposal was national.

Dr. Manion Smiles For Hometowners

Hon. Dr. R. J. He is shown here, CENTRE, being greeted by Mayor C. M. Ross as Frank S. Williams, president of the Fort William branch of the Canadian Legion, looks on.

BAILIEBORO

Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Lang of Oshawa are guests of the former's parents.

Mrs. (Dr.) Mason of Toronto returned to her home on Friday after spending a few days visiting friends in the district.

Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Bateman and little daughter of Little Britain visited friends in the village during the past week.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Mins and Miss Helen Mins of Toronto are spending a fortnight's vacation at Barnard's cottage, Rice Lake.

Police Raid Is Pulled Wrong Place

Cottage Occupants Rudely Awakened As Doors Kicked In

The story of a stupendous blunder by police who combed this area in search of hold-up men who had robbed a bank near Ottawa, was learned here recently.

"Where did you get your information?" was the first question asked by George Pearson, 33 High street, one of the victims of the blunder. "Ill bet it wasnt from the police." It was not.

To have front and back doors of your house burst in suddenly early in the morning, to wake and find seven unshaven men milling about your rooms, and the barrels of seven guns trained on your head, and then to see one of your number handcuffed, is an experience not easily forgotten.

Pearson, a salesman, his wife, and two small children, together with four friends, were holidaying at a cottage on Lake Katchewanooka during the time search for the robbers was being conducted by provincial police. Unfortunately for them they had two cars of the same make as those being used by the hunted robbers and their party. Also there were four men in their party; they had a dog; one of the women with them was a blonde. In all this they resembled the missing bandits.

So police became convinced they were their quarry and they sprang a trap calculated to catch the entire party. Ten of them led by Inspector Mackay of Toronto crept up on the house about half past five one morning and waited for half an hour outside. Then suddenly seven of them burst in the doors, revolvers drawn. It was a fortunate thing for all concerned that the police were into the house and had all ocupants covered before they had a chance to struggle.

"What would you think if all of a sudden seven men, and some of them pretty tough-looking, broke into your house and waved guns in your face, and none of them were in uniform," asked Mr. Pearson. "Naturally we thought it was a hold-up. Only because they were so confused and startled did they not start to fight

Guelph Marksman Captures Medal

Long Branch Rifle Rangers, Long Branch, Aug. 3 (CP)—Capt. Jack Steele, sure-sighted Guelph marksman, was declared victor of a silver medal, feature award of the city of Hamilton match, after a shoot-off today at the annual meeting of the Ontario Rifle Association.

In the match proper Capt. Steele, Sergt. J. Freeborn of Hamilton and Sergt. Franck Ho Lem of Calgary tied for first place with possible scores of 35 points over 200-yards.

The trio went to the shooting mounds today to decide the holder of the medal in a shot-for-shot final. Sergt. Ho Lem was eliminated after five shots and Sergt. Freeborn went to the sidelines on the seventh shoot.

Corp. E. Klenavic of London, Ont., won the class C city of Hamilton award after a shoot-off with Cadet D. Killman of Hamilton. Corp. R. B. Laws of Brampton, who also tied for first place, did not enter the tie-breaker.

Aldermen Ask Check On Sunday Sales

So-called eating houses that sell sausages and hamburger steak by the pound, magazines, plug tobacco, and other goods contrary to the Lord's Day Act were aimed at by Alderman Gordon's resolution Tuesday night requesting the Police Commission to instruct the police department to investiagte sales of merchandise sold and removed from the premises of such places, and to prosecute all infractions of the Act which may be found after investigation by the city police.

Alderman Gordon said there were now ninety licensed eating houses, some of them carrying on business on Sundays that infringed on the legitimate business of other merchants who were compelled to close their stores on Sundays. He said he could name one place that sold hamburger steak and sausages by the pound, as as example of how the law was disregarded. In some other licensed places youths are permitted to congregate on Sundays; magazines sold, plug tobacco, boxes of cigars and so on, a condition which, he said, should be investigated by the police. The motion carried.

Inspector To Convention.

A. G. Metheral was authorized to attend the convention of the American Society of Sanitary Engineers in Cleveland this month, on a resolution by Alderman Stocker, who argued that the information Mr. Metheral would gain at teh essions would be of use to the city as a whole.

Alderman Bradburn brought up again the question of air vents from bathrooms into chimneys which he said was a fire hazard and should not be permitted. He advocated amendment to the building by-law

'Peg Senator Denies Bridge Snag

Replies To Hepburn Says Premier Withdrew Bill

WINNIPEG, Aug. 3.—(CP).—Senator J. T. Haig, K.C., of Winnipeg, to-day placed the responsibility for delay in constructing an International bridge on Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario.

In a statement at Gldbridge, B. C., last night Premier Hepburn said Senators Haig, A. D. McRae of Vancouver, and W. A. Griesbach of Edmonton had interfered to delay the bridge job when the Ontario government applied to parliament for permission to lauch the project.

"We never killed his bill," maintained Senator Haig. "He withdrew it."

When the International bridge was destroyed by an ice jam last winter, the Senator continued, the Ontario Government ruled a new one couldn't be constructed without the government's permission. Then Mr. Hepburn sought power from the Dominion to build.

Haig Explains

When the matter came before the Senate committee, Senator Haig said, the Ontario Government was asked what it planned to do in connection with the company which owned the destroyed bridge and had operated it for years and also was prepared to rebuild.

It was suggested some compensation be allowed this firm but Premier Hepburn, Senator Haig charged, apparently recalled the difficulties the government had with the same firm which also operated a radial railway and which the Ontario Government took over two or three years before. The premier then turned down the suggestions and withdrew the bill, Senator Haig said.

He explained that in connection with the radial railway the Ontario Government had offered $100,000 but the company wanted $300,000. The privy council finally awarded the company $1,000,000 plus costs.

"Mr. Hepburn was triyng to take out of the bridge crowd what the others took out of him," the Senator added.

He also said the Washington government had decided a bridge could be built only if the Canadian Government consented, and that New York State authorities had refused to approve the Hepburn proposition.

Dr. Collison, coroner, was also notified and visited the scene of the tragedy. It is understood an inquest will be held. The deceased was unmarried and is survived by his mother and four sisters.

Winnipeg, Edmonton, Vancouver Senators Named In Premier's Attack

GOLDBRIDGE, B.C., Aug. 3 (CP).—Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario was en route to Vancouver by motor car today, leaving behind him here a plea for handling of Canadian problems on a national basis, rather than on the basis of sectional interest.

In an interview last night, the Premier claimed "a group of Western Senators" and House of Commons members had brought about delay in the construction of the International Bridge at Niagara Falls, withdrawal of plans for export of 110,000 horsepower of electrical energy, and had attempted to hold up construction of an international bridge at Sarnia, Ont.

Asked for comment on the proposal to build an Alaskan highway from the United States, through British Columbia and the Yukon Territory, Mr. Hepburn said it would be "quite improper" for him to enter the discussion, as it was a subject to be settled "between the Premier of British Columbia and the Prime Minister of Canada."

"But I have a statement to make," he added.

"It did not make for national unity when a certain group of western Senators sought delay of construction of the International bridge at Niagara Falls, when the Province of Ontario and the State of of New York had negotiated a satisfactory agreement for immediate construction of a bridge which would cost $5,500,000 and would furnish much-needed employment.

Names Three Senators.

"As the result of the interference of Senators J. T. Haig of Winnipeg, A. D. McRae, Vancouver, and W. A. Griesbach of Edmonton, they held up this great project when it came before the Senate committee and a year must elapse before the Province of Ontario again seeks authority from Ottawa for construction of the bridge.

"In the case of export of power from Ontario," he continued, "western members of the House of Commons had been responsible for withdrawal of plans that would have meant $2,000,000 additional revenue annually to the Province of Ontario.

"They had no interest in the question and might well have left discussion of it to representatives from Ontario. This additional revenue would have allowed the Hydro-Elec-

Sidley Reveals Autopsy Ordered By Him

TORONTO, August 3 — (CP). — William Horlick Sidley, only son of the late Mrs. Mabelle Horlick Sidley of Racine, Wis., said in an affidavit made public to-day that before his mother's death here July 6 he discussed with Coroner Dr. Smirle Lawson "the question of an autopsy" on her body. After her death he "gave instructions that an autopsy be performed."

Mr. Sidley emphasized in his affidavit, the 10th filed by the Crown preliminary to the hearing of a motion for an injunction to prohibit an inquest into his mother's death, that "at no time" did he consult Dr. Lawson in any capacity other than that of his position as chief coroner."

Warm Spell Here Till Friday Says Forecaster

TORONTO, Aug. 3 (CP)—"Fair and decidedly warm today and Thursday," the weatherman forecasted today for Ontario, "but we expect it will turn somewhat cooler Friday."

The forecaster expected "local" thunderstorms throughout Ontario. "It's hard to say when or where they will break," he added.

"The weather has been warm from Manitoba eastward to the Maritimes and decidedly warm in southern Ontario, but comparatively cool in Alberta and Saskatchewan," he said.

Moosonee, in James Bay district, was the coolest place in Ontario yesterday with a temperature of 72. All other Ontario centres reported temperatures of 84 to 88.

London, Toronto, Moncton, Brandon and Sault Ste. Marie all reported temperatures yesterday of 86 or more, while Miami, Florida, was only 84, the same temperature as Winnipeg and Kenora. The coolest place in Canada yesterday was Aklavik, N.W.T. Its highest yesterday was 42, during the night it went down to 34 and at 8 a.m. today it was 36.

Hail Rips Roofs.

STURGEON FALLS, Ont., Aug. 3. —(CP).—Even the old timers admitted to-day they never had seen anything to equal the hail and thunder storms which swept this Northern Ontario town and district during the past two days. The hail stones were so big, and came down so hard holes were torn in the roofs of many buildings.

Sections of gravel streets were washed out by the storms, which started Sunday and continued unabated through Monday. Power lines were damaged, trees were stripped of branches and foliage, offices were flooded when sewers failed to carry away excess water. Store floors and basements suffered similar damage.

Water cascaded through holes torn in the roofs of business establishments, damaging stock. One printing plant was forced to suspend business until machinery dried out. Farmers reaching town today said acres of their land were awash with inches of water.

Runciman Arrives At Czech Capital

PRAHA, Czechoslovakia, Aug. 3. —(AP).—Viscount Runciman, unofficial adviser and mediator in the Sudeten German problem, arrived to-day to "try to do something about Czechoslovakia" and was greeted by Praha's mayor, Peter Zenzel, and the British minister, Basil Newton.

Since it has been emphasized Lord Runciman's visit is entirely unofficial, President Eduard Benes and Foreign Minister Milan Hodza took no official notice of his arrival.

He went immediately to the British mission's room at the Alcron hotel, declaring he was ready to begin at once his role as sympathetic observer in the minorities problem.

Russo-Jap Battle Eases Off With Each Claiming Their Territory Invaded

Russian Bombings In Korea Denied; Moscow Sees Further Fighting Inevitable With Existing Conditions

LONDON, Aug. 3 (CP).—Russia sought today to place on Japan's shoulders responsibility for further conflict along the Siberian border as hostilities were carried into the fifth day.

Reporting fighting had ceased at 10 a.m., the Japanese claimed the Russian forces had retreated 1,500 yards. Moscow, naming Japan the aggressor, declared the enemy had been "subjected to artillery fire and air bombing" while crossing "into Soviet territory."

Reports Russian planes had bombed Japanese Korea, including a bridge near Seoul, the capital, were denied both in Moscow and Tokyo. The Japanese government ordered a partial "black-out" for Tokyo, Yokohama, and all of central, western and southern Japan as an air raid precaution. It will be effective nightly until further notice.

See More Fighting

MOSCOW, Aug. 3.— (AP).— A Russian communique declared today that under existing conditions of the conflict with Japan along the Siberian border "further continuation of hostilities, fraught with extremely serious consequences, is regarded inevitable."

The communique, as quoted by Tass (official Russian news agency), coupled this prediction with a statement that "since the very beginning of the conflict the Soviet government has declared that it intends only to defend territory indisputably belonging t othe Soviet Union."

A Second Protest

The Japanese government sent its second protest in 24 hours to Moscow and announced it hoped to localize the trouble and settle it by diplomatic steps.

Tokyo reports that six Soviet Russian divisions were thrown into the battle for Changkufeng Hill indicates possibly 150,000 or more men were engaged in the border conflict.

United States war department information is a Russian division numbers about 14,000 officers and men, so that six divisions would represent 84,000 or more. Presumably a comparable number of Japanese faced the Russians in the disputed area.

"Now Or Never"

Those who held that second conflict had begun in the Orient argued that Russia believed Japan was near financial exhaustion and a "now or never moment" had arrived to fight a preventive war to forestall attack by Japan in the future. They contended also that Russia was fearful China would collapse should the Japanese capture Hankow and sever the Canton-Hankow railway, a Chinese munitions artery.

Some observers believed the Russian strategy might be based on an expectation the Siberian situation could be kept within the bounds of a miniature war, without serious danger to the Soviet nation.

Some Japaneses believed the border trouble was merely a Russian effort to delay troop movements to aid the Japanese offensive in China against Hankow, the provisional capital of General Chiank Kai-Shek's government, or possibly to cloak internal difficulties.

Blind Girl Asks King Lift Ban On Her Dog

LONDON, Aug. 3—(AP)—Hazel Hurst, 22-year-old blind American, appealed to King George today to waive quarantine restrictions which prevent her from taking her Alsatian dog guide into England.

She rejected the offer of a one-eyed man to have his eye transferred to her by surgical means. She also refused the offer of a British guide dog.

The Oneonta, N. Y., girl wired the King after James A. Wallace, aged 37, wrote her:

"I pray you to forgive me for writing and will in no way be offended if I offer you my right eye if it could be transferred to you by an optical surgeon."

Miss Hurst, who announced she was returning to the United States Friday if the dog is not allowed to land with her, said "it was very kind of him but I shall not accept."

The blind girl telegraphed the King; "making my last appeal to your Majesty to permit me and my 'seeing eye' to enter your country. My dog is my eyes. I know you can help me."

Refuses English Dog

Lilian Shrimpton, secretary of the guide dogs for the Blind Association, said Miss Hurst "regretfully declined" to accept a British canine guide.

The argument was advanced meanwhile that the British law provides that quarantine regulations could be relaxed on Miss Hurst's behalf.

"What seems to have escaped attention is that the law regarding the importation of dogs provides for quarantine except in the case of performing dogs, exhibition and breeding dogs or dogs imported for other special purposes," the News Chronicle declared.

"Could not guidance of the blind be considered as a special purpose?" The newspaper asked.

The Agriculture Ministry said the animal could enter only after the customary six months' quarantine had established its health.

Hidden Schultz Millions To Keep Gang's Lawyer

NEW YORK, Aug. 3 (AP).—District Attorney Thomas Dewey was said by the New York World Telegram today to have learned that a huge sum of money—estimated at from $1,000,000 to 3,000,000—was hidden away by the late Arthur (Dutch Schultz) Flengenheimer and that J. Richard (Dixie) Davis was the only person who knew the hiding place.

Davis, who has pleaded guilty to policy racket charges and is scheduled to be the principal witness against James J. Hines, Tammany district leader accused of "fronting" for the racket, was said by the newspapers to be slated for a grand jury appearance within the next few days.

"Davis is believed to have denied he knows of any such hidden funds," the World Telegram says, "but some of those connected with the present inquiry are of the opinion Davis is counting on this money to keep him in lush circumstances after he has served whatever sentence is imposed on him as a result of his part in the racket."

U.S. Push Alaskan Road To Link Planned Air Base

WASHINGTON, Aug. 3 (AP).—An aerial trip to Alaska by Louis Johnson, assistant United States secretary of war, provided a hint today the administration was considering development of a great army air base in the far north.

Johnson said he would leave about Aug. 15 to inspect army posts and projects in Alaska, and at the same time would study the feasibility of both the base and of a projected all-weather road from the United States northwest through Canada to Alaska.

Such a highway, in addition to drawing tourists, might prove vital in rushing men and munitions to Alaska in time of war. Such a project has been favored strongly by Premier Pattullo of British Columbia.

The United States congress authorized the air base in the 1936 Wilcox Act, providing for frontier aerial defences such as one already started at Tacoma, Wash. The navy has projected a $5,000,000 base at Kodiak, Alaska, and less establishments at Sitka, Alaska, and Dutch Harbor, in the Aleutians, but the army has no action.

Two Snags, Fog and Japan

One objection to construction of an army air base is an administration desire to avoid arousing Japan's concern. Another was the prevalence of fog, making flying hazardous.

The first objection was removed to some degree by Japan's refusal to

Regina Aug. 3 (CP)

A WARNING to unemployed in other provinces that there was no work to be expected in Saskatchewan, as there was more than sufficient labor to take care of the harvest, was made today by Hon. T. C. Davis, Acting Minister of Municipal Affairs.

There are more than sufficient unemployed persons in Saskatchewan permanently domiciled here than will be necessary to take care of all the harvest labor requirements," he said.

"It is useless for men to come here from other provinces with the hope and expectation of obtaining employment in the harvest fields."

Claim Moscow Hoping For Mediation

MOSCOW, Aug. 3 (AP)—A Russian communique asserted today that "serious consequences" would be unavoidable if Japanese "provocations" continued on the Siberian frontier, but, nevertheless, there were apparent indications of Moscow's wish to reach a peaceful settlement.

Official quarters discouraged any predictions of a major war, and one newspaper which reliably reflects official opinion recalled that the Soviet government already had indicated a willingness to negotiate a new demarcation of the frontier with Japanese-advised Manchoukuo and Japanese Korea.

Soviet workers, however, in strongly phrased resolutions demanded resistance to aggression. Pravda, the Communist newspaper, printed two pages of them today, with an editorial that "if war is imposed on us by the rapacious Fascist wolves, the whole Soviet people will rise as one man in defence of the fatherland."

The workers' resolutions requested the government to administer "a most resolute repulse" and to let the Japanese general staff "learn what it means to poke their swinish snouts into our Soviet garden."

Although the nation thus gave free rein to patriotic indignation, it appeared significant that Pravada's editorial started with "if" war results, apparently meaning that Moscow still sees the possibilities of confining hostilities to the frontier.

The Sore Spot

Both Russian and Japan claim Changukfeng where heavy frontier fighting has been going on since Sunday.

Soviet Russia fortified the Changkufeng area on July 11, and Japan protested that this was an invasion of Manchoukuo. Russia rejected the protest and avowed its determination to resist efforts by Japanese to reclaim the area, since in Russian eyes it was Russian.

While these admittedly were dangerous elements in the situation, some foreign observers here saw possibilities now of a face-saving solution.

Japan, these observers point out, has made good her warning to force to protect what she considers her territory; and, on the other hand, the Russians demonstrated their determination not to tolerate that armed force.

Unless Tokyo should insist upon provoking a general conflict, it appeared here that there was a chance of returning to previous plans for putting the boundary dispute into

TORONTO, Aug. 3.—Plainclothesman William Bolton and Arthur Keay got a smile last night while they were watching parked cars on Bay street for auto thieves.

Getting out of their own car, they crossed the street. In a few minutes an old chap about 60 years of age shuffled up to the car and tried on Keay's hat. The hat was a good hat, but it didn't fit. With a look of disgust he heaved it back into the police car. The policeman laughed, particularly Bolton, and then they saw him try the handles of another car. They decided to keep count, and claim to have tabbed him trying the handles of forty-five cars before he found one that would yield to his touch. At Victoria and Yonge streets they saw him pick up a parcel of bed sheets. It was bed sheets that got him down. The man, who gave his name as Joseph Bennett, 60, no home, was lodged at the West Dundas Street Station on a charge of theft.

Italian Schools Shut To All Foreign Jews

ROME, Aug. 3 (AP)—The government announced today all foreign Jews would be barred from Italian schools beginning with the fall term.

A communique issued by the government said:—

"Beginning with the scholastic year 1938-1939 the admission of foreign Hebrew students, including those residing in Italy, to all Italian schools of all grades is prohibited."

At the same time it announced a new program to increase the efficiency of the nation's armed forces. A communique said:—

"At recent meetings held by Il Duce with the minister of finance and the chief of general staff of war and air a further program to increase the efficiency of our armed forces was concluded.

It gave no other details.

The ban on Jewish students presumbaly does not apply to the 47,000 Jews who are Italian citizens.

The Fascist race doctrine issued July 14 by a group of Fascist professors proclaimed Italians were an Aryan race and denied Jews were members of "the Italian race."

There has been no move, however, to exclude them from Italian citizenship.

Think African Find Real "Missing" Link

PRETORIA, South Africa, Aug. 3.—(CP Reuters)—"Australopithecus Transvaalensis," the ape-man whose remains were recently discovered by Dr. Robert Broom in Sterkfonte in caves, is the genuine "missing link" in the opinion of Professor W. K. Gregory, American Anatomist, who has come to South Africa to study it.

"The expression 'missing link' is an inaccurate one today, because Dr. Broom has found it—it is no longer missing," said Professor Gregory.

"I can definitely say this form of Australopithecus combines individual features previously known in both apes and men.

"It may turn out to be a complete man on the one hand or a complete ape on the other. Still, it shows a combination of features which we have in the past ordinarily associated with two distinct types."

Junior Netter Wins In First

The coast youngster, whose game has caught the eye of Mercer Beasley, famed United States coach, soon detected a weakness in Bennett's backhand and ran out the second match quickly. His only lapses were in running to the net after laying the ball to his opponents forehand—Bennett made several passing shots as a result.

"He has all the strokes ,but he'll have to use better judgment than that," remarked Beasley, looking on from the clubhouse.

Another seeded westerner, Wilmer Wilson of Saskatoon, Sask., progressed with a little more difficulty, losing a set to George Young of Port Colborne, Ont., before winning out 6-0, 4-6, 6-3, in the same class.

Ruth and Claire Renshaw, seeded in junior women's singles, were easy winners. Ruth defeated Nora Mulholland of Toronto 6-3, 6-1, and Claire eliminated Jean Moxley of Hamilton 6-1, 6-0.

Harold Ickes, secretary of the interior, now en route to Alaska, said before leaving he hoped the way could be cleared shortly for construction of the Seattle-Fairbanks road. Some 2,200 miles long, it would permit commercial and tourist travel across British Columbia and the Yukon territory. It would tie in with the inter-American highway being extended southward, and eventually with South America's projected pan-American system.

The cost of completing a road to Alaska has been figured at $12,000,000 to $20,000,000. The major difficulty is that most of the burden would fall on British Columbia. Premier Pattullo has been negotiating for possible assistance.

Live Topic In B.C.

VANCOUVER, Aug. 3. — (CP). — Announcement at Washington the projected Seattle-Fairbanks highway would be studied shortly by Louis Johnson, assistant secretary for war, was greeted with interest here today where the scheme has long been a live topic of speculation.

When Johnson flies from Seattle to Fairbanks in mid-August, he will cross much of the untouched British Columbia territory through which the road would run. The northernmost point in the province's present highway system is Hazelton, from which it is estimated 1,100 miles of road would be needed to bridge the gap to Fairbanks.

After a recent conference in Washington with United States officials known to be sympathetic to the project, Premier T. D. Pattullo of British Columbia said here it would mean expenditures of $5,000,000 annually for five years.

A stumbling-block in the path of the construction has been British Columbia's inability to bear the cost, but Mr. Pattullo has suggested the province's share might be financed by a $15,000,000 loan from the United States.

3 Inches Of Hail Batter Alberta Crops

REGINA, Aug. 3.— (CP).—Hail which piled up three inches deep on level land battered crops in a wide territory south of Melville to north of the Canadian Pacific Railway main line causing damage running into thousands of dollars.

Loss in the Neudorf district was put by farmers at close to $100,000, when crops and gardens were hailed out and chickens killed, but the same storm which brought hail in one district meant heavy showers in a wide central area extending from west of Regina to Wolseley and as far south as Weyburn, and as far north as Southey.

Though neighboring farms were struck by the hail storm the farm of Hon. J. G. Gardiner, Federal Minister of Agriculture, at Lemberg, escaped damage as far as could be ascertained last night.

At Neudorf hail piled up three inches deep on the level in a storm which swept an area seven miles wide from Lemberg to Killaly and south of Melville.

Fifty farmers in the Neudorf district had part or all of their crop and gardens hailed out.

On the farm of Fred Mohr, 65 chickens were killed by the stones and telephone lines in some areas were put out of order.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, August 3 — (CP). — Winnipeg wheat futures advanced more than a cent to-day due to higher Liverpool prices and political tension in the Far East. Final values were ⅝ to 1 higher, October 76¾, November 76, December 75⅛ and May 77¾ cents.

The initial buying flurry, mostly nervous covering, followed reports of warfare between Japan and Russia along the Siberian border. Later dealings came almost to a standstill as Winnipeg brokers awaited the Canadian Wheat Board minimum wheat price announcement, expected tomorrow.

Canadian export sales of 250,000 bushels, favorable intermarket spreading, and comparatively firm cash wheat prices offset any bearish influence caused by beneficial rains in Western Canada overnight.

While No One Can Condone a Philanderer, Often It Is Better To Retain The Security of a Good Home and Safety of Children Rather Than to Rush Into a Divorce Court

THE problem that troubles more middle-aged women than anything else is whether they shall divorce philandering husbands or forgive and forget. When a wife finds out that her husband is faithless fo her, her first impulse is to rush hot-foot to the divorce court. She is humiliated by the slight he puts upon her by preferring other women and putting her in the position of being either pitied or laughed at by their little world. She writhes under injustice of his having taken her youth and beauty, all the best years of her life; of having profited by her labor and thrift, and then throwing her aside more callously than he would turn out an old work horse whose usefulness was ended. Her heart is torn by a thousand jealousies of a younger and fairer woman.

In her rage and despair there seems nothing for her but to break up her home and go as far as possible from her disloyal husband. Away from him she thinks that she will, at least, be able to find peace and somehow build her life over again.

Acting upon this theory that divorce is the only remedy for a wandering husband, thousands upon thousands of women break up their homes only to discover that divorce is not the cure-all for domestic unhappiness that they thought it was, and that often a poor husband, or even a half-time husband, is better than no husband at all.

Of course, when a man really falls in love with another woman and wants his freedom so he can marry her, there is nothing that his wife can do in decency but divorce him. When a man has really ceased to love his wife; when he is tired of her and she has come to bore him to extinction; when a couple are mismated and the man meets up with some woman who is his spiritual affinity and who can give him everything that he has longed for and which his wife could not give him because it was not in her to understand his needs, the case is hopeless as far as she is concerned.

He will never come back to her. There is nothing she can do or leave undone that will kindle the flame of love again in his breast, and if she persists in holding him by appeals to his conscience or by the might of the law, she only brings down further wretchedness upon them both. To keep a man's body tied to one after his heart is gone is as loathsome as to chain oneself to a clammy corpse.

But the great majority of philandering husbands do not do their sidestepping in a serious way. They don't want their wives to divorce them. They don't want their homes broken up. They don't want to marry the women they are flirting with.

They are utterly incapable of a great and lasting passion, but whatever affection their shallow little souls hold is given to their wives. They really admire and respect the women they are false to more than any other woman in the world. Often they are devoted fathers. They are fond of their homes, even if they don't stay in them much. They are good providers, pleasant and agreeable to live with.

Granted that a woman who has one of these playboy husbands has just cause for resentment against him, still ninety-nine times out of a hundred she is better off if she forgives and forgets than she is if she brings him to book for his sins. For if she divorces him she but adds to her troubles, and loses her home and her comfortable living in addition to losing her husband.

Many a woman finds out to her chagrin that her decree absolute has not restored her to her girlhood, nor made her young and beautiful and full of allure to men, as she had somehow doped herself into thinking it would. It has only left her a middle-aged woman with the necessity of going out into the world to support a household of children, and with no more chance of getting married again than she has of being elected President.

Moreover, after we are 40 there are a lot of things that are quite as necessary to a woman's happiness as romantic love. A pretty house, lovely clothes, a good car, being able to maintain one's place in a pleasant social set, freedom from worry about bills, the ability to give one's children the advantages they should have and to get them started out well in the world. All of these are blessings which the philandering husband often bestows upon his wife, and while they may not make up to her for not having a monopoly on his love-making, they are, at least, consolation prizes that she is foolish to throw away.

And, in any case, the passionate love of youth settles down into a sort of glorified friendship by the time people reach their forties. This the woman who shuts her eyes to her husband's peccadilloes may always have, and it is a lot warmer garment in which to wrap herself than the thin and sleazy cloak she can fashion out of her wrongs.

This is not a justification of the philanderer, who is a poor enough creature, heaven knows. It is only a plea to their unlucky wives to count the cost before they take their troubles to the divorce mill.

JUST BETWEEN US WOMEN

Come with a little, or come with a lot,
We'll give you a welcome whichever you've got.
We will show you the places we think have renown,
And take you to spots you never have known.
We will wine you and dine you and love you so much,
If you'll just come and visit us. Then we will touch
On the days that are gone, for we must talk of these,
Before we shall feel completely at ease.
So, come on a visit, we're waiting for you,
And, if you can't make the grade, we shall sure see you through.

Dear Friends:

Some more rhyming thoughts which my sisters sent me before we went to visit them again in New York. And so we set out one morning recently, and it rained and rained, and kept on the whole blessed way.

But we were not downhearted with such a welcome waiting for us at the end of the trip. We also made better time, knowing the route, and, getting to the place where we stayed last year hours earlier, we decided to push on. It was supposed to be one hundred and fifty miles more, but we found it was two hundred and fifty, so we arrived there at 1.30 a.m. more dead than alive.

Then the fun began, and we decided that the younger ones could not "take it" like older ones, for my daughter went straight to bed, but we stayed up until the crack of dawn.

We saw Waterfalls, (next day) the George Washington bridge for which you pay fifty cents to cross. Sundays, we went up the Storm-king mountains, having a magnificent view down the Palisades to the Hudson River.

We kept on until we came to West Point, N.J., and were fortunate enough to see the parade at sundown, when they lower the flag. It was one of the most impressive sights I have ever seen. First the whole band comes out and parades over the grounds.

Then the cadets or whatever you call them, come out in squads all one size, in their white summer uniforms, even to white gloves. They parade in formation, each one in perfect step like wooden soldiers.

When all of them have done their stuff, they are all in one long line facing the stand where the notables are. Then there are maneouvres with the small pennant like flags they carry for each platoon, and finally a gun booms out and the lag is lowered, while the band plays the National Anthem.

All this takes place in the most marvellous setting of a large grassy plateau surrounded by hills on each side. The men who are in training there are all sons of very wealthy parents, millionaires and such.

The "Plebes" are not allowed out of the grounds for one whole year after admittance These are the men who are trained for the military, and at Annapolis they are trained for the navy.

There must have been about twenty-five thousand people there that day, and I would not have missed it for the world. We waited in line for one hour and a half before we could get out of the grounds, and returned home weary and tired, but full of enthusiasm because we had seen this.

Some time later I shall tell you of all the funny things we experienced that day, which will give us something to laugh about for years to come. And I shall also try to remember the notable parts of our trip, so that you can share them with us. Last year I had so many letters asking for more travel articles, so I have stored up many things to tell you. Au revoir.

Your Friend,
ROBERTA.

The Rules Of The Water

A resident of a summer resort near Lindsay has been in to see the editor of The Post with a complaint and after reading it over we are sure there are many folk at lake and river resorts close to Peterborough who could drop into this office with a similar protest.

This man had been watching motorboats tearing up and down Sturgeon Lake, close to the shore, and by their swells causing danger and inconvenience to bathers and to people in small craft and he had been wondering if something could not be done about it.

Now he has discovered there is a regulation, about which he knew nothing before—and we must confess that we were in the same category. It is to the effect that not only must a motor craft avoid running down or colliding with a rowboat, canoe or similar craft but that in approaching or passing the latter it must slow down so as not to cause an accident through swamping. Owners of motor craft are liable in that case just as if there had been an actual collision.

That is a rule that is not very well known and the Post has dug up some more that observation convinces us are more or less generally ignored on district waters, despite the danger that is involved in a failure to observe these precautions. Here they are:

All motor boats shall, in all weathers from sunset to sunrise, carry the following lights, during which time no other lights which may be taken for those prescribed shall be exhibition.

(a) Every boat less than twenty-six feet in length shall carry a white light aft to show all around the horizon and a combined lantern in the fore part of the vessel and lower than the white light aft showing green to starboard and red to port, so fixed as to throw the light from right ahead to two points above the beam on their respective sides.

(b) Every other boat over twenty-six feet in length shall carry (1) a bright white light in the fore part of the vessel as near the stem as practicable; (2) a white light aft to show all around the horizon; (3) on the starboard side a green light and on the port side a red light.

Every motorboat shall be provided with a whistle or other sound producing mechanical appliance capable of producing a blast of two seconds or more in duration.

Every boat larger than twenty-six feet in length shall carry an efficient fog horn and shall be provided with an efficient bell.

Two boats meeting should pass to the right, leaving each other on the left or port side.

If two boats are converging toward each other, the one having the other on the starboard (right) hand must give way.

Rowing boats under oars, or canoes, shall have ready at hand a lantern showing a white light which shall be temporarily exhibited in sufficient time to prevent collision.

Now It Can Be Told

Some readers of The Examiner who might have heard a little about police activity in the neighborhood of Selwyn recently and wondered why they failed to read anything at the time in this paper about the affair, doubtless realize now why there was no story. There are times when all newspapers fail to live up to the slogan "All the news, all the time" and this was one occasion when The Examiner, in the interest of the protection of the public and the administration of justice declined to publish a news item because in publicity would have impeded the work of the police and facilitated the escape of an alleged band of criminals.

This paper knew that the suspects were in this district, and also knew that the persons being sought by the police were ignorant of the fact that their identity had become known and that the authorities were hot on their trail. It would have made an interesting story at the time but unquestionably its appearance would have hampered the police and helped the fugitives make good their mistake and The Examiner was confident, under the circumstances, that it was best discharging its role as a community newspaper by refraining from printing any part of the information in its possession until the hunt had ended.

That stage has now been reached by the closing of the police net around a group of alleged criminals near Ottawa and The Examiner is glad to have been able to co-operate with the authorities in this desirable outcome to the affair.

Pasteurization

In view of the fact that cities and towns and villages in Ontario that have not already adopted bylaws requiring pasteurization of milk sold for human consumption will come under the provincial law on October 1, the absence at the present time of any concerted opposition to pasteurization is rather surprising. Possibly it is the case as the Woodstock Sentinel-Review puts it, that those who are opposed to the legislation have arrived at the stage that they think there is no use kicking about the matter now.

There is another rather remarkable thing about this pasteurization business and that is Ontario is, so far, the only province in Canada that has done very much about it. None of the other provincial governments has made pasteurization compulsory, and as a matter of fact few of the cities outside of this province have adopted pasteurization on a complete basis.

This is clearly shown in a survey recently conducted and summarized in the Canadian Public Health Journal by A. E. Berry of the Ontario Department of Health, which shows the following interesting results:

"In British Columbia and Alberta there are no cities having either complete or compulsory pasteurization.

"In Saskatchewan, the municipalities of North Battleford and Saskatoon have compulsory pasteurization.

"In Manitoba there are no municipalities having compulsory pasteurization but the data indicate that pasteurization is conducted in at least four municipalities.

"In Quebec four centres reported complete pasteurization and pasteurization is conducted in at least 29 other centres

"In New Brunswick the reports indicated that four centres have some pasteurization, the city of St. John having approximately 90 per cent. of the milk pasteurized.

A Kindly Motorist

The Examiner would like to pay a little tribute to an unknown motorist, the driver of a car with Ohio license markers, who drove down Water Street at 8 o'clock the other morning. He was bowling along at a fairly good clip, evidently in the hope of reaching the intersection of Hunter and Water Streets before the green light disappeared. All at once a frisky little black squirrel darted out into the road ahead of the car and at once the driver braked his machine and slowed it down to a mere crawl to avoid hitting the playful little animal. The squirrel became confused and instead of dashing for the safety of the sidewalk ran slowly down the street in front of the car. The motorist regulated the pace of the automobile accordingly and ran behind the little black fellow for nearly half a block before the squirrel decided to get out of the way.

By that time of course the driver found himself confronted by a red light at the corner, but that was a small thing in the face of the fact that his consideration for dumb animals had resulted in saving the life of a harmless little creature.

We have an idea that Ohio motorist is the kind of driver who will never get into an accident through lack of courtesy or consideration for others and we could well wish there were more like him on the highways. And before you hasten to assert that any motorist would have done the same to avoid hitting the squirrel, we would like to interject that there have been half a dozen black squirrels killed by cars on Water Street this year and that in several cases at least the driver made not the slightest effort to prevent his car from striking the helpless little victim.

A Word For Jenny

Jenny Kammersgaard, a Danish girl of 27 years, swam across the Baltic Sea, going from the southern tip of the Danish island of Falster to Niegenhagen, Germany, in 40 hours and 2 minutes. The distance in a straight line is 28 miles, but considering the manner in which current would sweep the swimmer about it is said she actually stroked 37 miles. Jenny Kammersgaard also encountered icy patches of water and in one place required nine hours to cover four miles.

That was a greater distance than that covered by Gertrude Ederle when she swam the English Channel on August 6, 1926, the straight distance there being 23 miles. She made faster time than the Danish girl but the difficulties were not nearly so great.

And yet there was no excitement. Papers appeared to pay little attention to Jenny and her swimming; there was no build-up for the event; newspapers were not getting out extras; there were no bulletins being posted. And yet Jenny kept on swimming in the Baltic, a cold and unfriendly place, for 40 hours, and was in good condition when she finished. We're inclined to believe Jenny the Danish girl deserved a little more recognition than she received.

What It Meant

To some folk, misled by some of the stories they have heard or by some of the things they have read in the newspapers, the huge Canadian Corps Reunion, just finished in Toronto, appears as nothing more than a whoopee party on a large scale, in which the principal features were an abundance of beer and an over-abundance of animal spirits, horseplay, and destruction of property, amid scenes of riotous enthusiasm.

To get the thing in its proper perspective it is necessary to look behind all the noise and froth and larking and to realiize what such a reunion means to the men who fought in France during those black years, 1914-18. It afforded them a rare chance to shake hands with and fraternize with comrades who, in those days of common sacrifice, experienced hardships and faced danger with them and who since the Armistice have scattered far and wide all over the Dominion. Nothing but a reunion planned on the scale on which the Toronto affair was carried out could have afforded an opportunity for the men of the Canadian army to get together again, meet their old officers and spend a few happy hours with stout fellows who in time of peril had been with them on the firing line.

And then too it should not be forgotten that the Canadian army played a very important part in the Great War in proportion to its numbers and that some of the finest fighting on the western front was done by the men who wore the maple leaf on their cap and shoulder badges. The fame they won in those years we do well to recall on such occasions as the reunion just ended and it is perhaps fortunate that such an affair was planned because it has given us a chance to refresh our memories and remember what these men did for Canada and the Empire in a time of dire danger.

NOTE AND COMMENT

No matter what Premier Hepburn does or goes he eventually lands on page one.

Smart young man went to court in Detroit and addressed the Judge as "Dad," but "Dad" was not given to much speech and all he said was "Thirty days."

Six members of one family in Corwen, Wales, are all receiving the old-age pension. Come to think of it we used to have a Family Compact problem in this country.

George Rutledge of Auburn, in Huron county, had been busy following the binder stooking the sheaves. Then he took a day off to attend a family picnic given in honor of his 95th birthday.

The Department of Highways has issued a warning pointing out to drivers that they can be killed as easily as anyone else and that they can also kill. It is well to keep both thoughts in mind.

Then there is that story of a man in Hamilton who was evicted from one relief house and then took up residence in a trailer. That does not indicate any improvement as a man in a trailer is generally running around.

The world may be getting better but we notice that when people lend spoons to the church social they still tie pieces of red string around the handles so they'll stand a fair chance of getting them back.

New York speaker urges that if there is to be equality between sexes then husbands should be entitled to receive alimony. Rats! Imagine any red-blooded man wanting to get his hay and oats that way.

Donald Chase, missing for two years from his home in Little Falls, N.Y., came home to claim a $200,000 portion of an estate. Money talks and its voice is sufficient to reach those who are afar off.

Brantford chief of police says the proper place for all revolvers is at the bottom of the ocean, and admittedly that would be a better place than in the bottom of the pocket in some thug's coat.

A Newmarket man was found guilty of being drunk while in charge of a horse and buggy. There was a time when a man in that condition did what a young man courting used to do—put the lines over the dashboard and let the horse attend to the rest of it.

Perhaps a man who becomes Speaker in a Legislature may come to believe he is prominent and well-known. H. F. D. Bridges resigned from that post in New Brunswick the other day and we have yet to meet the individual in this part of the country who was aware he had held such a position.

THE OLD COTTAGE

Yellowed by age, oak-beamed with great broad bands,
In a lone lane where green boughs intertwine,
In English might my ancient cottage stands.
Beyond its fence there hangs a sagging line
Of homely linen o'er the garden-plot.
Preening their snow-white plumes, the fantails sit
Atop brown tiles below the chimney-pot.
One look—and all my heart is lost to it!
The cooing choir now quits the lichened roof
With clap of wing. The cock with crinkled comb
Struts indoor with its dame. And I must home.
In deepening blue the church-spire dreams aloof.
Far off, as in the field-dusk I look back,
A silver puff steals from the chimney-stack.

Want Indians And Mounties

(By W. R. Colclough in the Stratford Beacon-Herald, writing from the Bruce Peninsula)

"SAY, MISTER," cooed the man from Carolina, "will you tell me where I can find some Indians—some REAL Indians?"

"Why, yes, there are; there are some about," we stammered.

"Is that so," he enthused. "Wait till I tell Harmony."

"Who's Harmony?" we queried.

"Harmony? That's my wife. Hey, Harmony. Come here!"

Harmony came, clutching a paper in her sun-burned hands. Hands where the finger nails had been pointed and polished to a razor edge and colored the flaming red of blood with all the blue out of it. Her bobbed, peroxide - bleached hair banded down with a blue ribbon which ran under her chin.

"What is it, Peter?" she murmured with wifely consideration and appropriation all in the same breath. Only she did not say Peter; she said "Petawh."

"This gentleman says there are Indians hereabouts," explained Peter, his cross-eye flashing at his wife although we felt he was looking at us.

"Really," excited Harmony, gazing at us with such intensity that we began to wonder if it wasn't going to be a case of mistaken identity, with the Indian already discovered.

"Sure," we breezed, gaining confidence, "out there in the Reservation. Dozens of 'em."

"Oh, Petawh," Harmony beamed, looking at her spouse. "We must go and see them. It will be something to talk about back home. Are they dangerous?" she concluded, looking at us.

"No, not exactly," we explained with considerable importance. "It is some years now since anybody was scalped. You see the Mounted Policemen...."

"Mounted policemen!" Harmony screamed, looking at Petawh. "Did you hear that Petawh? Mounted policemen. We'll see them too."

It was very evident we had made a terrible mistake. "Lady," we muttered humbly, "the government has taken the horses away. There are Indians, but no mounted policemen."

Harmony was disappointed but could not be denied. "Maybe there are wolves?" she prophesied. "We told the folks back home we would see Indians, wolves and the quintuplets. Are there any wolves out where the Indians live?"

We were glad she had turned to wolves. To us wolves formed a much safer subject than policemen.

"Sure, there are wolves," we continued. "Lots of 'em."

"Out where the Indians are?" she checked.

"Well now, you had better ask the Indians," we replied, feeling we were again slipping. Then came a great inspiration.

"After you have seen the Indians," we directed, "and go on to Sault Ste. Marie, hunt up Jim Curran, a newspaper man in the Sault. He will tell you all about wolves. He is the best wolf man in this country. In fact he is an authority on wolves. He can tell the age of a wolf by its howl any time. On the way up to the Sault you can see the Quints. This part of Ontario is only famous for its Indians. You'll find them over in the Reserve."

"Come on, Petawh," Harmony commanded, grabbing Petawh's hand and making a bee line for an automobile bearing an American license. "We must see those Indians right away, today."

Indians, Wolves, Quintuplets — Canada is far too modest!

BACK TO THE LAND.

(Timmins Daily Press)

HENRY FORD'S belief that the economic salvation of the world, and specially of the States is to get people back to the land presents some anamolies, as has been stated in these columns before. He gave the impetus to an era of industrialization and of high wages that did more to break people loose from their farm moorings than any other single factor. Between his idea of subsistence plot and the increasing mechanization of farm work seems to be rather a wide gap in thought.

Lord Beaverbrook is also obsessed by the idea that we should all get back to the land as speedily as possible.

And in the expansive manner adopted by those who have vast sums of money,—much of it with ridiculous ease—Lord Beaverbrook recently sought to lead the way back to the land in his own fashion.

THE NEW KNIGHT.

(Niagara Falls Review)

BARON Georg Franckenstein, used to be Austrian ambassador to the Court of St. James, but when the Nazis occupied Austria, he was out of a job. Recalled, he refused to return to Austria, preferring to remain in Britain, where he has become a British citizen. Not only has he become a British subject, but he has been knighted by the King and will now be known as Sir George (having picked up the British e) Franckenstein. Probably he would rather be a British knight than a Nazi baron. It may be he would rather be knighted in Britain than benighted in a German concentration camp, which might have happened had he decided to return home.

PAYING AS THEY GO.

(Sault Ste. Marie Star)

MORE and more the principle of municipalities' paying their way as they go, instead of piling up debt is coming into discussion, for the saving in interest is an important item in keeping down tax rates it is found.

Saut Ste. Marie, Mich., is an example of a community close to the Sault, which has cleared off its debt and which pays for expenditures on public works out of current revenue, or at worst issues onl yvery short term debentures

DEPRESSION AND RELIEF

Editor of Examiner.

Sir: If John and Mary, are greedy for all pleasure, and "no work." Depression will be the result. Oh yes, we can get on relief. Is this the highest ambition of your life, on earth?

Ask yourself, am I serving the Lord, or lucifer?

There are many causes for depression, but only one cure. If we only had the realism that God is, and has all power.

The wickedness that is in the world today spells depression.

"If a ruler harken to lies, all his servants are wicked."—Prov. 29, 12.

That your faith should not stand in the wisdom of men, but in the power of God.—I Corin. 2, 5.

There are some among us that become tied up from earning a livelihood by some unforeseen cause and no fault of their own. Such people are worthy of help or relief.

This class will tell us, that the world owes them a living. Where did they get this idea? It is not to be found in God's word. And as sin has come into the world God's word tells us man shall earn his bread by the sweat of his brow. People that do otherwise are creepers, crawlers and crutchers, or is he a sluggard.

"The fool hath said in his heart, there is no God. Corrupt are they, and have done abdominable iniquity: there are none that doeth good."—Psalm 53 and 1.

MEMORIAL FOUNDATION

Editor of Examiner:

Sir,—It is fitting that Oglethorpe University should announce a plan to establish as a part of the Hopper Peace Foundation, a King George V Memorial for the purpose of fostering the close relations which have existed between the British Empire and the United States for more than one hundred years; ties of historical import, not the least of which was the first colonization of the State of Georgia by General James Oglethorpe, near Savannah, Georgia. Present political unrest in the field of international relations makes it imperative that these harmonious relationships be intensified between the great English speaking democracies.

Towards this end, the King George V Memorial Foundation, which Oglethorpe University has announced, seeks ways and means to provide:

(1) Scholarships and Fellowships for Oglethorpe graduates in British Universities and for British students at Oglethorpe.

(2) The British Empire Library for books dealing with the history and culture of the British people, maps of various parts of the world over which the British flag flies, pictures and charts which illustrate ways of life, scenery, geographical and climatic factors of growth and development of the Empire.

(3) The British Empire Museum, for specimens of handicraft and factory productions, minerals, woods, zoological and biological materials, art and sculpture, etc.

(4) The Annual Awards to be made each year by the King George V Memorial Foundation to a Britisher and an American who have contributed the most during the preceding years in promoting closer relations between the British Empire and the United States.

The University is apealing to all Canadians to contribute one dollar (or its equivalent) each to support this movement.

HE SETS THE STORM-SIGNALS

To Editor of Examiner.

Sir: The president of a western university is setting the storm-signals for our high schools and universities. They are becoming mechanical he says and are neglecting the true inwardness of life for the means of living. Life is becoming a hollow shell. We are running amok. Private property is disappearing in public taxation. We are becoming Russianized. No God—nothing but the animal left.

• Hope Now For Heat Makers

(From the Sarnia Observer)

THE MAKERS of hats for men, whose business has suffered severely since the bare-head mania has prevailed, have reason for new hope. It has been discovered, according to some authorities on diseases of the scalp, that going hatless in summer, instead of promoting the health and growth of the hair, is a potent factor in producing baldness.

At a recent conference of specialists in scalp treatment, at Chicago, it was asserted that the hatless fad, instead of promoting luxuriant growth of the hair, as it was widely believed it would, had resulted in an increase of baldness and many scalp ailments caused by over-doses of destructive sun rays.

There are two kinds of rays from the sun to which the human body should not be exposed too liberally in summer. These are the ultra-violet and the infra-red, which have powerful properties during direct sunlight and can readily do damage to the tissues of the human body. In moderate doses these rays can be beneficial, but they can be dangerous when the exposure is unrestricted.

During the last ten or fifteen years, there has grown up a popular vogue for going bareheaded. It affected the hat trade seriously just as the stockingless fashion among women was a severe blow to the silk industry. But since it has been revealed that going without a hat in direct sunlight will not promote an extra growth of the hair and might easily do damage to it by fading and by producing brittleness, there is likely to be a change of sentiment toward the hatless fashion.

In general there is now a good deal of sentiment favorable to more moderate habits with regard to sun exposure. It is no longer as popular as it was, to invite a deep coat of tan all over the body by remaining exposed in direct summer sunlight. There is a trend to more moderate methods in this. The decision is that it is helpful to get a fair degree of tan but there ought not to be unrestricted exposure of the body, day after day. People are discovering more and more by experience that moderation in everything, food, drink, exercise, exposure to the sun or to other severe climatic manifestations, is a great help toward a normal existence.

• Public Screaming A Nuisance

(From the Montreal Star)

WE HAVE always thought that screaming, whether in public or in private, is pretty much of a nuisance. Now an amendment to the Criminal Code has come along to confirm that opinion and even to lay down that the public peace may legally be disturbed by screaming.

At first thought it seems that henceforth it is occasional screams that people will have to avoid if they intend to keep within the law. Screams of women coming upon mice, of children wanting ice cream, of girls and boys dancing to imaginary swing music—all those and many more we heartily agree should be smothered with the full weight of the law.

It was Mr. Woodsworth, leader of the C.C.F. Party, who dragged the House of Commons debate on the new provision down to another plane. He pointed out that at the end of the clause specifying various modes of disturbing the peace were the words, "or in any other way." That phrase, he thought, might be used to prevent such things as political meetings.

Mr. Lapointe assured Mr. Woodsworth that no attempt would be made to classify political gatherings as nuisances under the general clause. We are glad to know that political meetings are to be immune, since they are apparently necessary for the well-being of our politicians, and, anyway, people who find them a nuisance can stay away.

But we hope other speakers, orators, lecturers, talk-givers and others of the kind will take note of the new amendment to the Criminal Code. One of the great menaces to public peace and to private sanity in Canada has long been the nuisance of over-much public speaking. The voices of the after-lunch and after-dinner, morning, afternoon and evening speakers, may not always rise to a scream, but they are still often a nuisance. So we suggest they take care from now on, or their listeners may prosecute to the full extent of the law.

TRAFFIC AT THE BORDER.

(Bureau of Statistics)

USING the facilities of international bridge ferry and tunnel companies, a total of 7,474,049 motor vehicles crossed the Ontario-United States boundary in both directions in 1937 compared with 6,450,357 in 1936. A total of 2,247 bicycles and 209 horse-drawn vehicles also made crossings. The number of pedestrians and passenger, other than drivers of vehicles crossing to and from the United States was 21,182,120 compared with 19,251,915 in 1936, and was the highest since 1931 when the total was 26,126,757.

RELIEF IS NEEDED

(Brantford Expositor)

THERE MUST BE a radical revision of municipal taxation so that the levies on real estate will be equitable. The present situation is the result of the spending and borrowing orgy that prevailed for many years on the part of municipal councils. Henceforth councils must pursue a pay-as-you-go policy. Additional borrowing simply aggravates the present condition.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

The Lord hath brought forth our righteousness: come, and let us declare in Zion the work of the Lord our God....He hath made the earth by his power, he hath established the world by his wisdom, and hath stretched out the heaven by his understanding....Every man is brutish by his knowledge; every founder is confounded by the graven image; for his molten image is falsehood, and there is no breath in them. They are vanity, the work of errors; in the time of their visitation they shall perish.—Jer. li: 10, 15, 17, 18.

Beware of false prophets, which come to you in sheep's clothing but inwardly they are ravening wolves. Ye shall know them by their fruits. Do men gather grapes of thorns, or figs of thistles? Even so every good tree bringeth forth good fruit; but a corrupt tree bringeth forth evil fruit. A good tree cannot bring forth evil fruit, neither can a corrupt tree bring forth good fruit. Every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit is hewn down, and cast into the fire. Wherefore by their fruits ye shall know them.—Matt. vii: 15-20.

In the beginning was the Word, and the Word was with God, and the Word was God....All things were made by him; and without him was not any thing made that was made. —John i: 1, 3.

TOELESS SOCKS.

(New York World-Telegram)

WE DON'T KNOW about that new fashion we see advertised—toeless stockings to be worn with toeless summer sandals. Toes even the toes of lovely ladies even when the nails are painted red, are not, to our mind, the most beautiful things in the world.

But it interests us to find that we've been ahead of the style all these years without knowing it. Only we've been thankful that our shoes were not toeless, so that our toeless socks didn't expose our pinkies to the public gaze.

A Bit of Nonsense

NON-WORKER

The recruit squad was having "visual training." An officer asked a recruit how many men composed a party in a distant field.

The party was so far away that the men appeared as mere dots, but the recruit replied "Sixteen men and a sergeant."

"Right, but how do you know there is a sergeant?" asked the officer.

"He's not doing any digging, sir," was the reply.

"How?" asked the inspector.

"Why," went on the woman, "he was telling people the bus was full up, and when I got off he said, 'Room for three inside'."

TWO WORLDS

BY MAUD McCURDY WELCH

READ THIS FIRST:

Noel Shayne, wealthy society girl, is in love with Dr. Julian Paige, a serious-minded young physician, who declares he will not permit himself to fall in love with Noel because of the contrasting worlds in which they live. Determined to show Julian she has stamina, Noel gives up a long trip with her aunt, turns over her income of $100,000 to her uncle who is in financial difficulties, buys her first outfit of inexpensive clothes and tells Julian she is going to find a job. After moving to a dingy rooming house, she finds an ad for a governess. About to start on her new adventure, she finds her purse has been stolen, leaving her with only $4. Applying for the governess post, Noel is given a cool reception and no job. Later, dropping in at Julian's office, she is irked by the antagonistic manner of Ruth Chester, his pretty nurse. Finding nothing else, Noel takes a job as a taxi dancer, temporarily. She offers to share her room with Laurie Evans, a girl she met in the park. Laurie has just lost her job at the same dance hall. Then Noel runs into Julian.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

CHAPTER 6

AFTER JULIAN had discovered Noel as he came out of the Medical Arts building, they entered the De Luxe, a place for which Noel was beginning to have a real respect. She sat back and let Julian order, luxuriating in the white-tiled cleanliness of the place, the clatter of the spotless dishes and the savory odors of broiling steaks and good food.

Now and then she stole a glance at Julian's dark face, his clean-cut profile, and the slight suggestion of a dimple in his firm chin. It was wonderful to be sitting here beside him in this bright clean place. She closed her eyes on a little dizzying wave of happiness. Already she was beginning to understand some of the joy of simple things, and was conscious of a new appreciation and alertness of her senses.

Julian finished giving the waitress the order. Then he looked at Noel, a troubled expression on his face. "Noel, I've been thinking of you almost every minute since you convinced me that you actually intended going through with this reckless idea."

"How flattering!" she said lightly, beginning to apply herself to the green salad.

"Now, none of your flippancy," Julian reproved with mock severity. "The more I think of your idea of going to work, the more fantastic it seems," he continued. "I didn't believe your aunt would go off without you. I thought she would disapprove in no uncertain words."

"Frankie?" Noel looked up with a teasing smile. "She didn't try to dissuade me," she went on thinking affectionately of her aunt and hoping she was not being too bored in California alone.

"Listen, my child," Julian went on in his gentle admonitory voice, "it was Shakespeare, I think, who made the sage remark to the effect that 'the working-day world is full of briars' and that's the way you'll find it. No less. You'd better decide right here and now to join your aunt wherever she is."

"Couldn't think of it," Noel said smilingly, as she took a sip of what she was sure was the most delicious milk she had ever tasted. She hadn't tasted milk in ages, but Julian had insisted in his masterful way, had ordered it over her little protest, and here she was drinking it. "Really I'm having a perfectly grand time," Noel went on, her voice a little more boastful than she had intended it to be.

"All right then," Julian suddenly capitulated 'But I insist on having a full and complete report of what you're doing, and what you're expecting to do."

Noel hadn't expected this. She pretended to be engrossed in her salad, while she thought over how she would answer him. She wouldn't dare tell him that the only place she had at present was that of a taxi dancer in a cheap club. He would immediately find a dozen objections. In fact, he was quite capable of packing her off to Frankie before she could realize he was doing it. Julian had a way of getting things done. She had already found that out.

Finally she said with a smile, still not looking up from her salad, "You'll be glad to hear that I'm in line for a—a really nice place. I think I'll get it tomorrow."

"Tell me about it," Julian relaxed and smiled.

At this juncture Noel became very interested in her lamb chop. It was her nature to be frank on all occasions, but she thought the situation she faced now would justify a bit of equivocation. After all, she didn't intend staying at the Peacock a minute longer than she had to.

"You see, it's this way, the job I'm expecting—hoping to get....is that of a kind of nursery governess. I think I could hold down a place like that. But I haven't—that is, I don't know yet whether I'll get a place like this or not. It's what I'm looking for."

Julian's expression cleared entirely. "That's very sensible, Noel. You'd be protected in a place like that."

Noel lifted her eyes then and said demurely, "Is it because you feel a sense of responsibility toward me, or are you really interested in my—career?"

Julian smiled teasingly. "Purely a sense of responsibility, my dear. After all, I'm the cause, unwittingly, of course, of your getting such ideas into your head."

"So that's the only reason, is it?" she asked after a slight pause.

Julian smiled straight into her ardent blue eyes. "All right, then. I'll admit that I'm interested in you personally," he said, and went on as though against his will, "interested far more than any young doctor with his career hardly started should be in a girl like you, who has practically the whole world for her playground, and any number of wealthy playfellows at her feet."

"But suppose all that means nothing to me?" she protested.

"You've put yourself in a fine position to find out just how much it does mean," his answer came back with emphasis. Then he added, "Of course I know it's only a matter of a short time before you'll be only too willing to go back to your fleshpots."

"That's what you think!" Noel retorted. "You told me I didn't have any stamina," she went on. "You practically told me I was useless except for—for decorative purposes. Don't you know any girl on earth would resent that? Well, I still say I'm going to show you that you are wrong. And I haven't the slightest intention of giving up and going back until I've accomplished what I set out to do." Her eyes flashed with determination.

A glow came into Julian's eyes. When he spoke, it was quite irrelevantly, "I could wish you were not quite so attractive, Noel."

"Do you really?" she mocked lightly.

"No, not really," he suddenly acquiesced with the whimsical smile she loved. Then he rose. "I've got to get back to the clinic this very minute." His eyes were serious now. "Whether you get tired of this unequal struggle or not, Noel, let me hear from you every day or so. Promise me again."

"I promise," Noel said in a low voice.

"Stay and finish your dinner. You've been toying with it," he advised, then added, "Good night," as he rose.

"Good night, Julian," Noel said softly, her voice lingering in a little unconscious caress on the last word. She watched his tall figure as he moved up to the cashier's desk, paid the check and went out the door.

Noel, obediently, finished her dinner. She hadn't intended doing anything else. Food was food.

When she left the cafe, she was surprised to find Ruth Chester outside. "I want to speak to you, Miss Shayne," she said moving up to Noel.

"So you know my name?" Noel exclaimed puzzled.

"Oh, I read the society columns and sometimes look at the pictures," Ruth shrugged.

They walked on then slowly toward Main.

"I just want to tell you," Ruth Chester began coolly, "that your little scheme won't work."

Noel stared at her. "What do you mean?"

"Your scheme to be close to Julian Paige," Ruth Chester went on. "It's obvious and perfectly silly, if you're asking me."

"I'm not asking you and I'm not interested in your opinion," Noel retorted.

A flame of anger rushed to Ruth Chester's olive cheeks. She looked at Noel with blazing dark eyes. "I'll tell you this anyway," she went on, restraining her anger with a great effort. "Julian doesn't care a rap about your money. He's not in love with you. And even if he were, he'd never marry you. There's a darn good reason why—" her voice broke with anger then and she turned and walked away.

to prevent this infraction. Alderman McIntyre commented that this propsal had been mentioned from time to time, but nothing had been done to alter the regulations.

Alderman Bralburn's resolution, seconded by Alderman Cotton, instructed the property committee, with City Engineer Parsons, A. G. Metheral, plumbing inspector, and Fire Chief Gimblett to take up the revision of the by-law and to submit proposed recommendations and changes to the whole council.

To Improve Hill Top.

Alderman McIntyre advised spending $500 on further improvement of the Memorial Park atop Armour Hill. His resolution appropriating the money was seconded by Alderman Glover. Ald. McIntyre commended the work that has been done this year by Engineer Parsons, and urged that it should be extended to complete the improvement of the additional space that has been acquired, graded and levelled. Ald. Gordon said the protection stones on the outside of the area did not seem high enough to afford the protection which might be needed in the case of an accident, to prevent serious liability being incurred by the city. The McIntyre motion carried.

Goodnight Story

By MAX TRELL

SPOTS ON LEOPARD RAISINS?
By MAX TRELL

Just as the Chinese dragon was about to tell the story of his life to Knarf and Ting-a-Ling, along came the owner of the circus. His name was Ding-Dong. He was very surprised to find them inside the dragon's cage. He opened the door and let them out at once.

Then Ting-a-Ling explained how he and Knarf had happened to get inside the cage.

Ding-Dong laughed. "He's a very tame dragon and never hurts anybody."

At that moment Hanid came running over to them. "I've just seen the funniest looking animal in the world. He looks like a piece of cake with raisins in it."

Ding-Dong smiled. "That's my raisin leopard. Come over. We'll all have a look at him."

So they hurried away from the dragon's cage and went over to the cage of the raisin leopard. Hanid seemed to be right in her description of him. He looked exactly like a slice of raisin cake in the shape of a leopard.

"Where did you catch him?" asked Hanid.

Just Got Him.

"I didn't catch him at all. I just went out and got him, my Dear."

"Where?"

"At the baker's. But he's a very nice leopard and all the children who come to the circus are very fond of him."

"Where did you catch him?"

Just then some children came along and said: "Could we have a piece of him to eat, please?"

Ding-dong put his hand inside the raisin leopard's cage and broke off the end of his tail. He gave it to the children and they went off very happy.

"My leopard doesn't mind," he explained to Knarf and Hanid. 'His tail will grow back again. You see, in our country the children eat the animals instead of the animals eating the children. It's much nicer that way, don't you think so?"

Manitoba Mishaps Claim Four Lives

WINNIPEG, Aug 3. (CP).—Four Manitoba residents lost their lives in accidents yesterday, two of them from automobile mishaps, one from a kick of a horse, and a young child from drowning in a tub of water.

WAKE UP YOUR LIVER BILE—

And You'll Jump Out of Bed in the Morning Rarin' to go

The liver should pour out two pounds of liquid bile into your bowels daily. If this bile is not flowing freely, your food doesn't digest. It just decays in the bowels. Gas bloats up your stomach. You get constipated. Harmful poisons go into the body, and you feel sour, sunk and the world looks punk.

A mere bowelmovement doesn't always get at the cause. You need something that works on the liver as well. It takes those good, old Carter's Little Liver Pills to get those two pounds of bile flowing freely and make you feel "up and up". Harmless and gentle, they make the bile flow freely. They do the work of calomel but have no calomel or mercury in them. Ask for Carter's Little Liver Pills by name! Stubbornly refuse anything else. 25c.

For Thursday, August 4

The astral influence for this day runs to much hilarity and extravagance; however, it would be well to safeguard finance and take care of budgets, or losses may ensue. There may be many delays and postponements. The indications are for social, domestic and emotional adventures.

If This Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is need not be surprised if they have a year of loss through social indulgence or extravagance, although there may be personal gratification through social or domestic life. Also be prepared for delays or difficulties.

A child born on this day may be pleasure-loving, popular and given to social and domestic or emotional indulgences.

Find Girl Slain

ST. CHARLES, S.D., Aug. 3 (AP)—Bound hand and foot, a gag thrust into her mouth and a towel knotted about her throat, the body of 17-year-old Betty Schnaidt of Sioux Falls was found on the shore of Lake Berry, near here last night.

Dumped face down in a clump of weeds, the body had been hastily covered with a piece of tin and two large pails. The discovery was made by a farmer's son and climaxed a four-day search which started when the attractive high school graduate vanished Thursday.

Being Blackmailed Says Club Killer

LONDON, Aug. 3.—The police court hearing for George Brain, held for Wimbledon's "centre court" slaying of Mrs. Rose Muriel Atkins, was adjourned today until next Tuesday after an alleged statement by the truck driver had been read.

He was stated to have told police he killed Mrs. Atkins, the "Irish Rose," with a car crank because she threatened to blackmail him.

The statement that police said they obtained from 27-year-old Brain, was read today when he appeared before Wimbledon magistrates. It said:

"I struck her with my hand. She started to scream, then everything went black. I hit her with the starting handle (crank) which I kept in the van.

"When I came to there was her body in the van."

After Money

Brain was quoted as saying Mrs. Atkins, whose clubbed and mutilated body was found near the famed centre court of the All-England Tennis Club July 13, told him she was in financial difficulties and wanted money.

"When he told her she would not get any from him, she "threatened to report him to his firm for having the van out late at night." Then Brain began beating her, the statement added.

The prosecution, however, said the cause of death was a stab wound in the neck and that when "the magistrates have heard the evidence they might not think Brain's story as to how this happened is not the correct one."

False Teeth Wearers Are Worst Breath Offenders!

"Need More Than a Mouth Wash" say Authorities... Recommend Polident

Plates and bridges soak up odors and impurities like a sponge! A thin dark scum collects on them. This scum holds germs and decay bacteria. It is so tough that ordinary brushing seldom removes it. And it gets into every tiny crevice where brushing can't even reach. Almost always it results in "denture breath" —probably the most offensive of all breath odors.

Yet there's a perfect way to clean and purify false teeth without brushing, acid or danger. It is Polident, the powder that dissolves away all scum, stains, tarnish and odor. Makes breath sweeter—and plates or bridges look better and feel better. Tens of thousands call Polident a blessing for comfort, convenience and hygiene. Long-lasting can costs only 40¢ at any drug store. Approved by Good Housekeeping Bureau and dentists everywhere.

Cleans, Purifies Like Magic

Put plate or bridge in ½ glass of water. Add a little Polident powder. Leave in 10 to 15 minutes—rinse—and it's sweet and purified—ready to use!

ldermen Swelter Three Hours As Seven Bylaws Passed At Regular Council Meeting

Option Is Obtained On The Property At Point St. Charles

In a salamander session last night, the city council declined to concede discomfort to the highly humid weather, but sweltered nearly three hours with general and routine business, including the passing of seven by-laws. However, only Mayor Hamilton retained his coat of summer weight, or rather lightness, preserving the appearance of official dignity.

Four of the by-laws were piloted by Alderman Wilson and the three others by Alderman Gordon. The first one authorized purchase from the Peterborough Lumber Company of the extension of Crescent street north of Perry street for $500. The right of way had at one time been bought by the McDonald Lumber Company for the same sum, and the city was simply retaining possession of it at the same amount. Two others provided for the construction as local improvements of a concrete sidewalk on the east side of Armour Road from its present end to Park Hill road, the old "finger post" corner, as it used to be known, and for sections of sewers on Knox street and Park Hill Road west. The fourth granted a lease to the Burlington Refineries Limited to the gasoline station property on King street, in front of the car barn, for $180 a year, plus insurance and taxes.

The Gordon by-laws appointed James Fleming police court reporter, in conjunction with the county councils action in June, effecting a saving of about $500 a year. E. A. Outram will do the work of magistrate's clerk, without any increase in salary, part of which for that position will be refunded to the city by the provincial government.

Proposal Rejected.

No action was taken on a Lea-side resolution that councils be given control over educational budgets, a perennial proposal that would give municipal councils power to revise the appropriations of Boards of Education.

A resolution from St. Thomas requesting that the surpluses of Utilities Commissions be transferred to the municipal treasuries was passed on to the finance committee for their discussion.

Relief disbursements last month, as reported by City Clerk Armstrong, totalled $7,948.51, as follows: Provisions $4,897.27; milk $643.58; fuel $246.50; clothing $54.61; medicine $11.17; rent $1,556.03; doctors $539.35.

A motion by Alderman McCannan, seconded by Alderman Cotton, appointed Harry Young, night watchman, to close the Charlotte street rest room each nite at 11.30 o'clock instead of Saturday nights only. Mr. Young is to receive twenty-five cents a night.

A motion by Alderman Wilson, seconded by Alderman Glover, to increase the salary of M. R. Sloan, assistant assessor, from $1,300 to $1,500 was left over until September, when Alderman Gordon proposed that consideration should be given to the service of Arthur Ringer of the assessment department.

Option From Sam Abbott.

Alderman Dutton reported that he and Mayor Hamilton, as directed by the council, had interviewed Sam Abbott with respect to an option on the Point St. Charles property, formerly owned by the McDonald Lumber Company, and latterly by the Peterborough Lumber Company.

A majority of the council decided to obtain an option from Mr. Abbott for two months to buy the property for $1,500, and 'that the option be not exercised unless the city is assured that the Federal government will undertake the riprapping of the lake front from Lake street to the George street wharf.

Aldermen Bradburn, McIntyre and Gordon did not support the motion. Alderman McCannan recalled that he had urged the council some months ago to get an option on the property when it could have been bought from the Peterborough Lumber Company for $1,000. Mr. Dutton reported that Mr. Abbott was willing to sell it to the city, pay the taxes and also a rental of $50 a year for ten years for a shingle mill on which he has already begun the foundation.

Alderman Gordon described the property as a sawdust dump that was not worth $100 for any municipal purposes. The only reason that would justify its purchase, he said, was to "waste $1,500 on it providing the government would spend $10,000 on the proposed riprap extension, and he added that he did not think the government would grant the money for that purpose.

Alderman Dutton expressed the opinion that the ground was suitable for other factory purposes if it could be now used as the site of a shingle mill. He said it was a desirable purchase for future needs of the city and in any case it would not be bought unless the Dominion government would grant the money which had been mentioned by J. J. Duffus, M.P.

Alderman Bradburn's comment was to the effect that if $10,000 would be voted by the government for that project there were other uses to which the money could be devoted for the benefit of the city instead of spending it on the lake front job.

A number of the pilgrims were lame and ill. Many miraculous cures are reported annually from the shrine.

immediately, he said. "If we had heard them at the doors before they broke them down, we would surely have started to fight and then there would have been trouble all around," he said.

When police broke in they found one man asleep on a day bed across the room. He tried to reach his feet and they pinned him down, fastening his wrists with handcuffs. "It's a raid," they shouted. Mr. Pearson woke up, looked about him, thought he was dreaming and turned over to go back to sleep, drawing the sheets about him. "No you don't Keep your hands above the covers," one of the un-uniformed officers shouted. When he looked down the gaping mouth of a revolver, Pearson knew this was no dream.

A minute later the blonde head of a woman appeared around the edge of a door. "What's going on out there," she wanted to know.

"Here's the moll, chief," one of the officers, who doubtless reads too many detective stories, shouted out as he made a lunge for her.

First intimation the police had that they were following the wrong scent came when hey had lined up four men and four women. That was at least two more than the bandit party had numbered. But they were certain of their blunder when the two young children sat up in bed and called out, "Daddy, what are those funny mans doing out there?"

"All right, men, take the handcuffs off that man," Inspector Mackay said immediately. "These people are not the ones we are looking for."

Outside, awaiting a possible attempted escape were Constables Broughton, McClure and Silvester, the only members of the party in uniform, with Silvester and McClure the only two who could identify Mr. Pearson. They entered the house, McClure covered with earth as thought he had crept for a few hundred yards to the cottage.

It was a mightily chastened and humiliated group of police officers who left the cottage a short time afterwards after offering profuse apologies to the vacationing party. A few days later they repaired the two locks they had smashed in entering.

was delivered in Moscow by F. Miyakawa, secretary to the Japanese embassy, on Tuesday against "Soviet lawlessness," the foreign office spokesman announced.

The ambassador to Moscow, Mamoru Shigemitsu, was directed to deliver the second protest personally today to the Russian foreign minister, Maxim Litvinoff.

He was instructed to ask Moscow to "take immediate steps to prevent a recurrence of such violence." The foreign office spokesman said he had "some information" the border attacks were ordered by border commanders and not from Moscow.

Today's army communique said six divisions (number of men not stated) supported by 30 tanks, attacked Japanese positions in the disputed frontier area at 6 a.m. but that they were repulsed with "heavy losses."

The attack followed a nightlong aerial and artillery bombardment in which, the Japanese asserted, "numerous civilian casualties" resulted.

Supporting their contention that the border trouble was inspired by Russian efforts to check the Hankow drive, Japanese here claimed some Japanese troops were withdrawn from Manchoukuo for the Suchow campaign in China.

Principal attack to-day was at Shachofeng, a point near Changkufeng, and the army communique said, Japanese drove back the Soviet troops "in hand to hand fighting." The Russians reformed their broken lines and returned an hour later, again to be thrust back.

The communique listed a series of air raids attributed to Soviet planes since Monday, including a bombardment this morning of Kojo, on the Korean side of the border, "causing numerous civilian casualties."

There were bombardments on Monday of the frontier towns of Shulluen, Heichintzen, Changkufeng and Keiko, in Northern Korea. From 19 to 24 planes comprised the attacking forces, the Japanese asserted.

More than 60 planes were said to have participated in the Wednesday morning offensive against Kojo and Chankkufeng, a prelude to the infantry attack.

The reports here indicated both the frontier forces were heavily armed, with modern equipment. The Soviet troops used small, speedy tanks, against which the Japanese turned effective anti-tank guns.

the hands of an arbitration commission.

No Absurd Conditions

The Journal De Moscou, in discussing the commission suggestion, advised that Japan, however, must not imagine it can attach "absurd and inacceptable conditions."

"It would be difficult to believe that Japan really wants to launch a war against the U.S.S.R.," the paper continued, "when it is already up to the neck in China."

The Journal suggested two explanations for the Changkufeng fighting —that insubordinate generals were trying to provoke a conflict in defiance of Tokyo's orders, or that Tokyo generals imagined they could bolster Japanese prestige through local incidents without resorting to actual warfare.

The Russian version of Changkufeng fighting charged Japanese with starting the offensive, said they were shelled by Soviet artillery and bombed by Soviet planes with "immense losses."

The communique denied, however, that Russian planes had bombed Korean or Manchoukuo territory, as detailed in a Tokyo army communique.

Japs Order Cities To Douse Lights, Fearing Air Raids

Tokyo, Aug. 3 (CP-Havas) ANTI - AIRCRAFT defence headquarters today ordered partial "black-out" for Tokyo, Yokohama, and all of central, western, and southern Japan, nightly until further notice.

All outside lights were ordered extinguished with the exception of nights on vehicles and at police stations.

Street lighting will be almost entirely eliminated and 100 per cent black-out may be ordered at the discretion of all local police authorities.

The fear Russian bombers might appear out of the western mists over the sea of Japan seemed to be growing.

CITY COUNCIL REFERS BRIDGE QUESTION TO BOARD OF WORKS

20,300 Books Be Required In City Schools

Perhaps some mathematician will sit down and figure out how many trees have to be cut down each year to supply Peterborough Public school children with paper to scribble on during the year. A rough guess would be that it would take nearly an entire forest.

For when the Board of Education orders, during summer months, its supply of paper, pen points, plasticine, paint, rulers, and a hundred and one other things that are necessary for the coming year, it is an order that would make one's eyes pop. Soden's Book Store placed the order this year.

During the coming years youngsters in all the city's schools will use 20,300 work books, of varying sizes, scribbling on a total of 2,214,400 pages. They will write examinations on 303,000 sheets of foolscap. In addition they will use 2,700 pounds of exercise paper, 4,000 sheets of art paper. Typists will use 200,000 sheets of newsprint in their exercises. To write on all this paper the Board has ordered 28,800 pen points, 78 gallons of ink. Excess ink will be mopped up on 320 pounds of blotting paper. Besides pens, 26,064 pencils will be used to fill up the paper.

Younger children will have 66 pounds of plasticine to play with. Pupils will use 1,000 slate pencils, 2,592 rulers. There should be a good deal of art around this year because the Board ordered 4,000 paint refills for art classes.

1200 Chiropractors Laud Founder

The years 1938 has gone down in history as a banner year of National Chiropractic conventions. The convention recently concluded in Toronto was one of the most successful ever held.

Twelve hundred delegates from all parts of the United States and Canada met last week, hearing lectures and addresses by outstanding speakers of the chiropractic profession.

Two features of the convention were a boat trip from Toronto to Niagar Falls and the occasion of the dedication of the Palmer Memorial Park at Port Perry in memory of the late D. D. D. Palmer, founder, who was born and attended school in that town.

Several important speakers, including Hon. G. D. Conant and W. J. Moore, M.P., attended

One feature of the banquet program on Monday evening was the wonderful display of acrobatic dancing by the young lady whose pictures have appeared recently in the press, and who recovered through chiropractic treatment from infantile paralysis.

Ontario was honored in the election of officers by having Dr. John Schnick of Hamilton, elected to the office of 1st vice-president of the association.

It is anticipated that in 1945 (golden jubille of chiropractic) the convention will again be held in Canada with suitable commemoration services for that occasion.

Such famous actresses as Eva le Gallienne, Maude Adams and Cissie Loftus have played this role.

Kerr vs. Carley Clash In Police Court

"There is too much of this thing of women in banditry today," F. D. Kerr, K.C., declared this morning as Magistrate E. H. Gee of Lindsay bonded on two years' probation a girl of about seventeen who had recently carried food to a man who had escaped from the police cells.

"Young girls must be told that they cannot become mixed up in affairs of this kind and not have to face the penalty."

The charge was that this girl who has not yet passed beyond the interest of the Children's Aid Society, did assist Arnold Cameron, an escaped person from lawful custody.

"How are you this morning? You are looking pretty," was Magistrate Gee's friendly greeting to the girl who was neatly dressed, a light touch of rouge on her lips, and a little hint of sophistication suggesting that she was graduating from parental authority, as she stood beside her father who looked as if the whole job of life was too much for him. The girl was placed on suspended sentence for two years, ordered to report once a month to Chief Newhall, and her father was bound for $200 surety for the term of probation.

A charge against Neil and Clive Edwards of Lang, Otonabee, of having broken into the premises of the Imperial Oil Company, Romaine Street, and stolen an electric drill, was dismissed. Earl Cuthbertson, proprietor of a Norwood garage, testified he had bought a drill shown in court from Neil Edwards in September, 1937, paying eight dollars for it. Two employees of the Imperial Oil Company declared the drill had been their property, identifying it from certain marks on it.

W. B. Gordon, for the Edwards brothers, asked for dismissal of the case on the ground that there was no evidence to connect the defendants with any breaking into the oil company's building. How Mr. Edwards got possession of the drill was a long story that need be told only if His Worship decided to hear the defence. Mr. Gee agreed to dismissal and said any claim the company might have for the machine would have to be settled in a civil action.

Reckless Driving Case.

Izzie Botnick, accused of reckless driving in an automobile accident July 18 at the corner of Cameron Street and Monaghan Road, pleaded not guilty through his solicitor, T. J. Carley.

Alfred Hawkins, Orpington Road, driver of the other car in collision near the corner, said Botnick's car swung around into the interesection from the east at about 40 to 45 miles an hour, hit his car and bumped him partly into the ditch. Mr. Hawkins was driving south.

"I went only 6 or 8 feet after seeing the other car until it hit me," Mr. Hawkins said.

"I was expecting another car to come around the corner, because my wife saw it through the space between two buildings on the east side of Monaghan Road. I pulled over toward the ditch because there was another car in front of the store at the corner."

"He had lots of room to turn north if he had went slower," Mr. Hawkins stated. Mr. Carley checked him as Mr. Hawkins started to quote some remark by Botnick immediately after the accident.

When Mr. Carley completed his cross-examination, Mr. Kerr said to Hawkins: "You started to tell something Botnick said to you—"

Mr. Carley jumped to his feet protesting that Mr. Kerr knew the ordinary rules of evidence should apply, and that he should not ask in reply a question he had not brought out in direct examination.

Hawkins proceeded—"Yes, he took my name and car number and gave me his. He said, "I'm not paying any damage." I said, "You haven't found out if anyone's hurt," and drove away.

"That is absolutely improper," Mr. Carley shouted.

"My learned friend spilled the beans—" Mr. Kerr was continuing, and add fuel to the fire.

"I did not spill the beans," Mr. Carley answered in full voice. "I didn't ask him what was said; I stopped him as he started to tell it."

He added that "if my learned friend persists in his conduct I'll ask for adjournment so another counsel can be engaged. I don't want to be subjected to anything like that when my learned friend knows he is asking something unfair and against the rules of evidence."

As Mr. Kerr proceeded, Mr. Carley taunted: "Get it all; you missed it in direct examination."

Mr. Kerr alluded to this display of temper," and Mr. Carley's comment was, "I was never in sweeter temper in my life."

After the torrid interlude passed, Mrs. Hawkins and her daughter, Clara, were called. Mrs. Hawkins said her son, seven years old, was injured on the face and his nose was still affected.

Special Constable Bruce Menzies said the accident seemed to have been caused by Botnick making too wide a turn off Cameron Street into Monaghan Road.

Magistrate Gee adjourned the case until this afternoon. There were still eighten county cases to be dealt with, and the Magistrate had an assault charge at Havelock at three o'clock.

Rawdon Township S.S. No. 8 Observes 100th Birthday

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 3.— "The present days are really better than the past", Rev. John O. Totten told a large congregation at Wellman's United Church on Sunday. It was the one hundredth anniversary of S.S. No. 8 Rawdon Township which was being celebrated with a special program on Sunday and Monday of this week when a number of former school teachers and ministers of the district returned to help make the occasion one of the biggest affairs ever seen in that section of Rawdon.

A study of history reveals that the past was not to be compared with present times and those who would make the comparison by memory are prone to forget much of the past, said the speaker.

During the afternoon a memorial service was held at the cemetery where Rev. F. G. Jobin of Scugog Island was the guest speaker and in the evening the services were in charge of Rev. W. E. Honey of Myrtle. During the afternoon the Sterling band was in attendance.

Seymour West again established their superiority in an exhibition softball event staged on Monday when they defeated Wellman's Corners 5 to 0 in a seven inning game after which girls' teams from Crow Bay and Mount Pleasant played a strenous battle which resulted in a 23-all tie.

During the morning the old school bell rang once more to summon many of the old pupils who 50 years ago sat in those same seats which recalled memories of squeaking slate pencils and the hard rap of the teacher's pointer. Several of the former teachers were on hand to renew former memories in the one room school once more.

In the afternoon addresses were given by J. B. MacDougal, P.A. D. Paed, assistant chief inspector of public and separate schools for Ontario; A. A. Martin, I.P.S. of Northumberland, and A. W. Maguire, I.P.S. of Hastings County.

In the evening a dance was held on the school grounds where a special platform had been constructed and both round and square dancing were enjoyed and old time music was a feature of the occasion.

Examiner's Correspondent in Marmora Knew Harry Holbrook In War Days

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MARMORA, Aug. 3.— Particular interest lay in a news paragraph in the Examiner on Saturday for W. J. Cottrell, who served in France with the Iron Seconds.

The paragraph referred to, concerns Harry E. Holbrook, of Peterborough, who enlisted when 13. After his hospitalization ex-Sergt. Cottrell was sent to the Eastern Ontario Regimental Depot at Seaford, Sussex, where he met a fine strapping youth who suggested to him one afternoon a walk to Alfriston, four miles distant. The distance had been almost traversed when the young soldier fell out to the surprise of his comrade. The Marmora man later learned that the other was then only fourteen years of age and his memory is now refreshed as to the other's name through the Examiner's reference to Harry Holbrook.

W. J Cottrell is certain of this much—that Harry Holbrook was the youngest Canadian on active service which he met, though he can recall thousands of smaller bodily frame.

Campbell Faces Murder Count

OTTAWA, Aug. 3 (CP).—Mrs. Adelia Rogers and Harold Proulx, of Toronto, and William Byrne, Hull, Que., were committed to custody Tuesday as material witnesses in the bank holdup at Richmond, Ont., eighteen miles west of here, July 19.

The three were arrested along with Oscar Campbell, 41, Toronto, charged with the robbery, at a summer cottage on the Rideau River, near Ottawa. Melville Campbell, brother of Oscar, escaped a police trap at the cotage Sunday night.

Provincial Police Sergeant R. P. Labelle told Magistrate Glen Strike that police did not think summonses would be sufficient guarantee the three would be on hand to give evidence against Campbell. The Magistrate then issued the warrants committing them to custody. Bail may be sought.

Mrs. Rogers is the mother of Mary Donnelly, arrested at the same time and charged with conspiracy in connection with the armed robbery police allege the Campbells took part in.

Police waited the arrival from Montreal of police who will take Campbell there to face a charge of murdering Sam Wolman, Montreal, during an attempted warehouse burglary in April, 1937.

Meanwhile over the whole district Provincial and local police were keeping a close watch for Melville Campbell. Police said several bullets from their guns hit his car as he escaped Sunday night. Its identification would be easy and it is thought Campbell is still close to the cottage.

Each summer until this year he was employed as assistant assessor. He was 61 years old. Funeral arrangements will be made later.

Girl's Death Leap Nipped In Time

LONDON, Aug. 3 (AP).—Emily Arkwell, 17, gave policemen and firemen some anxious moments today as she emulated John Warde, spectacular New York suicide, and defied attempts to rescue her from a ledge 50 feet above the ground.

Clad only in a nightgown, the girl, an inmate of the East Croydon Moral Welfare Home, climbed from her room to the ledge and threatend to jump if anyone went near her.

As a crowd gathered, firemen worked to prevent a jump. They spread a jumping sheet and padded the street with mattresses and pillows collected from nearby houses.

Two extension ladders were run up to the ledge as the girl, clinging to the ivy-clad wall and shivering in the cold dawn breeze, again threatened to jump. The crowd missed a heartbeat several times as the girl swayed and almost fell.

But unlike the young New Yorker who plunged to his death from a 17-story ledge, the rescue attempts had a happy climax. While the girl's attention was distracted from below, watchers reached out a window and seized her wrists.

Ashburnham People Presents Petition Requesting Footbridge Over Quaker Dam

Just Passing The Buck Ald. McIntyre Charges As Motion Is Presented

An Ashburnham deputation headed by the Frank Kearney and representing 313 petitioners, 189 of them property owners, gave fresh emphasis to the need and utility of a footbridge over the Quaker Oats Company's dam at London Street, and persuaded the city council last night to send the project back to the Board of Works for further consideration. Thirty-one men and one woman comprised the deputation.

The petition recalled that about sixty years ago John Ludgate, lumberman, built at his own expense a footway along the old Dickson wagon bridge for the accommodation of his children to attend the Collegiate Institute. It was open to the public until the Dickson rights were acquired by the Quaker Oats Company. Residents of Ashburham have been paying their share of the cost of the Hunter Street bridge, and although $20,000 for a bridge at London Street was included in the $280,000 passed by the council for the construction of the Hunter Street bridge, the total appropriation was expended at Hunter Street, and today the citizens desiring to cross at London street are refused access to the railway bridge over the London Street dam. Fifty pupils attending the Collegiate Institute and St. Peter's High Schol have been among those using the bridge at the dam, thereby avoiding the traffic of Hunter and George Streets.

Alderman Dutton asked Mr. Kearney whether the census of pedestrians over the dam, taken last April, truly represented the use made of the bridge especially by residents of the north end of Ashburnham. Mr. Kearney replied that the census was taken too early, and it would have reflected needs of the community more broadly if the count had been taken in June or July.

City Engineer Parsons recalled that the census was taken on two days in April by three men engaged in eight hour shifts. Alderman Gordon moved, seconded by Alderman Cotton that the proposal to build a footbridge at London Street be referred back to the Board of Works for further consideration of the factors which had previously influenced the council not to take any action as a result of the census.

Mayor Hamilton told the deputation the council was sympathetic to the request. He said estimates of the cost of a footbridge had been obtained, and the expenditure had seemed to the council more than might be assumed at that time.

Impressed By Agreement

"The condition in the Hunter Street bridge bylaw that $20,000 be set aside for a bridge at London Street throws a different light on it," Alderman McIntyre commented. "An agreement is an agreement, and that one was not carried out. I'll admit we thought the estimates we got sometime ago seemed high, but this motion is simply passing the buck."

The deputation loudly applauded Alderman McIntyre's suggestion.

Alderman Gordon said it was a matter of engineering, construction costs and right of way. "I think Ald. McIntyre should withdraw that remark. When it is said the buck is being passed it is a vulgar insinuation that the motion was put for a dishonest and improper purpose."

Alderman McIntyre replied that if a matter was left to a committee it might never be done, and he added he was "sorry Alderman Gordon took it that way."

Alderman Cotton said he seconded the motion because no money had been appropriated for a footbridge. If the petition was referred to a committee with the City Engineer the question of finding the money for the work would be taken up, together with other details. The census taken by Mr. Parsons, he said, did not warrant the spending of the sum estimated for construction. "I am with the people living over the Nicholls Oval section in their request, but if this matter is brought up in general business it will have to be delayed anyway."

Alderman Dutton said the council would have to interview Mr. Cutting of the Quaker Oats Company as a necessary preliminary "so we can get the whole picture. To proceed intelligently we have to know the attitude of the company". And Alderman Wilson agreed that the first thing that should be done was to obtain the consent of the Quaker Oats Company "to putting the bridge there."

Alderman Gordon pointed out that an easement should be got from the company first, as was done when right was received from the C. P. R. to build the footbridge across to the Engleburn neighborhood.

The council finally decided unanimously to refer the petition to the Board of Works. It was signed by Gordon R. Brown, O. J. Huggins, John J. Driscoll and Morgan C. Cullen on behalf of all the other petitioners who had subscribed to the general appeal.

MURRAY MAY RETURN CANADA'S TENNIS CUP TO DOMINION

Frankie Parker His Only Threat For Net Honors

TORONTO, Aug. 3. —(CP)— No player has indicated yet that he will stop Frankie Parker, a veteran of front-rank tennis at 22, in his title march at the Canadian championships.

But from the field of 15 left in singles with the one-time Milwaukee ball-boy, a couple of threats loomed larger today with the start of the fourth round. The free-swinging, well-rounded game which has made Bobby Murray Canada's leading player, and the clashing, deliberate play of Carl Fischer of Detroit have caught the eyes of onlookers from the long verandah of the Toronto Lawn Tennis club.

Mercer Beasley, who took Parker at 16 and brought him to a point where he was ranked No. 3 in the United States last year, says he wouldn't be surprised if Frankie didn't win.

"The boy is here to polish his game a little," Beasley attests. "His tournament play this year hasn't been quite up to what it should be. He'll go far enough here to get some of the touch that will make him hot when he goes back to the United States, but he will have to be good to win this tournament."

Never Won Title.

Failure on Parker's part might give Murray the championship for the first time, returning it to Canada for the first time since Marcel Rainville won in 1934. In contrast to other members of the Canadian Davis Cup team which lost to Japan last week, Murray appears near a peak.

He was eager and aggressive, smooth and calculating yesterday, when he defeated Army Armstrong of Oshawa, Ont., in a third-round match, 6-2, 6-2.

The three members of Canada's Cup squad other than Murray gave evidence of sluggishness in taking time to advance. Ross Wilson of Toronto got by most easily, but his service wasn't at its best when he beat Bill Pinkerton of Toronto 6-3, 7-5.

Laird Watt of Montreal slipped from his usual steady attack to drop a set to Bill Noyes of Toronto, but recovered to win 1-6, 6-3, 6-2. Doug Cameron of Vancouver had to fight back to score over Grant McLean of Toronto, Northern Ontario champion, 6-3, 6-8, 7-5.

Parker again had little difficulty, spilling Nick Saba of Toronto 6-0, 6-1. Wilmer Allison, veteran Texan, defeated Jack Vanstone of Toronto, 6-2, 6-4.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

IF THE WEATHER IS OKE tonight, an exhibition ball game will be staged at 6.15 in Riverside Park. Betwixt the Ogdensburg Colts and the Petes. It will be something of an Ogdensburg old ball players' reunion, counting Knotty Lee and his band along with Lefty McNally, Bob Doll and Eddie Murphy of the locals. And it should be a nifty number, too, as the Petes are playing swell baseball lately—witness their wins over Buffalo Fro-Joys and twice 'gainst the House of David pros. Dunno who will pitch but he'd better be hot as these professional Colts, who won the Can.-Am. loop title a year ago, are tough babies. They lay on the lumber plenty, and we don't mean sleeping on a wood-pile! Ought to pack in a big twilight crowd, this fracas.

TONY MILLER, one-armed referee and timer at the motorbike meet here on Civic Holiday, had quite a rep in the racing game. Won the Kaye Don Trophy two years ago and last year, taking part in events throughout Canada and the States. Last winter at Daytona Beach, Florida, Miller had a big lead in the 200-mile national championship race when he spilled in a bad accident. It resulted in him having his right arm amputated. That finished this speedster's career on the iron steeds, but he is now an official A.C.U. referee and attends all meets. A swell gent, too.

Big-Hearted "Big Four"

MILT DUNNELL WRITES in the Stratford sheet: "After years of neglect, the Big Four has suddenly rediscovered its fatherly love for the intermediate brand of pigskin assault and battery. So the Big Four is kidnapping a few teams from the rival organization, the O.R.F.U., to form an intermediate group consisting of Dundas, Hamilton Cubs, and Eastsides and Westsides of Toronto. They seem to be trying to create the impression that the Big Four is doing quite a thing for football. Getting down to brass tacks what have they done, except muscle into a corner of the O.R.F.U. hotbed? It is not providing any new field for rugby, because these clubs would have operated anyway in the O.R.F.U. and the ywon't draw any better because they are switching to the Interprovincial banner."

* * * * * * *

HE GOES ON TO SAY that it may be just a co-incidence but this decision by the Big Four to run these O.R.F.U. teams comes just after the Ontario Union stepped into Montreal with a franchise, the C.N.R. club there being grouped in senior O.R.F.U. with Peterborough, Toronto and Sarnia. And the C.N.R. crew have picked off most of the top-flight players, he adds, and threaten to crowd Big Four senior football there to a corner lot or back street. So he points out that it's the golden rule in reverse; if a guy slaps one cheek, take a half turn and hit him a kick in the slats!

About The Weaker (Ha, Ha) Sex

WESTCLOX LASSES took a 7-6 win over Keene at the Bowl last eve and the loss doesn't do Ivan's gang much good this half. A neat fray all the way with Barb Blade hurling good ball 'gainst D. Warner and Bea McDowell. The revised schedule calls for Westclox to go to Keene Thursday e'en and for Keene and C.G.E. to meet here Friday. Maybe a double header will be staged Saturday, as the teams must be all through and ready for P.W.S.U. playdowns by Aug. 20th. Winner meets Ottawa damsels here that date. Manager Ab Delahaye of the Clockmakers is sporting a shiner today which he obtained in the pre-game practise, proving that even softball has its setbacks and that a guy isn't safe anywhere any more. Loop officials are wondering if the police shouldn't check the kids from tearing around at the Bowl games, making life miserable for everyone; the umps admit they can't handle the lads at all.

AND NOW the O.B.A. has re-instated 10 of the 14 suspended Kingston Ponies, holding up the okay on Roy Wilson, Herb Handford, Cliff Bennett and Tony Paczkowski. With Ed Poller still on the outside, too. Most of the re-instated players will get into the softball wars down Kingston way. A dispatch from the Limstone City says the Ponies are undecided whether or not to return to the Central League race this season. They still haven't any pitchers, with Tony and Ed not okayed and Jamieson playing intermediate. It's pretty late, seems to us, to consider returning but of course that's up to the Ponies, Petes, GM-men and loop officials. Don't forget the playoffs start Saturday with the locals in Oshawa. However, these playoffs could be shortened up a bit if it was decided to give the Ponies one more crack at the title. Probably something definite on it tomorrow.

Strumming The Gutted-Stick

ON THURSDAY, the Petes' lacrossers journey to East York for a tough, tough tilt—as those East Yorkers are meaner than misers on home terrain. And Brooklin, with some of the ex-Oshawa stars, come here this Friday. Another hard scrap lined up for Pete King and Co. The Rotary and Kiwanis midgets meet here Friday, too. The midgets had a twin bill last p.m., with Lions licking Kinsmen by an 8-1 score and Y's Men's copping an 11-2 smirk over Rotary.

* * * * * * *

LEN SMITH WRITES in the Star: "Peterborough fans are looking forward to Friday night when Brooklin visits the eastern city. These squads played to an 8-all tie three weeks ago and fans figure that either one will go through to the finals. Woodbridge got a great hand at Peterborough last week. After a poor start in the first period, during which only seven men were ready for action, the entry of the shock troops in the later periods gave them enough strength to pull down the Petes' lead, which was reduced to 8-7 when the last buoy was rounded. If all games were as cleanly played as on this occasion, there would be little need for referees. We noticed splendid improvement in stickhandling and all around play of several youngsters performing in the Service Club League at Peterborough. They are keen to learn and we have had a great kick refereeing some of their games and pointing out their faulty play. This league fills a long-felt want in the Liftlock City which in the past has had to secure help from outside points." Smith is tops as a referee, writer of lacrosse and good fellow.

Little Austria

SYDNEY, Australia, Aug 3 (CP-Reuters).—Creation of a "Little Austria" in the Australian Alps has been suggested by H. J. Lamble, director of the New South Wales government tourist bureau.

There are 2,000 miles of skiable snow on the Kosciuski Massif, in Southeastern Australia, and Lamble proposes that a new alpine province, peopled by Australians would cater for winter sports, should be founded there.

The New Champ Smiles

Holding the trophy emblematic of the Canadian amateur golf championship is Ted Adams, Missouri school teacher, who sprang the biggest upset of the year in the links game by defeating Sandy Somerville, six times winner of the crown, in the final. They battled right down to the 39th hole before a winner was declared.

International Log Birling Champs In August Contest

ESCANABA, Mich., Aug 3.—Paul Bunyan, the mythical demigod of the lumberjack, is long dead, but others will be attempting to approximate his feats in this one-time rip-roaring lumbering centre, Aug. 12-14.

For that's the time for the second annual revival of the world's championship log birling tournament, which already has drawn an entry list of 40 birlers from the middle west, Pacific coast, Maine and eastern Canada.

Last year at Escanaba, Joe Connor of Cloquet, Minnesota, 26-year-old University of Minnesota forestry student, won the coveted title of "King of the White Waters" from Wilbur Marx, Eau Claire, Wisconsin, who had held the crown for 10 years.

The Girls Again!

Four daughters of old-time lumberjacks also competed in a tournament of their own, and in a spectacular exhibition of the heman sport, Laura Marchand of Cloquet won the "Queen of the White Waters" honors by ducking Marietta Phipps, 17-year-old school girl of Ladysmith, Wisconsin. Both champions will be back to defend their hard-earned titles.

Birling is a sport with many breath-taking thrills for contestants and spectators alike. A log is floated in open water and the two contestants take their place at either end. At a signal from the referee, each begins to tread the log in such a manner as to cause it to roll or spin in the water. Spiked boots give hold. Each man tries to roll the log so erratically that his opponent will be spilled into the drink.

Now, fast, now slow, the log rolls. When one gets it spinning at a rate which keep the feet of both at a running pace, he will snub or cuff the unstable cylinder. This provides a chance to tread the log in the opposite direction.

In the early days, birlers kept on a log for a surprisingly long period, but in the Escanaba tournament the sizes of the logs used have been greatly reduced to speed up the action.

Now You Tell One!

There is a record of birlers rolling for several hours, but the greatest marathoner of them all is Paul Bunyan, that mythical giant of the north woods. At a date which is a trifle uncertain, the mighty Paul engaged in a birling contest with Satan. They rolled for three weeks and three days before Paul was victorious. It is said that when, finally, the devil was spilled into the water, a cloud of steam arose of such extent that the entire countryside was enveloped in a hot fog.

For many years birling was a casual sport, evolved from the work of loggers. At the end of a hard days' work, the loggers would crave a little after-dinner exercise to soothe them for the night's rest. They would leap upon logs into the stream by the camp and joyously birl each other down.

It was not until 1898, on the occasion of the Lumbermen's Exposition at Omaha, that the first world's championship tournament was held. Tom Fleming of Eau Claire, Wisconsin, won the title. A crowd of 36,000 persons watched the match.

Tournaments were held in 1900, 1901 and 1902, and then, for some reason, there was a suspension, although many local contests were held. One lumber camp would birl against another, and there were inter-county contests. Off and on tourneys were held and finally were officially revived last year.

Y's Men's Midgets Cop Lacrosse Win

Y's Men took an 11-2 midget lacrosse victory over Rotary last night in the George St. arena as part of a scheduled double-header before a few fans. Easton, B. Dundas and Martin scored for them in the first frame; while D. Martin got two, Easton and Land one each in the second. After Martin had opened the third with a tally, Rotary got busy and shot in two, Weaver counting on each, aided by Roberts and Hudson. Martin, Land and B. Dundas wound it up with tallies in the fourth. For the winners, D. Martin, Willshaw and B. Dundas went best, but the whole team clicked well. Batley, Shea, Weaver and Hudson stood out for the losers, but the team back-checked poorly.

The Teams:

Adams Ousts Somerville For Golf Title

London Hunt and Country Club, London, Ont., Aug. 3.—Ted Adams of Columbia, Mo., a 21-year-old school teacher, dethroned C. Ross (Sandy) Somerville of London as Canadian amateur golf champion with a one-up victory over the Londoner in a match that ended on the 39th green.

Adams, conceded little chance against Somerville, who was shooting for his seventh national amateur title, never was behind during the complete match. Although often in trouble, the Missourian was sensational with his approaches and putting and refused to crack before the experienced Somerville.

A Tense Struggle

It was a tense battle all the way, with Somerville coming from behind repeatedly to tie the match but never able to get ahead. Two down at the start of the 32nd hole, Somerville won the next two and then they halved six straight holes before Adams, playing in his first Canadian championship, got the winner.

Eddie Held of New York won it in 1929, at Jasper, Alta.; Albert (Scotty) Campbell of Seattle won it 1933 and 1934 at Vancouver and Montreal; Freddie Haas, Jr., of New Orleans, won in 1936 at Winnipeg.

CHICAGO CUBS GAIN GROUND ON PIRATES—GIANTS LOSE OUT

Red Sox Recall Veterans To Help Team

NEW YORK, Aug. 3.—At least two major league clubs have learned recently if they didn't know it before, that a good ball team isn't quite enough to win a pennant in the kind of races the two big baseball circuits are staging this season.

There's no doubt New York Giants and Boston Red Sox are good ball clubs, but they're some distance from the top right now and managers Bill Terry and Joe Cronin are working hard and spending freely in an effort to remedy matters.

The Giants remained five games behind Pittsburgh's National league leading Pirates despite a 7-0 licking by Chicago Cubs yesterday, but that was only because Pittsburgh took a 3-1 setback in Boston when Johnny Lanning came up with a four-hit game. The Cubs, however, cut New York's margin over them to 1½ games.

Similarly the Red Sox didn't lose any ground to the Yankees, still trailing by 5½ games after their 7-4 loss to Cleveland. That was because the Yanks dropped a 4-3 decision to Detroit Tigers. Cleveland thus gained a four-game margin over the Red Hose.

The Red Sox, hoping to strengthen their pitching corps, have called the ailing Bob Grove back for duty and purchased two minor league veterans, Joe Heving from Milwaukee and Bill Harris from Buffalo. Then they secured Jim Tabor from Minneapolis to replace the injured Pinky Higgins at third.

Tigers Recall Benton

In another important shift, Detroit sent Cletus Poffenberger, the youthful pitcher who was under suspension for a list of misdemeanors as long as his name, to Toledo and recalled Al Benton to take his place.

The moves toward improvement didn't show in yesterday's games. Cissell fielded ably for the Giants but didn't get a hit. The Giants made only two while the Cubs smacked Carl Hubbell and Dick Coffman for 12, including homers by Stan Hack and Billy Jurges.

Tabor was the only Boston newcomer in action. He hit two doubles but Denny Galehouse, taking sore-armed Johnny Allen's place, kept the rest of a dozen hits scattered.

Brooklyn Dodgers regained fifth place in the National League by a one-point margin over Boston when they won two games from St. Louis, 6-2 and 9-3. Johnny Vander Meer's return to form helped keep Cincinnati Reds on the Cubs' heels as they downed Philadelphia 3-2.

Washington gained a 5-3 victory over St. Louis Browns in a game protested by the losers after Umpire Harry Geisel had suffered a broken wrist in a collision with Billy Sullivan. The Chicago White Sox beat the Athletics, 8-4.

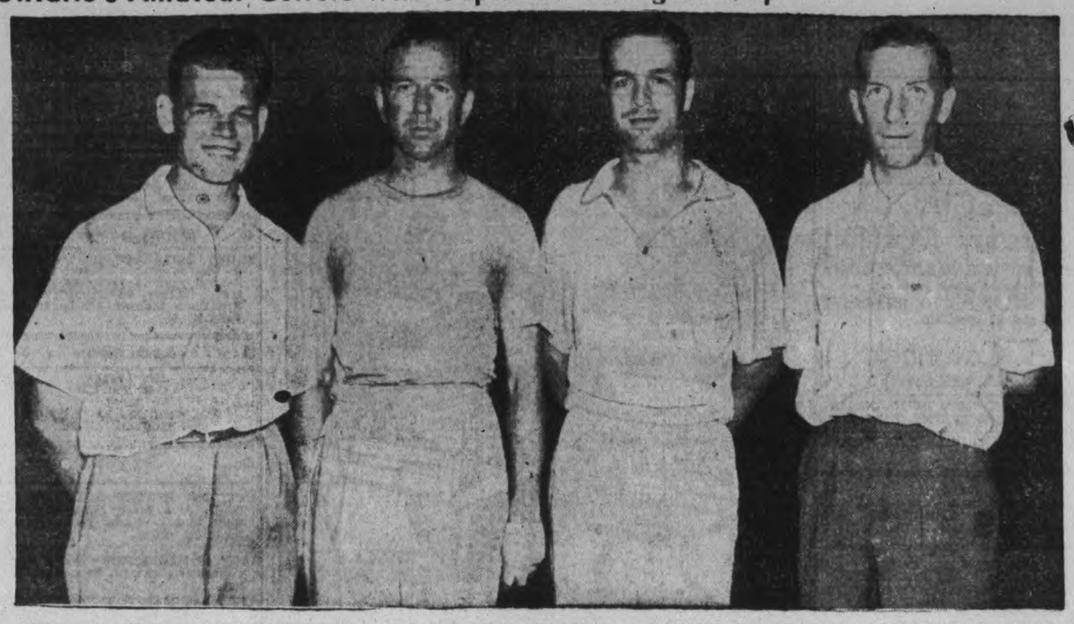
Ogdensburg Colts Are Here Tonight

Knotty Lee's Colts of Ogdensburg, N.Y., are here tonight (Wednesday) to play the Petes an exhibition ball game at 6.15 in Riverside Park, weather permitting. It will be the locals' final game before they start their C.O.B.L. playoffs Saturday in Oshawa. The tilt tonight promises to be a fine battle between the pro squad which won the Can.-Am. loop title a year ago and are now in second place, and the Petes. The latter are playing fine ball lately, having beaten the Buffalo semi-pros and the House of David pros twice in their last three starts in exhibition scraps. A big twilight crowd should be on deck to see the Petes' former skipper lead his Colts against Manager Eddie Murphy's men.

Following is the Ogdensburg lineup, as wired ahead by Knotty Lee: Brock, cf; Sugrue, ss; Zulberg, 2b; Gridais, rf; L. Hurley, 1b; Fasulo, c; Tibbetts, lf; Valentino, 3b; pitchers, Lacey, Pukis, Lauer, W. Hurley and Holmes. It is uncertain which of the Petes' four pitchers, Jakafby, Whitehill, Kitchen or McNally, will get the home mound assignment, but the locals will be at full strength for the game. The Colts are noted as hard hitters but the Petes have been bingling the ball hard recently, also, and it ought to be a nifty exhibition.

Ontario's Amateur Golfers Who Captured Willingdon Cup



The annual team matches between the best amateur golfers from Canada's provinces this year resulted in a win for Ontario, the sixth time that province has taken top honors. British Columbia was first announced as the winning team, but disqualified because one of her players had broken one of the rules. Ontario and Quebec, tied for second place, played off, and after an extra hole the former were returned champions. The four men comprising the team are shown immediately after the last putt was sunk, LEFT to RIGHT, Ray Getliffe, Gordon Taylor, Jim Boeckh and Sandy Somerville.

Westclox Girls Beat Keene 7-6

Girls' softball standing:

Team	P.	W.	L.
Westclox	5	5	0
Keene	6	1	5

Westclox dealt Keene a bad blow to their playoff chances in the second half when they nosed out a 7-6 win last night at the Bowl. A late rally by the visitors fell one run short of tying it up in a good game. Barb Blade hurled neat ball for the winners, allowing nine hits and three walks as she fanned four. D. Warner started for Keene and went till the end of the fifth, fanning five, walking three and giving eight hits. Bea McDowell wound it up with five hits while striking out five. The fielding was mostly good.

Cricket Results

LONDON, Aug 3—(CP Cable)—Top teams in the English county cricket championship held their places Tuesday as the three-day series of matches ended. The Kent Hampshire game ended yesterday, the former victorious by an innings and 108 runs.

Yorkshire had little difficulty with the third place Lancashire eleven, defeating the Red Rose county by an immings and 200 runs Middlesex stayed behind Yorkshire with a thee-wickets decision over Sussex.

Derbyshire climbed a notch to fifth position behind Surrey with an innings and 28-run victory over Warwickshire Surrey won on the first innings from Nottinghamshire.

In other contests Essex defeated Worcestershire by four wickets and first-inning points were added by Somerset and Leicestershire over Gloucestershire and Northamptonshire respectively.

Rain interrupted play between the touring Australians and Glamorgan. There was no play after tea-time Monday and yesterday the teams were on the field for 90 minutes. The match was drawn.

The scores:

Sussex 296 and 181; Middlesex 178 and 301 runs for seven wickets (Price 52 not out, J. Smith 57); at Hove.

Surrey 447 and 171 for five declared (Gregory not out, Holmes 56, Gunn for for 33); Nottinghamshire 443 (Harris 179, Heane 81, Watts five for 80 and 45 runs for one wicket; at the Oval.

Leafs Avert Double Loss

TORONTO, Aug. 3.—The Maple Leafs split last evening's twin bill with Syracuse Chiefs and 5,000 enthusiastic followers went home happy.

Following on a four-game win streak, you mightn't think local fans would appreciate a mere half share of the night's plunder, but the manner in which the Burnsmen snatched that second game from the very brink of defeat had the entire attendance standing on its feet during a hectic ninth inning.

The scores, incidentally, were 8 to 4 and 3 to 2, with Toronto registering the single-run triumph.

The crowd, numbering numerous juveniles who took advantage of the first Father-and-Son night in Maple Leaf Stadium history, hadn't had a great deal about which to cheer until that final session rolled around. But when the Leafs came from behind after the first two batters had been retired there was no checking the burst of applause that greeted the uprising.

Cookie Outlucked.

Earl Cook, product of local sandlots, had performed a neat job of effectively scattering eight Toronto safeties over the first eight frames for the loss of only one run, and when he retired the first two batters to face him in the ninth it appeared that nothing short of a miracle could produce a Toronto triumph.

But base hits and not a miracle, did that very thing. Charlie Sheerin paved the way to victory with a single between Meyers and McDaniel, and Joe Sullivan, who ran for the shortstop, raced around to third on oJe Gantenbein's slash to right.

That was enough for Cookie, but as things turned out it might have been better to leave him in there. At any rate, Sullivan came home when Burns beat out a slow roller to first at the expense of Ted Kleinhans, and when Manush laced a smashing liner to centre Gantenbein sprinted home from second with the winning run.

Mulligan Good in Pinches.

It would have been a disheartening setback for Joe Mulligan had his mates not come through. Big Joe was extremely wild, his usual failing, but the visitors took no liberties with his offerings. The lanky right-hander gave only five safeties during the nine innings and that number included three singles which didn't get past the infield, and another which Gantenbein allowed to get past him.

Mulligan's wildness had him in trouble frequently, however, as he issued eight passes and hit another batter. But he was at his best in the pinches. In the fourth, for instance, Longacre walked and McDaniel sacrificed. Mulligan threw the ball into centre field and that put the runners on second and third with none out. So Joe struck out Richards and Cook and then got Meyers on a outfield lift.

Bears Are Up Sixteen Games Ahead Redwings

TORONTO, Aug. 3 (CP).—The champion Newark Bears are on one of those tears again and things are looking black for any International baseball league team daring to enter Ruppert stadium.

The Bears chalked up their seventh straight victory since coming back from a road trip last week when they annihilated Montreal Royals 15-3 last night. It was the Bears' 44th triumph against 11 defeats in their own ball yard, and their 10th in a row over Royals who have yet to score a victory this season in the league leaders' park.

The win move the Bears 16 games in front of Rochester Red Wings, who split a doubleheader with Baltimore Orioles, and dropped the Royals to seventh place behind Jersey City Giants. The Giants whipped Buffalo Bisons 4-1 while the Wings won the night cap of their twin bill 8-3 after dropping the opener 7-6. Syracuse and Toronto also split a bargain bill, the Chiefs winning the twilight affair 8-4 and dropping the arc light contest, 3-2.

The Bears smashed out 14 hits, seven of them extra base blows and three of them homers. After Frankie Kelleher and Mike Chartak had hit for the circuit early in the game, clouting Charley Keller belted a four-bagger with the bases loaded in the seventh inning to climax a nine-run splurge in that frame.

Sam Narron hit two homers and Jack Juelich one to give the Red Wings an even split after the Orioles had come from behind to capture the opener. Roy Spencer hit a three-run pinch homer in the sixth for the Orioles and manager Bucky Crouse drove in the tying and winning runs with a single in the seventh.

The Giants, picking up after the Bears had walloped Buffalo in four straight games, made it two in a row over Bisons behind Tommy Baker's eight-hit pitching. Ollie Carneigie accounted for the Bison's tally by belting his 31st homer of the season.

The Leafs cracked out four hits with two away in the ninth inning to nip the Chiefs in their second encounter. The Syracusans connected for 12 hits in winning the opener behind Red Zarrett's effective 10-hitter.

6,000 Jew Doctors To Lose Practice

BERLIN, Aug., 3—(AP) Approximately 6,000 to 7,000 Jewish physicians in Germany have been forbidden to practise after Sept. 30.

The only exceptions to the sweeping decree published last night in the official Gazette were unusual cases wherein the Interior Minister can grant licences to practise until further notice and certain Great War veterans who may be given maintenance grants.

The ban will close one chapter of the systematic drive which began Dec. 29, 1937, when 3,000 of 4,220 Jewish Doctors in Germany (without subsequently annexed Austria) were dropped from staffs of private insurance companies.

The state sickness Insurance companies, however, had eliminated Jewish doctors from their rolls before that. (In recent years the practice of Jewish doctors has been limited virtually to Jews and foreigners.

Metis Families To Be Given 320 Acres Each

EDMONTON, August 3—(CP).—A tentative agreement between Alberta government and the province's approximately 2,500 halfbreed families, whereby the Metis would receive 320 acres of land a family, had not met complete approval of the families involved today.

Dr. W. W. Cross, provincial minister of health, announced the agreement yesterday, providing for a total of 70 townships throughout the province for the half-breds.

A. J. Hamilton, grandson of Louis Riel and president of the Dominion Independent Association of Canada, said Metis would be asked to protest against the agreement, on the grounds a clause under which the land would be given a 99-year-lease did not go far enough. He said the land should be given outright to the Metis, that they should not be allowed to sell or trade it, and that it should be tax-free.

The tentative agreement climaxed negotiations that had been underway for several years. It was drafted by Dr. Cross and the Metis executive council of eight men.

Land To Be Scattered.

"It was agreed that the Metis should have tracts of land set aside for them in different parts of the province," Dr. Cross said. "The size of these tracts is to be regulated according to the number of Metis families adjacent and willing to move into these areas. The Metis executive council is to pick the locations which will be subject to approval of the government."

Since 1927 half-breeds have been pressing for assistance from Provincial and Federal governments, and the agreement as it now stands practically implement findings of a Royal Commission under Mr. Justice A. F. Ewing of the Alberta Supreme court in 1935.

Under the agreement, Metis in each colony would elect three governors from among themselves unless their number was more than 500, when there would be an additional governor for each extra 200 inhabitants. The government would select a salaried man to act as administrator to all colonies. The governors would have full power to prevent white men entering or doing business in the colony.

Hamilton claimed some provision should be included for teaching the Metis people how to farm and to furnish them with livestock and farm machinery.

A Summer Pet

GALT, Ont., Aug. 3 (CP).—Three-year-old Jean Sims, Galt, has a part-time pet. A tame groundhog, "Chuck," raised from a pup by Jean's parents, Mr. and Mrs. James Sims, sleeps through the winter like his wilder kinsmen, and is only active during this part of the year. At present, out of hibernation, his appetite is extreme, and he is able to eat "for hours."

12 Men, Woman Held In Vets Beer Raid

TORONTO, August 3 — (CP). — Twelve men and one woman were arrested early today inside O'Keefe's brewery warehouse while 500 celebrants, most of them equipped with mugs or glasses, waited outside in the laneway for the 16-gallon kegs of beer police said were being rolled outside for a "party" to wind up the Canadian Corps Reunion here. The 13, three of whom are war veterans, were charged with shopbreaking and trespassing. The crowd outside jeered and hooted as police reserves helped place the arrested 13 in a patrol wagon.

George Perrin Denies Drunk Driving

Charged with being intoxicated while driving an automobile on the Lakefield-Young's Point road, June 11, George Perrin pleaded not guilty, and in explanation of the outing he said he was simply doing a favor for a party of five friends who had requested him to drive them to the South Beach hotel between 9 and 10 o'clock that night.

F. D. Kerr, K.C., conducted the prosecution in the absence of V. J. McElderry, K.C, Crown Attorney, and W. B. Gordon represented the defendant. Magistrate Langley was on the bench with eight or ten week-end cases to be heard, together with several others previously enlarged. He did not conclude the morning court until 12.30 p.m., was due in Port Hope at 1.30 with a subsequent trip to Cobourg about an hour later, with the likelihood that he would have to pass up noon lunch.

Traffic Officer Broughton was the main witness for the prosecution. He testified that on June 11 about 10 p.m. he saw Perrin and five other persons acting in a boisterous manner and drinking on the lawn at South Beach. He went back to the highway to survey traffic ,and because, he said, the cars at the Beach would have to come out by that road. The first one he stopped was driven by Perrin with five other companions.

"I found a gallon jar that contained wine on the back seat. When Perrin got out he was unsteady on his feet, his tongue was thick, and I could smell liquor off fhim."

Mr. Broughton produced the jar of 160 fluid ounce capacity, still nearly two-thirds full of San Juan sherry.

Mr. Gordon—"Why didn't you arrest Perrin at South Beach instead of letting his drive his car out to the highway?"

Mr. Broughton—"There were three or four other drivers I considered were in the same condition and I thought they would come out to the road and I could stop there there"

"Did Perrin say anything to you about the jar of wine?" "No"

"What happened to the three other intoxicated drivers?"

"I could tell you. My idea was to come out and contact several other officers and arrest the whole bunch, but in the meantime Perrin came out."

"Was there any accident that night with Perrin's car?" "No."

Witness said Perrin was driving at about 25 miles an hour. "He was in no fit condition to drive the car when I stopped him."

Mr. Broughton said the other occupants of the car were also intoxicated, and showed more effects of liquor than Perrin did.

Mr. Gordon—"Did Perrin say he didn't know the jar was in the car?"

"I can't remember anything about that"

The officer said he did not make an arrest at South Beach because he would have rounded up three drivers but ten others equally guilty would have got away.

Two Women in Party.

Alf. McKee corroborated Officer Broughton's evidence about the party on the South Beach lawn. There were two women and three men besides Perrin. They were noisy and getting in and out of the car.

"I saw him again at the police station. He still seemed to be under the influence of liquor."

To Mr. Gordon he said it was 10.15 p.m. when he saw Perrin's car at South Beach. It was dark but the lights of the hotel illuminated the place.

Constable Clarke said he saw Perrin at the police station. "I figured he had been drinking. If I seen him in that condition in a car I'd have arrested him."

Waiters' Evidence.

Lawrence E. Boyler, 20, for the defence, told Mr. Gordon he was employed at the South Beach hotel on June 11. "I was in the beverage room waiting on tables. Mr. Perrin came in and asked for six pints of beer. He didn't drink the full pint, and didn't seem to want any. He went out before finishing his pint. I don't know whether he finished it or some one else did."

Boyler said he didn't think Mr. Perrin was intoxicated "at all times" at the hotel that night, but the other members of the party were.

To Mr. Kerr he said he did not work regularly in the beverage room; only when business was exceptionally heavy. Boyler stated that the other members of the Perrin party were cut off at one round of pints because they were intoxicated. He believed these five others had arrived at the Beach in that condition.

Saw Perrin Walking.

Miss Ida Godfrey was in the balcony at the hotel that night. She said she saw Perrin walk from the beverage room to his car. He got out of it once and drove away. Miss Godfrey said Mr. Perrin was "perfectly sober." She had been employed at the Beach hotel for seventeen years, Miss Godfrey stated to Mr. Kerr. The balcony, she said, was over the beverage room.

"Why were you interested in Mr. Perrin?" Mr. Kerr asked.

"Because my brother was in the party."

Miss Godfrey said she had known Mr. Perrin for five years and had never seen him intoxicated.

George Perrin, defendant, said he had taken a party of five to South Beach on June 11.

Examined by Mr. Gordon, he said he drank about half a pint of beer at the hotel. "I went out because my feet had been hurting me and I was uncomfortable. I went into the men's beverage room where I talked to a man, and when I went out the others were also outside."

Mr. Perrin said he did not know the jar of wine was in the car, and he denied he had acted in a nosy manner as told by Mr. Broughton. He had one other drink that day about 5.30 p.m. in Peterborough.

"I was just as sober that night as I am now. Brought asked me to walk a straight line and I did so," Perrin said.

Mr. Kerr — "You think Mr. Broughton was quite mistaken as to your condition?" "I do."

"Did you know one of your party had bought the wine that day? "I did not."

Unaware of Wine.

Perrin sad the wine must have been placed in the car while he was at the home of one of the members of the party before leaving Peterborough.

Magistrate Langley— "When did this walking take place at Broughton's order?" "Just after I was arrested."

Broughton, recalled, told Magistrate Langley he did ask Perrin to walk on the road when arrested. "It was dark, the roaw was muddy and I couldn't distinguish well enough how he walked. I couldn't see whether he walked tsraight or not. I didn't think it was a fair test for him."

Mr. Gordon— "You testified he had staggered? What about that?"

"Probably I should have said "weaving." It was when he was standing beside the car."

Magistrate Langley adjourned the case until Friday when he will hear argument by the Crown and Mr. Gordon.

King George Unveils Anzac War Memorial

Premier Reviews 900 Air Troops

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Aug. 3 (CP).—Prime Minister Mackenzie King, in company with Air Commodore G. M. Croil, of the Royal Canadian Air Force, Ottawa, today paid his first official visit to the Royal Canadian Air Force base, Trenton. Nine hundred troops of the unit gathered on muster parade to welcome the Prime Minister who inspected men and officers and all buildings and equipment of the base.

He arrived in Belleville at dawn—his trip unheralded Not until Sunday were local officials aware of the visit. After lunch with Air Commodore Croil and Mr. C. A. Cameron, K.C., M.P., for South Hastings, he left for Ottawa. He arrived here from Kingston following his official opening restored Fort Henry there yesterday.

No statement was made by the Prime Minister, nor was any address given the officers or men of the Air Force following his review of the marching troops on the parade ground. No welcoming committee of official nature from either Belleville or Trenton was on hand and no aerial display or flights was presented by pilots of the force during the review and inspection.

Crops Battered, Trees Felled But Most Of England Swelters

LONDON, Aug. 3—(AP).—Storms swept across western England today, battering crops and felling trees, but most of the island sweltered in a heat wave.

The most severe rainstorm in 40 years flooded streets in the southwest corner of England to a depth of eight feet. Motorists had to use headlights during the day.

The heat belt extended from the south coast to Scotland and thousands slept on beaches, fields, and roadsides. Others walked streets throughout the night, unable to sleep. Yesterday's peak temperatures were 86 in Brighton and 85 in London.

New Jap Flood

TOKYO, August 3—(AP)—Domei (Japanese News Agency) reported that torrential rains lashed Kobe today, swelling the Tenno River, smashing dikes and one bridge and flooding 60 houses. Casualties were not mentioned in first reports.

In Shikoku prefecture 7,000 houses were destroyed or damaged.

Millbrook Swept By Its Worst Gale

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, Aug. 3—Thursday's electrical storm was one of the worst ever experienced in this district, and the rainfall, so reavy for some length of time that vision was blurred even across the street, accompanied by hail in the storm that occurred around the noon hour.

An aerial on the east side of the Waverly Building was struck about 11 a.m., blowing out all fuses in the building so that both lights and telephones were cut off for some hours; a small hole was burned in the rug on the floor of the living-room in the apartment occupied by Mr. and Mrs. L. M. Bonneville, and the radio tubes also burned out.

Gardens were flattened and small fruit beaten off the bushes. Storm sewers were taxed to carry off the surplus water, and Attwooll and Sheppard were obliged to lift some logs at the dam of their pond, with the result that the creek flooded over its banks and was almost up to King street, between the Town Hall and the Donnelly building; all other creeks in the village were far beyond the confines of their usual channels.

Telephone service, and lighting, in the community were both interefered with to a considerable extent, the burning out of a transformer on Anne street leaving the homes in that vicinity without lights all afternoon.

Lights were off again in the evening all over the village for a comparatively short time, but compared with damage done in other localities, Millbrook suffered little inconvenience or harm.

A few limbs were blown off the trees at various points, but no serious damage has been reported in this respect, and by Friday water had receded and things generally were back to normal again.

Veteran Loses Finger But Doesn't Miss It

TORONTO, Aug. 3—(CP).—Detective Hector Barber reported today he had located the owned of an index finger, which was turned in to headquarters by a taxi driver Saturday night.

The owner was a veteran returning home from Canadian Corps Reunion celebrations, Barber said. The detective said the veteran told him that apparently the finger became jammed in the door of the taxi.

"I didn't know it was cut off until I reached home and saw the blood," Barber said the veteran told him.

Attorney Dodge Held In Bribery

NEW YORK, Aug. 3 (AP).—District Attorney Thomas E. Dewey today named William C. Dodge, former District Attorney, an active city magistrate and a former city magistrate, as having been involved in bribes or intimidations in connection with the late Dutch Schultz' multi-million dollar policy racket.

In addition to Dodge, Dewey named Magistrate Hulon Capshaw and the late Magistrate Francis Irwin.

Dodge, a former district attorney and magistrate, long has been a power in Tammany Hall.

A special detail of police guarded a crowded courtroom as J. Richard (Dixie) Davis, former Schultz attorney and co-defendant with James J. Hines, erstwile powerful Tammany leader, appeared to enter his plea. They are accused of conspiracy in the policy racket.

Dewey announced last week that Davis had agreed to turn state's evidence and would appear as the prosecution's star witness.

Hepburn Probes B.C. Gold Mine

GOLBRIDGE, B.C., Aug. 3—(CP).—Premier Mitchell Hepburn of Ontario, who has seen Western Canada from the air, land and water, was ready to-day for an underground sight-seeing tour of the Pioneer Mine, one of the biggest producers in the Bridge River gold mining area

The Premier, who arrived by plane from Vancouver yesterday at Gun Lake, seven miles from here, was scheduled to make the tour of examination with J. P. Bickell of Toronto and Ben Smith of New York, both of whom are interested in the mine.

The trio spent the night at Smith's log chalet on Gun Lake, entirely without communication with the outside world until an automobile was sent from here this morning to pick them up.

To a welcoming party headed by George M. Murray, member of the British Columbia Legislature for Lillooet, Mr. Hepburn said he was going to "fish in Gun Lake, roam the adjoining trails and swap stories with Jim MacaIsaac," the Highland caretaker of the chalet. He refused to discuss "government" matters and said he had no plans regarding the length of his stay.

The Premier and his companions made the 120-mile flight from Vancouver here in a chartered plane while the big amphibian in which they made most of their aerial tour of the west was checked by its flier, Pilot Jimmy Towne. It will be ready for the air again Wednesday

The machine used by Coote will inaugurate a new air-mail service between Vancouver and Fort St John, BC., Aug. 4.

Savings are being deposited in England's three government thrift organizations at the rate of over $5,000,000 a week.

Science Show Educational To Young Folk

Of all the men who devote their lives to science, humanity owes the most to the least publicized and the least acclaimed—the research worker.

Most of the great modern inventions, including those typified in the great "Previews of Progress" which opens at the Exhibition Grounds Thursday evening, owe their inception to the pioneering efforts of laboratory scientists. They may have had no clear idea of the future application o ftheir discoveries, yet without the basic scientific facts they have uncovered, new improvements would not have been possible. Thus the comfort of millions of people may depend on the distant and apparently unrelated activity of men with test tubes.

"Previews of Progress" is dramatized in such a way that the credit and glory for our phenomenal progress is reflected on the men in research departments. The work that is now being done in the leading industrial laboratories of the world has been carefully guarded from the public eye, but now, as a means of building confidence in the future and stimulating the ambition of youth to new worlds of opportunity, the veil of secrecy has been torn away.

"Previews of Progress" is a dramatic stage presentation which portrays the developments which are likely to issue from laboratories in the next generation.

The amazing science drama will come to Peterborough upon the invitation of the Peterborough Examiner and all the Peterborough Civic Organizations. Under their auspices thousands of local citizens will catch a glimpse of the scientific accomplishments which are likely to become commonplace twenty years hence.

Cold stoves, new communication systems, heatless furnaces and other sensational discoveries will be demonstrated in non-technical language by a research engineer who has been acclaimed one of the finest scientific commentators in the world today.

"Previews of Progress" is more than an educational show. It is first class entertainment. Men, women and children alike will enjoy it. The free admission makes it possible for everyone to attend, and show officials estimate that in the two day showing more than 6,000 persons will witness the spectacle.

Runciman Leaves On Czech Mission Will Act As Unofficial Mediator

LONDON, Aug. 3 (CP Cable). — Viscount Runciman left today for Praha on a mission demanding all the tact and diplomacy for which the shipping magnate is noted. If successful in mediating Czechoslovakia's tangled Sudeten German problem he will contribute a lasting chapter to Great Britain's efforts to restore peace.

The former cabinet minister goes as an unofficial mediator, not as an arbitrator. He does not represent the British government and takes no prepared British plan to restore peace to Europe's latest danger zone.

But if Lord Runciman evolves a plan which appeals to the British government as a fair and amicable solution, it might form the basis of an official British suggestion.

The statesman was accompanied by Lady Runciman. His staff left by air for Praha this morning but Lord Runciman took the longer journey by way of Paris where he expects to see French government leaders.

Of his plans, Lord Runciman only said:—

"I hope to spend some time interviewing representatives of both sides and also visiting some of the parts where the political contrast is more strongly marked."

More than 700,000 are expected to attend the international fair in Izmir, Turkey.

Ban On Jews 'Defence' Says Italy

Explain Refugees Come Broke In Tourist Role

ROME, Aug. 4 (AP).—Premier Mussolini's newspaper at Milan, Il Popolo D'Italia, explained today that a prohibition against Jewish foreign students in Italy was a "defence measure" necessitated by an influx of Jewish refugees from Germany, Danubian and Balkan countries.

The paper declared many such refugees came to Italy with tourist documents and insufficient funds with which to establish themselves in the country.

The government yesterday barred foreign Jews from Italian schools, a measure of limited scope since it does not affect Italian Jews. Foreigners attending Italian schools in 1936-37 totalled 2,612. The proportion of Jews was not known but it was believed to be not large.

The Milan newspaper asserted it had been necessary to dismiss Italian workers to make room for the newcomers.

Italian Jews considered the decree significant, as the first practical step in line with the newly-announced Fascist doctrine that Jews "do not belong to the Italian race." Creditable sources foresaw early appearance of a law governing activities of Italian Jews.

Posse Hunting Madoc Man

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, Aug. 4.— Missing since early Tuesday, 42 year old Hugh Jones of Madoc, is to-day being sought by anxious relatives, police and a posse of villagers. Jones, who has been suffering from a malady for some time, is believed to have been affected by the intense heat prevailing and might have wandered into the bush. A posse of villagers from Madoc under Provincial Constable Dymond was organized early Wednesday, while surrounding police were requested to be on the alert in an effort to find the missing man.

Elizabeth 38 Today Has Family Party

LONDON, Aug. 4 (AP). — Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret scurried along the corridors aboard the royal yacht Victoria and Albert today to the suite of their mother, Queen Elizabeth, with gifts for her 38th birthday.

They had hidden the packages in their nursery cabin since the start of the family's "go as you please" vacation-cruise began July 28.

The yacht travelled up the east coast and was expected to dock at Aberdeen today for the royal family's annual visit to Scotland.

At a "family party" attended by the officers of the yacht, the King handed gifts to his wife from himself and others of the family.

The yacht's crew clubbed together to buy the Queen a present and got a doubled rum ration or the day in honor of the occasion.

London, Aug. 4 (CP-Havas)

"THEY SHALL NOT PASS!" Frederick Young, unemployed, who lives in Walthampstow with his wife and seven children, proclaimed today in a placard he hung at his window as police and sheriff's deputies sought to evict him and his family.

"We're staying," another sign announced defiantly, and a third said "This is England. The fourth of August, the anniversary of the outbreak of the war. What a country to be proud of!"

But the authorities were not diverted from their mission, even though, in addition to the placards, Young had fastened a Union Jack to the chimney and barricaded the door.

He decided to capitulate when police informed him that if he continued to resist he would be arrested. He announced he was yielding only because he did not want to see additional suffering inflicted upon his family by his being thrown into jail.

Left In Fog, Returning In One Corrigan Wisecracks As Liner Nears New York

S.S. MANHATTAN, AT SEA, Aug. 4 (AP).—Douglas Corrigan, very important in the minds of Irishmen, grinned with pleasure today as he stood at the rail of his New York-bound liner and looked forward to the welcome awaiting him.

The ship moved at half-speed through fog. Corrigan was in a fog, too, or at least he said he was as he remembered all that has happened to him in the month past—the flight in the old crate from California him in New York, for he had got and his surprise at finding himself in Dublin, of all places.

He knew, of course, what awaited him in New York, for he had got more than a dim idea of New York's frenzied greetings a couple of days before he started his wild transatlantic flight, when the city went a little balmy over Howard Hughes and his four world-circling companions.

Plenty Of Offers.

A month ago, Corrigan was remembering, he was just another flier with an airplane that moved one and all to wisecracks. Few had heard of him. To-day he was the most talked of flier, and to him had come offers to make all kinds of money he had never dreamed of making—offers to endorse commercial products such as tooth paste and cigarettes, appear in night clubs or in front of movie cameras.

"But I can't sing and I can't dance," Corrigan grinned. "So I guess I'll stay in aviation."

Autograph seekers still beset him as he stood at the rail talking. Most of his speeches were limited to a word or a phrase.

He wore the old leather jacket and gray trousers he had on when he flew solo from New York to Ireland.

"If I make another flight in the old plane I expect to set the compass properly," he said.

And though he has been offered so much money to do this or that in night clubs and on the stage he appeared a little concerned that no definite offer of a job in aviation had come his way.

Again he insisted that it was all a mistake that he went to Ireland instead of going home to California that July 17 dawn when he left Floyd Bennett Field.

Citizen Lauded For His Aid As Thief Jailed

HAMILTON, Aug. 4.—(CP). — Citizen co-operation and the prompt response of Constable William Stamp and Steven Tweddle last night resulted in the recovery of the loot and the arrest, within five minutes, of the men responsible for a smash-and-grab robbery perpetrated at Firth's tailoring store.

In magistrate's court, Thomas Smith, 30, elected high court trial but, after the Crown witnesses described events, he changed his election, pleaded guilty to shopbreaking and theft and was sentenced to two years in Kingston penitentiary.

"I did it because I was hungry—I didn't have a job," Smith said.

"Your trouble is you cannot keep your hands off other people's property," observed Magistrate H. A. Burbridge. Harvey McCulloch, Assistant Crown Attorney, reminded the court that the accused man had been apprehended after a smash-and-grab robbery several weeks ago when police traced a trail of blood that resulted when he lacerated his hand on broken glass.

Praise From Bench

"Hamilton citizens have built up a fine reputation for assisting police and I must congratulate you for the keen judgment and co-operation you showed last night," the magistrate told Mr. Reinert after calling him to the bench when the sentence was passed upon the prisoner.

Constable Steven Tweddle ran four blocks to the scene of the theft last night after George Robson had told him a window had been smashed. Learning the thief had run east on Cannon street he started searching the rear of the business premises. He found three men's suits and a moment later met Constable William Stamp and the Toronto citizen with the prisoner.

Mr. Reinert had witnessed the daring theft and pursued the thief to Hughson street where he lost him, it was revealed in court. Seeking aid, he met Constable Stamp and they resumed the search, finding Smith hiding behind a hedge.

"I tried a noble experiment with you in 1935 by allowing you suspended sentence in spite of three previous convictions," Magistrate Burbidge told accused as he passed sentence.

BERLIN, Aug. 4 (AP)—The German government protested sharply today to Czechoslovakia against alleged violation of the frontier yesterday by two Czechoslovak airplanes. It demanded punishment to the persons involved.

A DNB (Germany official news agency) report from Glatz, 12 miles from the German-Czechoslovak frontier, yesterday asserted two Czechoslovak airplanes flew into Germany and observers photographed the town.

Cloudy Skies Bring Little Relief

Weather Remains Hot, Sticky; New Heat Marks

TORONTO, Aug. 4 (CP).—The sun shone brightly over most of Western Canada today, giving scant promise of relief from heat which gripped the Dominion yesterday. Thunderstorms were general in eastern Canada, but with their passing the weather was hot and sticky, although cloudy skies in some sections gave promise of surcease from heat.

Cooler weather prevailed in many spots in Ontario, the province which felt most the effects of a glaring sun yesterday. The mercury dropped 7 degrees at Peterborough, one of the hottest places in the Dominion yesterday with a temperature of 96 degrees, but scattered showers failed to offer much relief in the western part of the province where Galt, Stratford, Brantford and Kitchener reported hot, sticky weather with a mounting mercury.

Northern Ontario found only brief relaxation from the heat in morning storms. The temperature was 80 at Sudbury, shortly before noon, while at North Bay it was six degrees lower as cooling breezes swept in off Lake Nipissing. Sault Ste. Marie, where the mercury touched 87 yesterday for a new high, apparently was in for another hot day.

90 at Montreal

It was bright and sunny at Montreal, where the temperature around noon was 90. Weather bureau officials there said it was the highest reading since July 1, 1931, when a record 97 was reached. Montrealers, however, bore the heat better than yesterday as the humidity slipped to 60 overnight from 76. At Lake Megantic, Que., a sawmill and a private home were damaged by fire started by lightning.

A violent electrical storm swept over part of New Brunswick and an inch of rain fell in Saint John in a half hour this morning. Most parts of the province reported cloudy and warm weather. The temperature in Saint John was 76 degrees, two degrees lower than in Halifax in neighboring Nova Scotia.

Clear skies and a bright sun indicated higher temperatures during the day for Regina, Moose Jaw and Saskatoon. It was the same for Edmonton and Winnipeg, and most other western cities although Edmonton experienced slight showers during the night.

Dorset Trucker Killed In Crash

BRADFORD, Ont., Aug. 4 (CP).—Henry J. Adamson, 22, Dorset, Muskoka, driver of a south-bound truck owned by Clayton's general store, Dorset, was killed today in a collision with a north-bound truck and trailer driven by G. McMillan, 35, Meaford, and owned by Picot Transport, Meaford, on King's Highway 11, three miles north of Bradford.

Police said Adamson was driving south pretty well over to the east side of the highway and that McMillan, in an effort to avert an accident, pulled over on the east shoulder at the intersection with a concession road and dropped 15 feet into a deep ditch on the east side of the road. The left front corner of the truck, driven by Adamson, struck the trailer of McMillan's truck.

Coroner Dr. Frank Shannon, Churchill, after viewing the remains and the scene of the accident, decided that an inquest was unnecessary.

British authorities have declined to relax regulations which require a six months' quarantine on dogs entering England and Hazel remains aboard the liner. She appealed to the King to intervene in her behalf.

Vast British Arms Program May Save European War

No Other Nation Able To Keep Her Pace As She Makes Up For Lost Time

LONDON, Aug. 4 (CP).—Great Britain may lead Europe back to disarmament and collective security by the paradoxical method of spending hundreds of millions of pounds on war materials.

Britain is spending £359,017,500 ($1,795,087,500) this year on a vast rearmament program designed to build up a defence force which will be a match for any aggressor nation striking at her shores. It is one of the greatest rearmament programs the world has ever seen and embraces the army, navy and air force.

For years after the war Britain pinned her faith to disarmament and collective security through the League of Nations. Repeated efforts were made to promote international understanding and to reach international agreement for the reduction and limitation of arms. Britain was willing to take a risk for peace.

But the policy failed her. Other nations armed while Britain scrapped ships, almost disbanded the air force and permitted her army to sink to low levels of personnel and modern efficiency.

Britain finally woke up to the realities of the situation, realized she was easy prey for several European countries, realized the principle of collective security had failed for the time being—and started to arm.

Staggering Figures.

Attempting to make up for lost ground in the world armament race, Britain started a program under which £1,500,000,000 ($7,500,000,000) could be spent in five years.

But, while Britain is arming at a rate the world never witnessed before in peace time, she leaves the door open to a world agreement on disarmament. And this is where the paradox comes in—Britain having entered the arms race, no other European nation can keep up to her pace and there is every hope that Europe will return to sanitay and a

Cyclone Lashes Path Of Ruin Across Quebec

QUEBEC, Aug. 4—(CP).—A cyclonic wind and rain storm that raged over Eastern Quebec last night and early to-day claimed one life and left an unknown number of casualties in its wake as the wind lifted rooms from scores of buildings, flattened barns and caused about $250,000 damage.

The lone fatality reported was at St. Pierre in Montmagny County, where Alfred Caron, a 48-year-old unmarried farmer, was killed with the horse he was driving when struck by a bolt of lightning. His 13-year-old niece, Cecile Letourneau, was burned seriously.

Communication lines were felled and highway blocked by fallen poles and trees as the storm spread havoc all the way from Three Rivers to Quebec and on eastward.

In St. Thecle, about 30 miles north of Three Rivers, the twin spires of the Roman Catholic church were toppled and several barns were blown down. Cyrille Lachance suffered a broken arm and his young son sustained cuts and bruises when their home was completely destroyed. No other serious injuries were reported. Father M. Masson, parish priest, said the damage to the church would run to several thousand dollars.

Tombestones Tumble

Bricks from the presbytery chimney were hurtled through the stained glass windows of the church. Crosses and tombstones in a nearby cemetery were bowled over.

The wind tore the roofs off more than 30 buildings, including the local convent and parochial school. About 15 barns and sheds were flattened.

Arthur Cloutier, a baker, narrowly escaped injury while riding along the road in his delivery wagon, when the storm was at its peak. The force of the wind lifted Cloutier, his horse and wagon over a fence and carried them 100 feet into a neighboring field.

At Three Rivers, cellars were flooded and heavy damage caused to power lines and trees as a 40-minute storm climaxed the year's hottest day which saw the temperature soar to 90 degrees. The fire alarm system was put out of order and cleanup and repair crews were pressed into service. A barn at St. Catherine, in Portneuf county, was struck by lightning and destroyed. Another at Yamachiche was levelled.

Japs Propose Fighting End And Both Nations Move Troops From Border

Tokyo Hints Proposal Will Unmask Russia's Real Intentions; Refusal To Unleash Jap Air Force

TOKYO, Aug. 4 (CP-Havas).—Japan today proposed to the Soviet Union immediate cessation of hostilities on the Siberian-Manchoukuo frontier near Korea.

The proposal was made by Vice-Foreign Minister Kensuke Horinouchi to the Soviet Charge d'Affaires, Constantin Smetanin, during a two-hour conference at the Foreign Office this morning.

Horinouchi proposed a mutual agreement to cease hostilities in the border zone where fighting has been intermittently underway since Sunday.

Simultaneously, it was learned, Ambassador Mamoru Shigemitsu in Moscow called on the Soviet Foreign Commissar, Maxim Litvinoff, and presented a series of concrete proposals for termination of the dispute.

Shigemitsu's proposals were understood to be the following:

1. Cessation of hostilities.

2. Withdrawal of Japanese and Soviet troops to a stipulated distance of either side of the disputed strip of hilly country around Changkufeny and Shatsaopin.

3. Temporary neutralization of the area and resumption of negotiations for creation of one or more commissions to delimit the frontier and settle further border incidents.

A Little Strategy?

Japanese spokesmen said these proposals showed Japan's moderation and would serve to "uncloak" Moscow's "real intentions." By offering to withdraw her troops, they said, Japan would compensate for the loss of prestige which the Russians would suffer by abandoning the attempt to re-take Changkufeng by force of arms.

The Horinouchi-Smetanin interview took place in a strained atmosphere. A war office spokesman told the press "there is a limit to Japanese patience" and warned that unless Soviet attacks seased the Japanese air force, until now kept grounded, would be ordered into action.

At the Horinouchi-Smetanin interview, the Soviet charge d'affaires, charged the Japanese with aggression along the disputed points of the Manchouko-Korean, Siberian border.

The Russians sent four battalions against Changkufeng and Shachofeng last night but lost 200 men when Japanese repelled them, a Japanese army communique announced today, after "thousands of flares" exposed their ranks in a thick fog.

The Soviets were said to have abandoned 15 tanks and 25 cannon. The Japanese war office failed to estimate the number of Russian soldiers involved or the number of Japanese casualties, but said 250 tanks had been concentrated in the area.

Tokyo awaited anxiously the report of Mamoru Shigemitsu, Japanese Ambassador to Moscow, following a conference with Maxim Litvinoff, Soviet commissar for foreign affairs, scheduled for today.

It was believed the fate of the border "incident rested on the Russian attitude. (A Moscow dispatch yesterday said "serious consequenc-

Guenet Rescuer Is Awarded Humane Medal

HAMILTON, Ont., Aug. 4 (CP).—The Royal Canadian Humane Association has announced the ward of its bronze medal to J. B. Gaudreau (124 Marquette St.) Quebec, in recognition of his part in the rescue of the Quenet survey party in the Nottaway River district of northern Quebec last winter.

The association's announcement reads:

"Mr. Gaudreau, who is a land surveyor for the Department of Lands and Forests (Quebec) went to the rescue of Romeo Guenet and 15 of his men, whom he located on the Nottaway River. When Mr. Gaudreau found these men, two were at the point of death as a result of exposure and starvation. Mr. Guenet himself had lost 48 pounds. Two men had to be carried to the A1 lane. Mr. Gaudreau devoted himself to this heroic task, not only without remuneration but through spirit of humanitarism."

Mr. Gaudreau led the search for the Quebec government survey party headed by Lt.-Col. J. Romeo Guenet which was snatched from death New Year's day in the frozen muskeg country of northern Quebec.

Diet of Rabbits.

The Guenet Harty was flown in the north Aug. 25 to survey a 96-mile line from Lake Evans to the Ontario-Quebec boundary. The work was to have been finished Dec. 10, the men planning to be home for Christmas. Their food supplies ran out Nov. 22 and they were unable to find a cache placed a month previously. Hunting was poor, but from then on they lived mostly on rabbits.

Without wireless the party was unable to signal its plight or its location. On the evening of Dec. 31 Mr. Gaudreau and Air Engineer J. H. Lucas, in a plane piloted by G. R. Spradbrow, landed when they sighted one of the missing party waving at the plane. "They threw their arms around our necks and cried," Spradbrow said afterwards.

Leo Bernier, a 24-year-old member of the party, was in serious condition from lack of food, and was flown to hospital at Moosonee, Ont., immediately. The other surveyors were brought out during the next two days. All recovered from their partial starvation and exposure.

Despite their experiences from lack of food and being stranded for 39 days with the temperature at times 40 below zero, Col. Guenet maintained "we still could have made another month."

Japs Raid British Hospital Grab 103 Wounded Chinese

HANGCHOW, China, Aug. 4 (AP). —Japanese troops posted machine-gun guards around the British-operated church missionary society hospital today and removed 103 wounded Chinese soldiers, under treatment since Japanese occupation of the city Christmas eve.

The hospital reported to the British embassy, charging non-recognition of the British flag and a violation of a written agreement providing that approximately 200 wounded should remain in the hospital for the duration of the war.

The Japanese marched into the hospital and tried for six hours to induce Dr. Stephen Sturton, superintendent, to give them written permission to remove the soldiers. Failing in this, the 103 soldiers who were presumed to have recovered from their wounds were taken by trucks to an unspecified destination.

Women Show Skill With Odds and Ends

HALIFAX, Aug. 4 (CP).—A woman's skill with a hairpin, applied to everything from opening locks to fixing refractory stoves is proverbial—but you ought to see what they can do with a few odds and ends of wool, a few tin cans and some discarded burlap bags.

The most-attended section of the handicraft show at the Women's Institutes of Nova Scotia silver jubilee convention here was the thrift division. There were shorts for father, made from flour bags. There were suits for baby, made from a discarded paternal sweater. Junior's trousers might have been anything from a cut-down dinner jacket to a well-trodden doormat, while attractive and useful footstools were made from old tin cans.

But that wasn't all. Beautifully done needlepoint for chairs and intricately-patterned samplers were displayed.

At a "different" dog show in Barking, England, only mongrels were permitted.

Miss Rachel White,

24th Anniversary of Aug. 4 Sees War Still Major Topic

LONDON, Aug. 4.—(AP).—With wars and war talk claiming the anxious attention of much of the world, London newspapers put unusual emphasis to-day on the 24th anniversary of Great Britain's declaration of war on Germany.

The Times (Independent) in a review of the world situation declared that "as year after year passes International conditions do not grow less but rather more akin to those of the immediate pre-war period."

The Daily Express (Independent) linked the present danger of war with a current wave of hoarding of gold.

"Now a quarter century after, the panic mongers of finance are still perpetuating the miserable fear that seized them at the outbreak of the war, fear for their worldly possessions," it said.

The News Chronicle (Liberal) commented: "A new world is closing in on contemporary youth. It is a restless, fascinating, swift-moving frightening, formidable world which gives no quarter and may at any moment burn up millions of its youth in the fiercest conflagration of all time."

A Glorious Adventure.

The Daily Herald (Labor) declared: "The young men and women of Great Britain are dangerously near coming to think of the war, and therefore any possible future war, as a great and glorious adventure.

"The rub is in the lessons of Guernica (Spain), of bombed hospitals, of little Spanish children disembowelled by airmen who remember daily their own dear sons and daughters in Italy and Germany."

"It was a bitter lesson we learned," said the Daily Sketch (Independent), "and those of us who have any influence at all over the minds of youth would do well to see there is no self-deception about the glory and romance and glamor of carnage."

The Mirror (Independent) asserted: "What did they die for?

"Peace, we used to answer with the ring of pride in our voices for the heroes fallen in a great ideal.

"But how many of us can answer 'peace' to-day to that question?

"The answer from the living is a shocked silence. But the answer from the dead, from all those millions of nameless graves, is 'Nothing'."

London, Ont., Aug. 4 (CP)

TODAY was a hot one. In fact, it was so hot that two hungry farm lads fried eggs in a frying pan over the simmering pavement of the City Market. What's more, they ate the eggs, which were done to a turn.

Market officials tested the sunny pavement with a thermometer. The mercury registered 110 degrees, which was the limit of the glass.

Value Seen Only Slightly Below 1937 With Total Of $2,500,000; Corn, Oat Yields Reported Down

CHICAGO, Aug. 4 (AP).—The United States 1938 grain harvest of more than 4,500,000,000 bushels, one of the largest on record, was estimated today to have a market value of almost $2,500,000,000.

Analysts based this estimate on the forecasts of the six Chicago crop experts whose August summaries indicated total production of wheat, corn, oats and rye would amount to approximately 4,584,000,000 bushels.

With the exception of last year's production of these major grains, which totalled 4,715,000,000 bushels, and had a market value of slightly more than $3,000,000,000, the 1938 harvest will be the greatest since 1932.

Other valuation at market was based on Chicago prices for grain deliverable in the fall and winter.

The corn crop to be harvested this fall was estimated to have a market value of $1,343,000,000 compared with $1,555,000,000 last year. The wheat crop, now more than half reaped, was valued at $645,840,000 compared with $935,172,000 last year. Oats were valued at $254,000,000 and rye at $24,380,000.

Under Arrest

After a stiff fist battle with police, Oscar Campbell, ABOVE, alleged burderer and bank robber, along with four alleged members of the Campbell gang were arrested, at their hideout in a summer cottage near Manotic and Kars, Ont. Campbell is wanted in Montreal for the alleged murder of a companion in crime and in addition is suspected of numerous armed robberies. Police are now searching for his brother, Melville.

Slain Bandit's Gang Kills 6 In Revenge

MACEIO, Alagoas State, Brazil, Aug. 4—(AP)—The bandit Corisco, called "Lightning," rode out of the backwoods in Northeastern Brazil today and struck at the remote town of Fazenda in a bloody vengeance spree, killing six.

Corisco, a surviving lieutentant of one-eyed Lampeao, long known as Brazil's "public enemy No. 1" and the most ruthless bandit killer of the Western world, killed five relatives of the wife of a police lieutenant who last week led a pitched battle against Lampeao's men in which Lampeao was slain.

A cowboy was Corsico's sixth victim. Corisco sent the heads of the six to the prefecture officials in the town of Piranhas. Last week the police slayers of Lampeao, known as the "Lamp Post," brought his head to civilization as a "trophy of war."

Hogs Have Dropped More Than $2 Cwt.

Price of hogs on the Peterborough market has dropped more than two dollars during the past two weeks. It had formerly reached a several years' high at nearly $12 a hundred, now stands at $9.40.

Drop in the price is caused by a much heavier supply of hogs being marketed and by weakness in the export market, according to Graham Eastwood of Canada Packers. The English market is weak, Englishmen objecting to the price of bacon in recent weeks. "It's a matter of supply and demand," he said.

Seven Basic Rules To Help Keep Cool

TORONTO, Aug. 4 (CP)—Seven basic rules to avoid collapse and to minimize the discomforts of the present heat wave were set forth today by Dr. J. T. Phair, chief medical officer in the Ontario Department of Health. They are:

Use an added quantity of salt in seasoning food in hot weather, thereby replacing the excess amounts of salt lost in perspiration.

Adopt a diet moderate in amount and made up of foods low in fat content. Avoid use of "too much" salad dressing.

Drink plenty of water.

Avoid strenuous exercises — particularly competitive exercises.

Obtain adequate sleep and rest—the burning of energy creates heat but the metabolism of the body is lowered while resting.

Wear light-weight, loose-fitting clothing.

When zinc was first discovered, it was considered more precious than platinum.

$100,000 Lumber Yard Fire Hits Penetang

PENETANG, Aug. 4. — Firemen collapsed, trains were delayed and close to $100,000 damage resulted from a spectacular fire which wiped out thousands of feet of dressed lumber at the McGibbon Lumber Yard yesterday.

The blaze was still being fought at a late hour last night, but was gradually burning itself out as firemen from surrounding areas aided local brigades to bring it under control.

It was the worst fire this town has experienced in many years. Only the fact that the lumber yard is situated some distance from the more thickly populated area prevented a general conflagration, which might have meant the destruction of most of the town's buildings.

Fire reels from Perkinsfield, hurrying to Penetang in response to a call for aid, broke down on the road and did not reach the scene until after 6 o'clock. An emergency call to Midland brought a pumper and crew to the spot, but the augmented brigade could do little against the roaring inferno as heat-baked lumber fell easy prey to the flames.

Brigade Uses Shields

Firemen tore doors off near-by sheds and used them as shields as they played hose on the flames. But the terrific heat caused many to collapse, though none was seriously injured. The flames could be seen for many miles and residents rushed to the lumber yard, but were kept at a safe distance.

It is believed the fire was caused by sparks from a C. N. R. train which passed through the yard a few minutes before the outbreak was noticed at 1:30 p.m. The huge piles of dressed lumber were quickly transformed into blazing mounds as the flames spread to all parts of the yard. Firemen were kept at a distance of 100 feet by the tremendous heat and the streams of water they poured into the inferno failed to show any appreciable effect.

Fifty firemen fought the hopeless battle and four hours after the alarm had been given only mounds of charcoal and ashes, extending over 150 feet in length, remained.

Railway service was disrupted for several hours, even after the combined efforts of the firemen had brought the fire under partial control. The rails were warped and twisted by the heat, making it impossible for the regular afternoon train to leave until late in the evening.

Victims In China 70 p.c. Women And Children

TORONTO, Aug. 4.— More than 70 per cent. of the patients admitted to hospitals in the Chinese war area are not soldiers, but women and children, Dr. Robert B. McClure said last night in an interview at the Union Station.

The Field Director of International Red Cross for Central China stepped down from his train at 10.30 p.m. to give a reporter an idea of how gruesome the fighting on the northern front had become. He arrived in Montreal last Friday from London.

"Our work is not nice work," he said. "Between 70 and 80 per cent of the patients are women, girls and children—people who should have been left out of this war business. Women are busy with their children and don't hear the siren blow. Then when the little house crumbles over their heads they realize it has come their way.

"The style in warfare has changed. One of the most depressing features of our work is that it makes us realize that if war ever lifts its head in this country, it would take the same form as in China now."

Dr. McClure said it was "jolly quiet" to get back into Canada after living in Chinese trenches.

Guerilla War.

"The war in China," he said, "is now a guerrilla one. The Chinese have got the formula. It's a game with them. They're taught to 'hunt' Japs."

"What is your status there? Are you neutral?" he was asked.

"Oh, we get shot at by both sides when we leave the safety zone. But neither side shoots straight." He added that by international law, "there ain't no such animal as a safety zone." Such as they are, he said, we are not really safe.

Mission hospitals, he said, whose trained staffs "stayed with the ship" even after all the windows had been smashed by shells and walls knocked down, were doing a great piece of work in caring for the seriously wounded.

"And the man with a through-and-through rifle bullet wound, without a bone fracture, is scarcely considered to be seriously wounded in these times," Dr. McClure asserted.

"We take those whom the Chinese feel they cannot treat. We work on them until they are on the road to recovery, then send them back to the rear. Their average stay is four weeks, during which time they average four operations. Eighty per cent of these have to be performed with the X-ray machine.

Wounded Seek Death

"There is one feature of this work," said the friendly, red-haired doctor, "that you must see to get a clear picture of the effects of air raids. Many of the civilian wounded pray to the doctors and sisters to ease their pain and put them out of their suffering rather than make them better. One sees little kiddies, 10 and 12, calling for some one to give them something to put them out of misery. This should never be.

"Modern warfare with its bombings of open towns and defended villages is very productive of orphans. Today there are 20,000 war orphans being looked after throughout China, 2,000 of them by the International Red Cross on the northern front."

On one raid, he said, one bomb in one hotel caused 500 deaths. "For three days as we passed that heap of brick we could hear groans and calls for help coming from within the ruins. Toward the end of May I saw a city of some 30,000 population that had had its first air raid. A swath of bombardment had cut down the middle of the city, with the levelled portion being a ribbon nearly a half mile wide and about two miles long."

The Japanese, Dr. McClure believed, could have easily conquered the nonchalant Chinese farmers, who care little about who governed them, if they had used tact instead of terrorism at the outset.

es" would be unavoidable if Japanese "provocations continued on the Siberian Border).

High Government officials gave assurance that Japan will not cross the existing ill-defined border. They said even now Japan is on the defensive, fighting only when the Russians attack.

Japs Playing With Fire

In Moscow the Tass (Russian) news agency announced the far eastern high command had been compelled to send in stronger reinforcements in order to match the steadily increasing strength of the troops on the Manchoukuoan side.

"The Japanese," a high source said, "are playing with fire. Despite the moderation of the Soviet Government, there are limits beyond which we will not be able to go."

Chief responsibility for the dispute was placed on the "delirium" of Japanese Kwantung (mainland) army officers, whose "thirst for glory led them to strive for a personal victory at the expense of Soviet border guards." When these hothead commanders realize the futility of their efforts, it was said, they will regain their senses.

See Moral Courage Need Of The World

STOCKHOLM, SWEDEN, Aug. 4 —(CP)—Pleading for peace on the 24th anniversary of the start of the Great War, Dr. J. A. N. Patijn, Foreign Minister of the Netherlands, today said the small nations of Europe are in a better position to apply moral principles than the great Nations.

Dr. Patijn arrived here to represent the Netherlands on an International team of the Oxford group, the religious organization headed by Dr. Frank Buchman.

"The need of the world is that the various nations shall understand one another," he said. "As reconcilers of the nations, we need God-guided statesmen, men of character and moral courage who have been freed from selfish ambition and fear of people.

"Moral courage is the need of the world today in its statesmen and in its citizens. When you are convinced that God has told you to do a thing then you should put it through and have the courage to act accordingly.

"When I have to make an important decision I have learned from the Oxford group to think it over during a quiet time of listening to God. After our quiet time each morning my wife and I talk over the guidance God has given us. This gives me a feeling of greater objectivity, and after a quiet time I often look differently at a question than before. I have found the greatest help in my work as foreign minister.

"The Oxford group's chief work is to change individuals; but in changing a sufficient number of individuals they have a great effect on the nation as a whole."

Burkholder Probe Is Postponed

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Aug. 4 (CP). —Inquest into the death of Sergt. Harry W. Burkholder of Hamilton was postponed today until August 18. Burkholder's body was found near the railway tracks here after a troop train carrying a Hamilton militia unit had passed en route to Petawawa and it was thought he had fallen off the train.

"Two military courts of inquiry sat in connection with the death, and while the results are not published I can say definitely that any suggestion of foul play was ruled out," said Major James P. Phin, officer commanding the 11th Field Battery, to which Burkholder was attached. Reports of the two courts will be submitted at the inquest.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, August 4 — (CP). — A firm tone prevailed in Winnipeg wheat future to-day, but prices made little headway due to lack of buying power. Final quotations were ½ to ¼ higher, October 76⅞, November 76⅜, December 75½ to ⅝, and May 78 cents.

Apart from a scattered export business, both in old and new crop wheats, and light favorable intermarket spreading, dealings were at a standstill most of the session.

Traders both at Winnipeg and Chicago, awaiting the Canadian Wheat Board pegged price announcement, were without incentives to buy or sell.

Liverpool closed ¼d higher to 1⅞d lower after a quiet session.

Canada Pins Hopes For Power Boats On Ingersoll Driver With Miss 111

GRAVENHURST, Ont., Aug. 4—(CP)— Canadian hopes of winning the gold cup for supremacy in American power boat racing appear to centre on Miss Canada III which Harold Wilson of Ingersoll, Ont., will drive in the Labor Day classic on Detroit River. The boat has been biult by Tom Greavette at Gravenhurst, Ont., for Wilson's father, E. A. Wilson.

Younng Wilson, who piloted Miss Canada II in last year's race, from which he was eliminated by hulll trouble, again will have the same mechanic — the former Lorna Reid of Toronto, now his wife.

The new craft was tested this week on Lake Muskoka and boating critics report a radical type of design. It will embody further development of ideas in hull design tried out the last several years by Douglas Patten, the designer.

Little Miss Canada I, a racing hydroplane in the 225 class, built by Van Patten for Harold Wilson, was unofficially timed over the measured mile at the Canadian Nationa Exhibition last September in 49.6 seconds, equivalent to 72.58 miles per hour. This was slightly below the record of 73.54 miles per hour set Jan. 21 by Mrs. Jack Rutherford at Miami, Fla.

Mexico Refuses To Arbitrate On Indemnities

MEXICO CITY, Aug. 4.—(AP).—The Mexican government appeared to-day to have established a precedent for delaying payment of indemnity in the expropriation of $400,000,000 of United States and British-owned oil properties.

Dealing with seizure of American-owned firms since Aug. 30, 1927, the government replied last night to a United States proposal for arbitration on indemnities.

The reply refused arbitration; suggested discussion to determine value of the farm land; acknowledged the debt but held there was no legal obligation to make prompt or even deferred payment; said indemnification would be under Mexican law on the basis of the nation's ability to pay; insisted inability to pay could not be accepted as a valid reason for delaying the program of social reform by which land is being turned back to the peasantry; said flatly these reforms would be continued.

The effect of this thesis upon the 17 foreign oil firms taken over by the government March 18 was a matter for speculation, but well informed persons believed it would apply equally well to that question, with little revision.

Peterborough's Exhibition

With the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition less than two weeks away there is every indication that, with good weather conditions, this years' fair will set a new record not only in point of attendance but in all-round excellence. Preliminary reports show that the entries in the livestock department are not only numerous but rank high in quality, and a most encouraging feature is the fact that in several sections where there was a light entry list a year ago, there has been a remarkable pickup this year.

A feature of the 1938 exhibition will be the first official visit to Peterborough of Hon. P. M. Dewan, Ontario's minister of agriculture, who will formally open the big fair. His appearance in this role is an indication that the importance of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition in developing and encouraging agriculture is well recognized in official circles.

While the livestock and other agricultural departments have expanded and will reach a new level this year, it is an explanation of the ever-growing popularity of the Exhibition over a wide section of the country that this expansion has been accompanied by an all-round development in which the entertainment side has been by no means neglected. There will be much in the Exhibition to educate and at the same time there will be much to entertain and the two combine to make it an outstanding fair, with something for everybody, which should be the aim of all such events.

A Waterfront Chance

Objections to the purchase of Point St. Charles by the city on the ground that the property is nothing but a sawdust dump lose some of their force when it is remembered that Riverside Park, the city's major athletic ground, is built on exactly the same kind of foundation, a sawdust pile.

On the other hand there is an argument in favor of the purchase that does not seem to have been strongly stressed and that is that the acquiring of this property by the city would bring back into public hands a portion of the waterfront, most of which has been allowed to drift into the possession of corporations. If the government is prepared to continue the rip-rapping work that has been done along the Crescent and Lock Streets banks and to extend it to include Point St. Charles, the labor involved would provide a considerable amount of employment and at the same time the appearance of the waterfront at that point would be materially bettered.

Buying Point St. Charles might well be a start toward a scheme of park extensions that would include the purchase of Burnham's Point, immediately across the river, a piece of property ideally located for park purposes and one that perhaps should have been publicly owned long since.

After all this community has escaped very lightly in the matter of expenditures for park purposes. Victoria Park is the property of the county council. Jackson Park, Inverlea and Nicholls Oval we owe to the generosity of the late Charlotte Nicholls, and recently the Exhibition Grounds through the munificence of Harold Morrow, has become a public asset. We had had to buy only a small part of our park system and in view of that record there should not be violent objections to a small expenditure at this time that would save a portion of the waterfront for public use.

He Helped All Saints'

Older residents of Peterborough who learned of the death the other day of Canon Walter M. Loucks realized that in his passing All Saints' Church lost a friend of a great many years' standing. It was Canon Loucks' particular job when he served here as curate of St. John's Church, to take charge of the affairs of All Saints' mission and it is recalled that this was a veritable labor of love for the young clergyman who gave freely of his time, energy and ability to extending the work of the mission and to increasing its capacity for useful service in the southern part of the city.

It is not too much to say that the impetus that was given the mission by the enthusiasm that Canon Loucks threw into his association with its work that was responsible for the continued expansion of the Anglican movement in that section of Peterborough and that led eventually to the setting up of a separate congregation and the establishment of All Saints' Church.

When he departed from Peterborough he left behind him at All Saints' mission many gifts that his influence had been responsible for obtaining for the mission and that still find a useful place in the church that succeeded the mission.

Until his physical condition made it impossible to return to Peterborough Canon Loucks never tired of visiting All Saints' and on a number of occasions in the years that had intervened since his leaving this district he had come back to preach in the church in the founding of which he had played no mean part. All Saints' has lost a consistent and sincere supporter in his death.

It Bobs Up Again

Every now and then, when a municipal council has nothing better to do, some bright mind thinks up the idea that it would be a fine thing if council were given some control over the expenditures of the school board and accordingly a resolution is drafted and passed, suggesting that the existing scheme of things be so amended that the city fathers may be invested with the necessary authority.

Copies of the resolution are sent to Queen's Park and to other municipal councils and that is about as far as the movement to obtain control of school expenditures gets.

A motion of that kind was before the local council the other night, originating in Leaside, and the aldermen wisely decided to do just nothing about it.

After all, since the school board is an elective body and therefore directly responsible to the people, there is no reason why any other body should be given control of its expenditures.

If it is desired that the city council should regulate educational expenditures, the logical way to reach that end would be to have school boards abolished and the responsibility for looking after education delegates to a committee of the council, as are other municipal departments.

So long, however, as the members of the school board are elected by the people and can be turned out by the people in the event that their actions and policies fail to impress the voters favorably there is no more reason why city councils should have control over educational expenditures than there is why they should control the actions of the Utilities Commission.

The New Organizer

Considerable interest has been created by the announcement that Dr. J. M. Robb, former minister of health in the Henry government, has consented to accept Hon. R. J. Manion's invitation to become Dominion organizer of the Conservative party. There is no doubt about Dr. Robb's popularity; he was one of the most highly esteemed members of the Henry cabinet and in the brief time he was at the head of the health department in Ontario he showed vision and enterprise in his appreciation of the duties and responsibilities of a provincial health organization.

In assuming the task of pulling together the Conservative machinery throughout the Dominion, a job that might well cause the most stout-hearted party man to hesitate, Dr. Robb has accepted a big responsibility and it will be interesting, even to those who are not Conservative in their political allegiance, to see how he goes about the work and to watch what success attends his efforts. One thing is certain. There will be no brass-band or circus methods about the Blind River physician's carrying out of the duties he has consented to assume. He is not built for ballyhoo. On the contrary, he is one of those quiet and dependable people who go about their work without fuss or noise and who in the long run usually succeed in getting more done than their more exuberant contemporaries. Dr. Robb has tackled a big job but those who know the man and his qualities declare that if anybody can make a success of such a post it is the former minister of health. They feel that Hon. R. J. Manion has made a good start in the manner in which he has filled an important position.

Charging Too Much

Is Ontario charging its tourists too much for the privilege of fishing in the waters of this province? There is one school of thought which will promptly answer this question in the negative and point out that if our good neighbors to the south want to come over here and take our fish they should be willing to pay handsomely for the privilege. On the other hand, there are many, and we notice the editor of the Sault Ste. Marie Star is among the number, who feel that we should take a longer view of this question and not endeavor to take too much out of the pockets of our visitors for a brief fishing excursion.

The Star points out that while Ontario charges $5.50 for a fishing license, the State of Michigan, a district in which there are many fine fishing spots, collects a mere 50 cents for a ten days' permit and allows visitors to fish throughout the season for $2.

That is quite a difference and we are not surprised to learn that when a party of four men from Grand Rapids, Mich., arrived in Algoma to do a little fishing and were informed they would have to pay a total of $22 for the privilege of wetting a line in Ontario waters they promptly decided the price was too high and took the next ferry for home. The advertising they would give Ontario when they got back would not be the kind of publicity that would set their fellow-townsmen to packing up for a trip into Canada.

It is undoubtedly the case that the provincial department of game and fisheries derives substantial revenue from the sale of fishing licenses to non-residents but it is worthy of note that Michigan collected $481,000 last year from its licenses and did so without creating any ill-will for the state by appearing to be too greedy.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Germany has a car that is being sold at $2 a week. That should make death on the highways easier than ever.

Unemployed single men have been ejected from Queen's Park. They should understand that any sleeping in that area is done while the House is in session.

A story in a Toronto paper tells about the big task a squad of city employees had in cleaning up after the corps reunion. The surprising thing is that there was anything left to clear up.

It is said that Toronto parents seeking a name for a new baby consult the public reference library. We had an idea they got most of the girls' names from the movie screen.

The herring industry board in Scotland is experimenting with the use of airplanes to scout for fish. If the thing works out in regard to herring perhaps we might try it in connection with lunge fishing.

Apparently the prairie provinces cannot escape a certain measure of bad luck. Now its the beet webworm that has made its appearance in the district around Winnipeg and is playing havoc with vegetables.

It is now realized that the tourist influx is not as large as usual and that the visitors who are here are not spending as freely. Both these conditions are of course merely temporary and can be explained by economic conditions across the border.

Speaker in Toronto said it was possible there would be rocket excursions to the moon soon enough. But how do we know the man in the moon wants visitors? It would not be right to call on the moon when it is full nor would it be pleasant to impose on him when he is on his last quarter.

A number of Chinese officials have been warned to keep away from expensive hotels and get down to war basis. That's sensible. If there is war for the little fellow with the gun on his shoulder then there must be war for the big fellow whose shoulder is too soft to carry a gun.

A MEADOW CONFERENCE

As I commute from the city,
Away from the toil of the day,
There are scenes aplenty to thrill me
As the train speeds on its way.

There are fields that are white with daisies;
A stream with cattle nearby;
And cornfields with golden heads trying
Soft breezes in vain to defy.

A farm boy and dog in the distance,
An orchard with apples galore;
A cottage that looks like a castle,
With hollyhocks framing the door.

But a scene I shall always remember,
No matter what else I may see,
Is a field that was crimson with berries,
An seated there maidens three.

They spoke not of the green meadow,
Nor yet of the blue sky above—
For I knew by the spell which enthralled them
That they must have been talking of love.

Tourist Traffic And Its Problem

(From the Ottawa Journal)

JUDGING by all reports, the number of tourists in Canada in July showed a decrease from July of last year. Quebec, in particular, took a sharp decline.

Why is this?

The chief reason, we believe, is that Canada is not taking enough pains to please her tourist customers. In some of our provinces roads are still bad; in one province, Quebec, they are particularly bad. Tourists who come here are returning home to tell their friends not to come here. No amount of tourist advertising, no matter how fetching or how alluring, can overcome that.

Before us is a cutting from the Chicago Tribune, a newspaper of large and influential circulation. The cutting gives the impressions of a member of the Tribune staff who, with what is called the "road car" of that newspaper, had motored through parts of the Canadian West. These were the impressions:

"Until the Canadian roads are improved this department of the Tribune can't recommend these resorts as motor tour objectives.

"The Chicago Motor Club had forewarned us that we would find the provincial highways a bit rough and dusty. They were worse. The dust was blinding and choking. Washboard gravel shook vertebrae and car springs. Loose gravel and loose rocks covered many miles. Postpone your plans for a western Canada drive for a few years, until more work is done on the roads."

This, appearing in a newspaper which circulates all over the United States Middle West, must be a tremendous setback to our tourist trade. Nor can we much object to it. The tourist traffic, essentially, is a motor car traffic. We may have the most gorgeous and most epic scenery in the world; people will not come to see it, or to see it in great numbers, unless they can drive on good roads. They will stay away, just as they stayed away before the motor car era.

Our tourist trade problem, therefore, is a reasonably simple one. Briefly it is that we must supplement scenery with good roads; make them safe, make them comfortable; make them, if possible, pleasant. If the tourist traffic be worth to us what we think it is worth, that, even on a fairly expensive basis, ought to be good business.

One thing is sure, this: That we can't expect to build a tourist business on anything like a permanent basis unless we satisfy our tourist patrons. In other words, good roads and good accommodation are as vital to a country trying to build up and hold a tourist business as good food and good beds are to a hotel trying to build up and hold a hotel business. The proposition is as plain as a pike-staff.

So what?

In The Journal's judgment, this: That it's about time the Dominion and the Provinces, all equally concerned with the tourist traffic, put their heads together in some common policy for its promotion and maintenance. Complete co-operation, we realize, is not without difficulty, and the difficulty is pretty obvious. Nevertheless, a meeting of Dominion and Provincial representatives on this tourist business question, with all of its needs and problems threshed out from the standpoint of what is best for all, must inevitably bring benefit. At worst, it couldn't do harm; certainly couldn't do more harm than is being done under the condition that exists at present.

Not Too Seriously

(Montreal Herald)

OUR TEXT IS: "If you want to get fun out of golf, don't take it seriously."

If you take golf seriously, sure as fate you are going to worry yourself until you get into Class A and when you get into Class A you are going to worry through a lot of competitions that key you up until you cannot see the golf course for the golf ball.

One bad stroke on a round is going to make you grind your teeth; a missed putt will haunt you in the still small hours of the night.

On the other hand if you play golf for fun, and not for competitive repute, you'll find the ball coaxing you along over green turf the fragrance of which you will enjoy.

You'll get fun out of watching some old crow cock his eye at your ball; you'll pause to watch the meadow larks on the turf, or some gorgeous butterfly displaying its beauty.

You'll tell your companion, or inquire of him, the name of that top-knotted bird of satiny plumage that is eating berries, or the name of the one that sings on the wing, the nearest approach to the English skylark.

You'll enjoy the clouds in the sky and the phenomena that accompany the sudden shower that stops your game but sends the men in competitions plodding grimly on through theirs.

Yes there's a lot in golf if you don't take it seriously for you can even enjoy a fine stroke by your opponent.

Tipperary

(Detroit Free Press)

"IT'S A LONG WAY to Tipperary" was like "Dixie" in that the piece was not written as a war song, but by reason of some irresistible and almost indefinable quality found its way into camp and field to become the joy, comfort and inspiration of great armies.

The writer of "Tipperary," Jack Judge, a British vaudeville headliner, is now dead at 60 years.

It is related that he wrote the words and music of his song on a bet, but that is not especially important.

What is important is the fact that (in the words of his publishers) "he wrote a soldiers' anthem which actually helped to win the war."

Mr. Judge did this by accident or did he?

Was it accident? Or was it Fate, making use of an innate, God-given lilting melodic gift, which gave the World "Tipperary" when the World desperately needed something of the sort?

• The Art of Smoking Hams

(From the Christian Science Monitor)

RAILROADS, refrigeration, stockyards, and packing houses have all but outmoded an ancient institution which still clings to a few farms—mainly in the South—only because certain epicurean appetites demand its singularly superior product. I refer to the country smokehouse—a small and outwardly insignificant building, but one which loomed large in the domestic economy of virtually every farm in the United States only a few short years back.

The little old smokehouse has rich and fragrant memories for thousands of mature men and women who spent their early days on the farm. Often it was built of wood, but usually of brick or stone, with a chimney in the center of the roof and wooden beams from which the hams and side-meat were suspended by their creosoted strings.

Activities centered around the smokehouse at butchering time in midwinter, again about six weeks later, and on a third occasion in the spring, when accumulated fat was removed for soap-making. In the little building were stored all the utensils for the midwinter event—the scalding and the scraping, the carving and the rendering, not to forget sausage-making. For the latter there were two mechanisms—an old-fashioned sausage mill, a fearful device with whirling knives, which modern food grinders have replaced, and a sausage stuffer. The latter were comparatively rare, for most country folk seemed to like their sausage in bulk form.

After the ordeal of butchering was over, the smokehouse received the hams and flitches of bacon for the cure. This was an art, although it sounds simple to say that the meat was merely buried in a huge bed of salt. Some farmers have been known to lose their meat in the cure.

In about six weeks—earlier for smaller pieces, later for the larger—the cured hams and bacons were removed. It was necessary to scald the meat to remove the clinging crystals of salt. Then it was treated for the smoking process. This differed in almost every household. In the North, the hams were coated with maple syrup; in the deep South with New Orleans molasses; in Kentucky and Missouri with sorghum. Other materials were added and the whole sewed up in a muslin sack.

Now began the all-important final process. On the dirt—rarely brick—floor of the smokehouse was built the fire which was to insure the farm family's meat supply for another year, with perhaps a few extra hams for company, kinsfolk in town, or maybe to sell. Now, smoking country hams has become a considerable business, and even King George V of Great Britain used to send to Trigg County, Kentucky, for his.

• You Can Whistle While You Fish

(From the Bulletin of the Ontario Department of Games and Fisheries)

THERE are two distinct classes of fishermen; the experienced and the inexperienced. The former is an enthusiast who not only knows the game but has also made a study of the habits of the different species and, combining that knowledge with experience, knows how to outwit them. The inexperienced fisherman is usually either a beginner or a casual angler, who fishes when the opportunity presents itself, but makes no effort to acquire proficiency in the art. Now there are certain fish that the veriest tyro can catch without difficulty, while to be successful in taking others, one must know the habits of the fish and adapt one's technique to the existing conditions. This is particularly true of speckled trout fishing and is quite noticeable in the catches made by novices and experienced fishermen on the same stream. For the benefit of those whose experience is limited, we quote some words of counsel from the California Fish and Game Bulletin:

"All too many fishermen walk up to a trout pool with no more care than they would use in going to the corner drug store, and wonder why they never even see a fish. Move as carefully as though you were stalking game and you will have much better luck.

"If the water surface is glassy smooth, stay back of a bush, rock, or tree. If you can't do that, stay in dense shade and move slowly. If there is no shade, creep up on hands and knees, or at least contrive to have something besides sky for a background. If there is no cover of any sort, stand well back from the stream. Never let your shadow fall upon the pool. If you are so dressed that you harmonize with your background, you can often stand in full view of well educated trout without frightening them—but you will have to move very slowly to do it.

"If the water surface is ruffled you do not need to be nearly so particular, and if the water is white all you have to do is to avoid casting a shadow on the place where you are fishing.

"Remember that trout face into the current. A trout is less likely to notice you when you are behind him.

"Often, in spite of every care you can take, you will frighten the fish. When this happens, it is usually best to move on, but sometimes the frightened trout are worth waiting for. Get yourself into a comfortable position and wait quietly. Usually the life of the pool will return to normal within five to 15 minutes and you can get results.

"Talk, shout or sing, all you please, but walk quietly. If the stream is quiet and unbroken, take every precaution to step lightly, and remember that the ground carries sounds for a long distance. A stream with undercut banks is the very hardest to approach. In such a place even your best efforts may not be enough. In places where the water is tumbling noisily along, you do not need to be nearly so careful."

What Tourists Want

(Chatham News)

"SO THIS IS CANADA—where are the mounties and Indians?"

The above exclamation and question are often heard at various ports of entry along the Canadian border, particularly so along the St. Clair river because signs erected on certain roads in the neighboring state of Michigan urge the traveller to cross into Canada on the small ferries for a visit to the nearby Walpole Island reserve. And, inasmuch as "mounties" are usually associated with Indians — at least so many tourists think—the above question is almost inevitable before they start out to travel in this particular part of the country.

Other things that tourists continually look for are souvenirs of the country and the first and most popular is the post-card to mail back home to indicate they have been "in a foreign country." Next comes pottery and chinaware, small baskets and other work of the Indians, but especially do the visitors look for burnt leather artistry which they appear to treasure more than anything else.

The Widest Road

(Industrial Britain)

CONSTRUCTION has begun on the widest road in Britain, a boulevard, after the style of the American parkways, which will stretch across the heart of Liverpool's new residential and industrial suburb at Speke and eventually link up with a new road from Liverpool to Widnes. The road, which is being constructed by the Liverpool municipality, will be 160 feet wide and will include two 9 ft. cycle tracks, two 22 ft. carriage ways and a 30 ft. wide reserve in the centre. In addition, there will be plantations bordered by two service roads on one side of the new thoroughfare, bringing its total width up to 350 ft.

The boulevard, when completed, will be a magnificent addition to Lancashire's arterial routes and will be constructed of concrete. There will be houses on one side and factories on the other.

Road schemes totalling £77,000 are progressing in the northeast. One, on the Durham-Sunderland main road, will be open to traffic by the end of October.

Farmer's Place

(Calgary Albertan)

IT SHOULD be made clear, if it is not clear, that all the pressure presently being brought to bear on Ottawa for the fixing of a minimum price for this year's wheat crop is not merely an agrarian agitation. In fact, it is a movement in which interests other than agricultural are taking the most important part.

In the ancient and wholly stupid feud between the city and the soil there has been an exchange of stock jibes. The farmer calls the townsman a slick city guy and the townsman calls the farmer a hayseed.

It is still commonly supposed that the farmer is not a practical business man, implying that all the administrative acumen is concentrated in the city; although the blundering of some of those who would have us believe that they and only they are the practical business men cause us heartily to thank whatever gods there are that the farmer at least has escaped this misfortune.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

FEAR THOU NOT; for I am with thee: be not dismayed; for I am thy God: I will strengthen thee; yea, I will help thee; yea, I will uphold thee with the right hand of my righteousness. Behold, all they that were incensed against thee shall be ashamed and confounded: they shall be as nothing; and they that strive with thee shall perish. Thou shalt seek them, and shalt not find them, even them that contended with thee: they that war against thee shall be as nothing, and as a thing of nought. For I the Lord thy God will hold thy right hand, saying unto thee, Fear not; I will help thee....

When thou passest through the waters, I will be with thee; and through the rivers, they shall not overflow thee: when thou walkest through the fire, thou shalt not be burned; neither shall the flame kindle upon thee. The Weak Spot

(Financial Post)

DESPITE all the forms which government "assistance" takes, there is no sign yet of a housing or building boom in Canada.

The encouragement to build is lacking. Even existing properties do not draw rents high enough to carry them.

Factors in the situation are "high" costs and wage levels.

But the major factor is high taxation of real estate. This is chiefly the result of Dominion and provincial policies that load upon communities social burdens they have no desire to carry and cannot continue to carry.

The building boom will start when there is clear evidence that taxes are coming down.

Cavan Girls To Represent Durham At Peterborough Exhibition

Achievement Day Is Held At Millbrook

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, Aug. 4.—The girls' clubs of Durham County were well represented at the annual "Achievement Day" held at Millbrook on Saturday, with morning and afternoon sessions, over forty members being in attendance, and a number of the mothers and others interested also joining the gathering, which was in charge of Miss Greta Pollard, of Bowmanville, home economics' secretary, of the Department of Agriculture.

The morning was largely given over to instruction and discussions, and right after dinner demonstrations took place. The Morrish branch had chosen "Cotton May Be Smart," as their propect, and had three dresses on display that were fine examples of design and workmanship. Later, these were criticized by Miss Pollard, to give the girls fresh ideas, and show them where improvement might be made.

The other clubs had followed the milk project for the past year, and "Milk the Child's Delight," was well demonstrated by the Morrish club representatives, Helen Stapleton, Marjorie Dickinson and Marian Peters. Previous to the demonstration, four girls from this branch, sang an original song on the value of milk, these being: Winona Snell, Leona Beighton, Ruth Hawthorne, and Betty and Doreen Lord.

Millbrook had chosen "Milk for an Invalid's Tray," Ruby Fallis and Marian Belch, wearing white Hoover dresses and caps, cleverly presenting this theme.

The Cavan junior girls, Beatrice and Nan Fallis, Jean Gillies and Elaine Argue, won a great hand with their work, the same subject as the seniors had demonstrated, and Miss Pollard announced, after due criticism of the girls' showing, that these young people would represent Durham county at the Peterborough Exhibition.

Miss Pollard also discussed the record books, and essays, which the girls had completed during the year, speaking very highly of the initiative shown, and the neatness and accuracy of the work. All the pictures, she said, were well chosen and the books, and essays, had proved a fund of information that could not fail to be of value in each girl's life. Nothing had been written in pencil, and each book disclosed individuality.

Winners in the senior class were Marian Belch; Wilma Armstrong, Jean Trumpour, Dorothy Armstrong and Jean Belch (tied); Amelia Nichols, Mrs. Keneth Braithwaite and Gwen Staples (tied), Helen Stapleton and Bernice Best.

In the junior class: Martha Belch, Bea Fallis, Ruth Hawthorne, Marian Peters, Elaine Argue, Nan Fallis, Isabel Aiken, Jean Holman and Betty Smith.

The two high girls were presented with the Canadian Cook Book, and the next four, in each class, were given their choice of either the Chatelaine or the Canadian Home Journal for a year.

Miss Pollard then invited Mrs. N. Beych and Mrs. Oakley Carley to come to the platform and present the diplomas to the girls who have completed two projects, the following having this honor Ruth Hawthorne, Dorothy Dickinson, Marian Peters, Audrey Nill, Jean Belch, Bea Fallis, Ruby Fallis, Mrs. K. Braithwaite, Gwen Staples, D. Staples, Marian Belch, and J. Trumpour.

The choice of a project for the current year was between "Sleeping Garments"; "Meat Cookery"; "House Furnishings"; and "Cotton Accessories for a Club Girl's Bedroom," the latter receiving the most votes. The leader then handed out the entry forms for the Peterborough Exhibition on August 17, and announced that any girl in competition may attend this far, or the one at Lindsay on September 17, by filling in the form and accompanying it with fifty cents, which will give entry to the grounds, attendance at the banquet at the Empress, and back again for the grandstand at night. Record books and essays must be sent in by a specified time. A round table conference closed a full day's instruction and work.

HOW YOU CAN Attract MEN

OF course, you have no men friends if you've let yourself become dull, cross, and nervous. Men like lively, peppy girls—girls with plenty of energy to go places and enjoy life.

Don't let love and romance pass you by. Help build up your pep and you, too, should have gay friends.

Here's good advice: Start taking time-proven, reliable Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and note the difference. This famous Compound, made especially for women from wholesome herbs and roots, helps Nature tone up your system and thus soothes jumpy nerves and gives you more pep to really enjoy life.

SEEDED PLAYERS ADVANCE IN CANADIAN TITLE TENNIS PLAY

Members Of Davis Cup Team Join Parker and Fischer

Veterans Run Into Stiff Opposition

TORONTO, Aug. 4—(CP)—After the strokes have been learned the main attribute in tennis is confidence, according to Carl Fischer, who remained in the Canadian Tennis Championships singles today with seven others.

The Detroiter explained his belief to Mercer Basley, coach of the tournament's seeded player, Frankie Parker of Milwaukee and New York. And Beasley agreed, with the curt comment that Parker was playing here to gain confidence for the campaign that leads to the United States National Championship and the fight for positions on the Davis Cup Team.

"It's 50 per cent. of your game after a certain point," Fischer said. "And once you lose confidence, it's mighty hard to get back."

If Parker's way to confidence lies in sure and sudden success, he apparently has come to the right place. He has dropped only four games in three matches and six sets.

Yesterday he began to gather steam as he dropped Bruce Hall of Toronto, ranked No. 10 in Canada, from the fourth round, 6-0, 6-1.

Veterans Advance

Accompanying Parker and Fischer into today's quarter-finals were the four members of Canada's Davis Cup Team — Bobby Murray and Laird Watt of Montreal, Ross Wilson of Toronto and Doug Cameron of Vancouver—and Wilmer Allison, of Austin, Texas, and Gordon Robinson of Stamford, Ont.

Allison won yesterday's most brilliant match, finding a weakness in the backhand of Bob Madden to beat the Detroit youngster 6-4, 7-5. Only other matches which didn't develop into long battles were Fischer's 6-1, 7-5 success over the Montreal City champion, Roger Durivage, and Watt's 6-1, 6-2 win over Cuthbert Hopper of Toronto.

Murray was down 2-5 at one time in his duel with Dr. Georges Leclerc of Montreal, but rallied to win 7-5, 6-3. Cameron and Don McDiarmid of Ottawa played a patient contest of steady plugging until Cameron won 6-1, 10-8. Wilson stopped the surprising bid of Bill Pigott of Hamilton, Ont., 6-3, 2-6, 7-5.

Wins At St. Paul

Winner of one of the golf pros' biggest tournaments, the $7,500 St. Paul open, was Johnny Revolta, ABOVE. He carded a 72-hole total of 276 to finish ahead of Willie Goggin and Sam Snead.

Crowd Enjoys Sports Day At Hastings

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, Aug. 4.—Hastings' second successive softball tournament and street dance, sponsored by the Softball Club, took place yesterday. Intense heat in the afternoon kept the crowd smaller, but an estimated attendance of 1,500 witnessed the feature attraction of the day, a softball game between a team of professional hockey players and Keene, winners of the tournament. The final game was played in the evening. A play by play description of this game was given over the loud-speaker system.

From eight to nine in the evening a vaudeville program took place on the orchestra stand. This was followed by the street dance, with Red Moncrief's orchestra furnishing music for round and square dancing.

One casualty resulted, when a Roseneath girl fainted and fell to the pavement, causing serious bruises and abrasions about her face. Dr. Campbell attended her.

The affair was a huge success at both afternoon and evening performances, financially as well as being favored with fine weather. All proceeds will be used to improve the local community park, which all townsfolk are justly proud of.

Softball Program.

In the first game which started about 2 p.m., Keene swamped Campbellford, 13 to 3, in a game that was featured by the heavy clouting of the Keene team, when they connected for 20 safe hits.

Hastings and Norwood met in the second game taken by Hastings 6 to 5, when Hahn homered with three men on to give Hastings the decision after trailing 5 to 3 in the last innings.

The two winners, Keene and Hastings, then met for the right to meet the Maple Leafs and Boston Bruins' hockey stars. Keene took the game 7 to 6, after Hastings made a strong bid in the last inning, when they scored four runs to came within one of tieing the game.

The feature game took place at 6.30 and was won by the hockey stars, 6 to 2. Keene put up a good game but were outclassed.

"Bobby" Baure, left wing hockey star with Boston, pitched for the Hockey Stars and displayed a sharp breaking curve ball and change of pace. He limited Keene to 8 hits and struck out six. His hitting also was a feature of the games, when he clouted a long homer in the first innings with one one.

The Maple Leafs collected nine hits from the combined offerings of Fleming and D. McCarthy from Keene. "Porky" Dumart, from Boston Bruins, led all batters, when he got three hits in three times at bat.

Woods and Fleming, each with two hits, led Keene at bat. The Boston and Maple Leafs' teams provided an exciting finish to the day's activities. Score by innings: R. H. E.

Cobourg Juniors Here For Second Game

A junior playoff semi-final in the Lakeshore Junior Baseball League will be staged to-morrow (Friday) evening at six o'clock here in Riverside Park. It will be the second game of the two-out-of-three playoff series between Cobourg Juniors and the Young Petes. The locals lost the first in Cobourg last night by a 10-3 scores, but played it under protest, and it may be replayed. This junior joust here tomorrow should be well worth seeing, with plenty of keen action between two good young clubs, and it deserves a big crowd of fans.

Manager Herb Ralph of the locals states he will pitch Bob Todd, and the lanky righthander ought to hold the Lakeshore lads in check to even up the series. It is a most important tussle and should the Petes win out, a third game will be necessary, the winner then meeting Oshawa for the league title. Eventual winner must be ready to enter Ontario playdowns by August 20. Both clubs here tomorrow will be battling their heads off in this fixture and it go nine innings, instead of seven as in the schedule.

Hillbilly Pitcher Breaks His Arm

Medina, Tenn., Aug. 4 (AP)

JAKE SLAUGHTER, speedballer of the Zion Hillbillies, figured today he'd have to change his wind-up if he's to continue his career as a pitcher.

With a 3-0 lead over the Webb Farmers in the sixth inning, he broke his pitching arm by banging it against his head during the process of getting ready to throw his fast one. It stopped the game, for Slaughter was his team's only pitcher.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

THE BROOKLIN BOYS are coming to town to try to mow the Petes all down, yo, ho, yo, ho! And it'll be the piece de resistance, as they murmur along the Boul' Mich', of the local lacrosse season. The two top senior "B" squads in O.L.A. competition are battling it out in a gutted-stick fixture. Game is tomorrow (Friday) night at nine in the George St. arena. Brooklin and the Petes went to a bitter 8-8 tie their last clash, and don't think the rivalry isn't keen between the ex-Oshawa stars and the locals. Shine Bovin and Co. have a lot of class and the Petes had better be at full strength and hotter than humidity to hold their own. This tilt rates the season's biggest crowd. A midget melee will be run off early.

* * * * * * *

WALLACE POINT REGATTA should draw some of the better local swimmers next Wednesday aft at two. Races include a one-miler for men, half that for women, and half-mile events for gals 15 and under and ditto for lads that age. Also paddling and novelty events. Zack Smoke in full war paint and feathers is gonna paddle a birch bark canoe in the 60 years and over race—showing the young braves how a veteran Indian handles a boat. Gord Minty at the "Y" will take entries to the swim races up till Saturday e'en. Trophies are on display at a downtown jewellery store.

* * * * * * *

A Dish Of Whitewash

QUITE A FEW FANATICS drifted over to Riverside Park last gloaming to give a gander at the pros of Ogdensburg in action 'gainst the Petes. And it was a pretty fair exhibition with Knotty's Colts copping a 5-0 shutout. Did their hitting in the right spots and had neat pitching and fine fielding. As our lads got the right hits at the wrong time, though they did oke in hurling and fielding, too. A tidy tilt most of the route, and now the Petes are ready for the C.O.B.L. playoffs, a serial which may run seven chapters, no less! It opens in Oshawa this Saturday, likely Lefty McNally getting the first game, and resumes here a week later. Lasts till out in September—at least, we hope.

* * * * * * *

WHILE THE COLTS last eve looked superior, they didn't have such a big margin on our gang. Main spot they showed it in was their fielding and throwing. Those guys make hard flies and sizzling grounders look easy, and they whip the apple around the diamond like Big Leaguers. They really burn it over to first from third or short. A husky bunch of fast-stepping young chaps who make baseball their living. We especially liked the six-foot-four gee on first, Hurley. Reminded up of Hank Greenberg the loose-jointed easy but sure way he had at the initial bag. Knotty predicts he'll hit the big time yet.

* * * * * * *

Just a Few Knottyisms

HE IS THE SAME old Knotty, hale and hearty and full of baseball. We chatted with him for a time, but it had to be on the diamond game. The Petes' ex-skipper has no other interest in life. "You've got a good club here this year," he said; "they look smart, but they still have that weakness at bat in the pinches. The pitchers are all right and your fielding will do. For the luvva Mike, though, get good umpires for your playoffs—none of those robbers I used to battle around this league!" Knotty says his club is faster and better in the field than his Colts of 1937 but they don't hit quite as well. Describing one player who had his hands injured twice, the veteran pilot grunted: "He had soda-biscuit hands." He chuckled at the thought of Lepper and Murray being cops in Toronto. "What'll they do if they see a burglar?" he asked; "yell for a policeman?" He's just the same as ever, scowling fiercely one minute and knocking off witty cracks the next.

* * * * * * *

TALK OF THE PONIES of Kingston re-organizing for C.O.B.L. action this summer seems to be dying down to a whisper. While most of the Ponies got the O.B.A. okay the other day, they still would miss their pitching staff and Handford a whole lot. The club was only so-so at full strength, so it couldn't do much when patched together. Just the Kingstons who had lived there the year before, plus McIntyre—who had his transfer—were returned to grace by the O.B.A., the Napanee gents still being on the blacklist. Bill Walshe, who writes for the Whig-Standard, remarks: "But the prize smile of all is the re-instatement of John Sykes, the unknown man of baseball, who has never played a game and in fact is a bigger mystery than the Masked Marvel." Yeah, Joe Daley had Sykes' transfer all right but Sykes didn't show up on the scene!

* * * * * * *

A Major Minors' Melee

THERE will be another ball game here this week, in fact tomorrow eve at six in Riverside Park. Between Cobourg and the Young Petes, the second game in the two-in-three Lakeshore Junior Ball semi-final serious. And it is most serious indeed as the Young Petes dropped a 10-3 number in Cobourg last p.m. in the first playoff. They've got to get in there fast and hit in the clutches, 18 guys being stranded for 'em last eve, Clark and Bateman both pitched good ball but the fielding wasn't worth a slap on a sunburned back. Bob Todd will twirl here tomorrow in the twilight and it ought to be a good game. With no struggle listed locally for Saturday this week, the junior playoff Friday should pack 'em in.

* * * * * * *

LAST NIGHT'S TILT was protested by Manager Herb Ralph, and he has a good chance. The game was advertised and played on Victoria Park, a spot where trees, houses, screens and such items stud the outfield, making the pastime of gardening most intriguing. You never know when you go after a fly ball there whether you'll wind up with a crow on the limb of a tree or with the folks having supper in a kitchen. Or you may catch the ball and still see home plate for the rules call for playoff games to be in Horse Show Park, but this was throw in. Ground rules are, of course, most of a necessity. League not done, so the Young Petes played the game but did it under protest. The ywere beaten all right, but they protested before the tussle.

Sheppard Pays $20,000 For McLin In Bid For Hambletonian Honors

After winning the 1930 renewal of trotting's richest race with the home-bred Hanover's Bertha and repeating last year with Shirley Hanover, Sheppard has paid $20,000 for McLin, one of the favorites for next Wednesday's $40,000 classic at Goshen, N.Y.

W. H. Cane, promoter of the famous race, apparently was thinking of the adage of "a bird in the hand is worth two in the bush" when he sold McLin. The winner's share of the purse will not amount to much more than he got for the son of Mr. McElwyn-Ethelinda. Cane won the 1929 race with Walter-dear but for the last several years has been without a serious contender.

"I couldn't throw down $20,000," said Cane. "After all he might not win the race. I'll get my satisfaction and money out of seeing some 40,000 fans enjoy the race."

McLin was unknown until a few weeks ago when his crafty trainer, Walter Cox, worked him a mile in 2:04¼. As a two-year old he finished last in five races and could do a mile in no better than 2:13½.

Although McLin will be Sheppard's chief hope for his second straight Hambletonian victory, something no other owner has ever done, he has a promising "dark" horse in Henry Boyd Hanover, a homebred named for a personal friend of Sheppard's from Chicago.

Cobourg Beats Young Petes By 10-3 Count

Cobourg defeated the Young Petes 10 to 3, last evening in Victoria Park, Cobourg, in the first of the three-game Lakeshore Junior Baseball League semi-final series. The game was played under protest as it was advertised and played in this park instead of Horse Show Park, the latter being chosen at the league meeting for playoff games. Victoria Park has a poor outfield with trees and other obstacles making ground rules necessary. Return game will be staged in Peterborough this Friday night at six o'clock.

Despite the one-sided count, it was a close contest all the way, with the Young Petes pressing and frequently threatening to score a batch of runs. They left 18 men stranded on the sacks, inability to cash in on their opportunities at the bat causing their downfall. Both sides had a flock of errors, but the Ralph gang's proved more costly.

Hurls Neat Ball.

Bill Bateman again twirled nice ball for the winners, allowing the visitors but five hits as he walked five and struck out seven. Gee Clark also hurled a good game, giving up eight hits and one free ticket to first while sending back seven on strikes. Girard led the losers at bat with two bingles, while Zealand and Dawe had two each for Cobourg, as Campbell hit a homer and Johns a two-bagger. Neat fielding was shown by McCormick, Castle and McNabb of the Young Petes; and Johns, Woods and Brown of the Cobourgites' teams:

Score by innings:	R.	H.	E.

Budge, the first tennis player to receive the award since it was instituted eight years ago, was in Australia last January when the committee announced he had won by a landslide.

Dates Mixed In National Race, Pittsburgh Bucs Running Wild

Indians Keep Up To Ruppert Yanks

NEW YORK, Aug. 4.— (CP).— The calendar must be wrong. If this is Aug. 4, then what are Pittsburgh Pirates, who are usually sound asleep by this time doing up there 5½ games in front of the National League pack at this late date, and how come Cleveland Indians, once so docile and sweet to the leaders, are in their punching, only two games off the Yankees in the American League party?

And those aren't the only cases where either the calendar is way off or someone has hit dates twisted. For instance, there are the Cincinnati Reds, doormats of '37, tied with the up-and-down Chicago Cubs for the National League's third place, while the somewhat gasless Cardinals wallow around in seventh and Brooklyn's Dodgers head the second division.

National League Fuss.

Take the National League fuss. Pie Traynor must be feeding his blazin' Bucs, a combination of raw meat liberally sprinkled with dynamite. Even though the season is on the way toward the three-quarter mark, the "zing" Lee Handey and Pep Young are pouring in the infield, plus the work of the younger pitchers, is making the club hotter than the weather. They added half-a-game to their first place bulge yesterday by knocking off the Bees in Boston in both ends of a double-header, 9-4 and 5-3, which is no easy mark in itself, and the fact they fired 28 hits in turning the trick makes it one of the season's wonders.

From the looks of things, the Giants, 5½ games back—seven on the losing side—aren't going to do much catching up, even though they showed signs of coming to life in walloping and the Cubs 8-3 yesterday with an attack featured by four homers.

Indians Keep Up.

The Yankees, who were supposed to have somewhat of a pushover in the American League, can't seem to put away any space between themselves and the Indians. Yesterday they added a slim half-game to their edge by downing the Tigers, 10-7 in 10 innings, with Joe Gordon's overtime homer featuring the winning rally. The Tribe, after dropping a 4-3 decision to Boston Red Sox, in a twin bill opener, came back to take the night-cap 8-6.

Ivan Goodman's 27th homer paced a three-run rally in the 10th to give the Reds a 6-4 decision over the Phillies, moving the Cincinnati clouters into a third-place deadlock. The Cardinals nipped the Dodgers, 3-2, in a 10-inning night fuss.

Connie Mack's Athletics bombarded four pitchers with 34 hits to trample the White Sox twice, 14-2 and 13-5. Buck Newson turned in his tenth win of the year in hurling the Browns to a 5-3 victory over the Senators.

KNOTTY LEE'S COLTS OF OGDENSBURG BEAT THE PETES HERE, 5-0

Timely Hitting Gives Pros Neat Victory

Ogdensburg Colts blanked the Petes, 5 to 0, here last night before a good crowd of fans in an exhibition ball game. The visiting pros turned in a good showing to earn the nod, displaying some superiority ovet the locals—though the Petes did not look too badly outclassed. It was a neat exhibition to watch.

Knotty Lee's gang turned in perfect fielding, timely hitting and steady twirling. The Petes also played good defensive ball and had fine pitching most of the way but fell down at bat with runners in scoring position. They had as many hits as the winners but left seven stranded, most of the bingles coming with two out. Each side used three twirlers.

Hurley hurled three frames for the Colts, allowing four hits as he fanned one. Holmes also gave up four hits in the next three heats and had no strikeouts. Lauer finished with no hits in three innings and one strikeout. Kitchen pitched four for the Petes allowing five hits and three walks as he fanned two. Whitehill pitched hitless ball in the two stanzas he toiled and had one strikeout. McNally was nicked for three hits and a walk in the ninth after going good in the seventh and eighth.

Cadd Gets Two

Cliff Cadd led the losers at bat with two hits in four times up. Valentino and Brock of the Ogdensburg outfit had two blows apiece, one of the former's being a double. The winners' infield clicked in grand style with neat pickups and whistling throws. They pulled one nice double play. The Petes' infield also worked well and a foul catch by Whatley and a one-hand grab of a liner by Doll were features.

Tibbetts walked, stole second, moved ahead on an error and scored on Sugrue's hit in the first. They added one in the second when Tibbetts singled, was sacrificed, took third on an out and ran home on a passed ball. Their third came in the fourth with L. Hurley walking, pilfering second and galloping around on a single by Valentino. They went out in order the next four heats but got two runs in the ninth. Brock singled and took third on Gradaitis' hit, coming home on an out, with Gradaitis taking second. Clark singled in the third and went to third on Murphy's hit. On an attempted double steal, Clark was run down near third on a close play. Doll hit in the fourth but was forced. Hits by Whitehill and Kearns came with two out in the fifth and they died on base. Cadd got a single in the sixth but was forced at second. Whatley reached third in the seventh on a walk, wild pitch and out but stopped there. The locals went down one-two-three in the eighth and ninth.

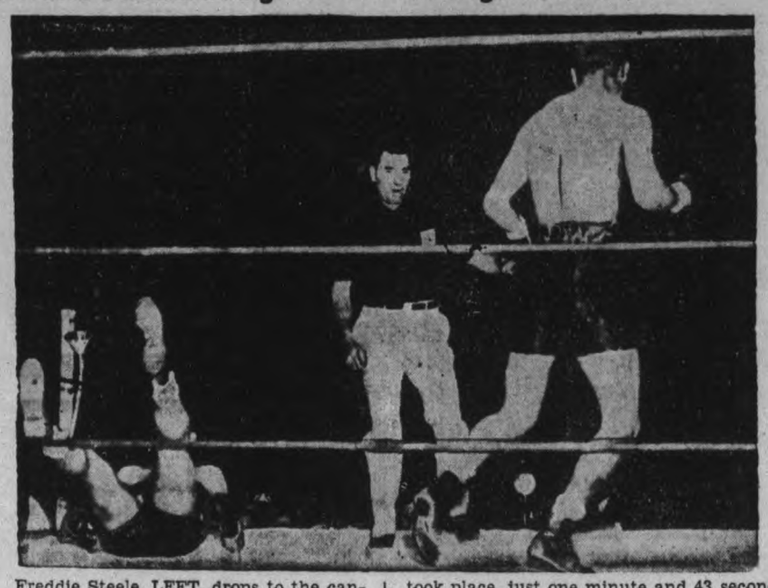
As World's Middleweight Crown Changed Hands



Freddie Steele, LEFT, drops to the canvas, Jack Dempsey, CENTRE, motions his opponent to a neutral corner, and 10 seconds later, the opponent, Al Hostak, RIGHT, was declared new middleweight champion of the world. It took Hostak, 22-year-old native of Seattle, where the fight took place, just one minute and 43 seconds of the scheduled 15-round bout to finish off Steele, who had held the title for two years. Twenty-five thousand fans were on hand for the bout, in which the new champion had Steele on the floor four times before the end.

Pirates beat Tigers, 7-6, last night at the Exhibition Grounds, with Sanderson of Tigers, trying for his sixth straight win, being turned back in a seventh-inning rally. The first 10 Pirates to face him were retired in order, but Tigers' errors in the fifth evened it up. Tigers went three up but were nosed out at the end, as Sanderson's control slipped. Gordon's hit with two on did the final damage. O'Toole twirled good ball for the winners, being tight in the pinches. Bennett, Gordon and McBride led the winners at bat; while B. Shea and Smith had two each for Tigers. Sanderson fanned eight and O'Toole four. The teams:

NEW YORK, Aug. 4—(AP). — That Maurice Strickland-Tommy Farr bout for the British Empire championship which was planned for Toronto in September, is definitely off—not enough dough in it for Farr....Broadway operators who make Henry Armstrong a 3-1 choice to trim Lou Ambers have the jitters because of reports such operators as Beverly Brown of St. Louis; Frank Gatto of Kansas City and Babe Barron of Chicago are gobbling up all the 2½ to 1 dough they can get their hands on ....

In passing out the orchids don't overlook Burleigh Grimes for the job he is doing in Brooklyn....The guy ain't had so much as a posey since the day he signed to manage the Dodgers....Al Weill, who manages Ambers, swears the Armstrong fight will do $150,000, but Mike Jacobs (who is only the promoter) probably would settle for half that—and pay a commission to boot.

New Yellow ball made a hit here with everyone except the Cards—who lost....We have a hunch an outsider is going to cop this year's Hambletonian....Daily Whitehead Bulletin: He swatted a double that broke up a 21-game winning streak for the Plymouth (N.C.) Rocks.... Jimmy Braddock sai it didn't make him a bit homesick to watch Lou Ambers training yesterday—not in that heat.

The husband of Madame Bey who runs the fight camp at Summit, N.J., once was an atache of the Turkish embassy at Washington... They went broke....Madame Bey converted her summer home into a pugilistic camp and has made a fine go of it....Bill Cissell, who has kicked all around the American League, is happy to be in the National where he hopes one and all will let him be for a spell.

Brooklin Team Here Friday

Brooklin lacrossers come here tomorrow (Friday) to play the Petes a game at nine o'clock in the George St. arena. It will be an O.L.A. senior "B" scheduled fixture under the lights between probably the best two teams in the whole senior "B" setup. They battled to a draw several weeks ago in their last meeting, and the winner between this pair is expected to cop Provincial honors in September. A huge crowd of gutted-stick followers is expected out Friday evening for this contest as it should be packed with action and full of fun and fury from start to finish. It will be preceded by a midget melee at 8.15 o'clock between Rotary and Kiwanis.

The Brooklin team is a powerful one, made up of experienced scrappy players. Several of the 1937 Oshawa stars play for Brooklin this year, fellows like Barron, Bovin and De-Gray and Daniels. Fans who recall the bitter rivalry between these players and the locals last year can bank on action when they clash again here tomorrow. The Petes should be in stronger shape this week than in recent games, several of the regulars returning from holidays. Don Crowe for one is expected out with the Petes this time. It will be anybody's game all the way through.

Bob Johnson and Earl Brucker, Athletics—Johnson hit two homers, double and two singles, driving in six runs in 14-2 opener win over White Sox; Brucker hit four-for-four, including homer, and batted in four runs in 13-5 nightcap.

Bears Hang Up Eighth Straight Win

TORONTO, Aug. 4 (CP).—Newark Bears counted their eighth straight victory today after hammering Montreal Royals into submission, 6-3.

The win last night was the International League leaders third straight victory over the Royals and their 11th in a row over the Canadians in Ruppert Stadium.

Over this eight game winning span, the Bears have averaged close to 10 runs and 10 hits per game. The three defeats just about dashed the Montrealers hopes of making the first division while Buffalo Bisons, who dropped four in a row to the Bears, haven't recovered from that knockout blow yet.

The Herd dropped from second to third during that series and have kept slipping. They suffered their seventh consecutive licking when Jersey City blanked them 5-0. The defeat moved them 2½ games back of the runner-up Rochester Red Wings who won a twin bill from Baltimore Orioles, 3-0 and 3-2. Syracuse and Toronto were not scheduled.

Every man in the Bears' lineup got at least one hit off the offerings of Orv Jorgens and Bobby Porter, with clouting Charlie Keller and Frankie Kelleher taking the leading roles. Keller connected for three hits, including a two-run triple and a homer. Kelleher got a pair of safeties and drove in three runs.

Rollie Stiles, Jersey righthander, notched his 12th win of the season in halting the Bisons with six hits. Big Bob Kline kept pace with him for seven innings but weakened in the eighth when the Jerseys scored five runs.

The Red Wings got good pitching in both games against the Orioles. Nubs Kleinke pitched a four-hitter in the opener and won on Johnny Hopp's two-run homer, one of the three hits young Jim Reninger allowed. Cy Johnson and Bobby Bowman combined to hold the Orioles to eight hits in the nightcap.

Minden Triplets Win Parents King's Bounty

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LINDSAY, Aug. 4.—Fire damage amounting to several thousand dollars resulted from a fire which broke out Wednesday evening about five-thirty o'clock in the rear of Hirsh's ladies' ware store at the corner of Kent and York streets. The fire had been smouldering for some time in the store room in rear of the store. It happened to be the merchants' half holiday and the blaze was not discovered until the smoke had filled the store as well as McBride's gents' furnishing store adjoining, and the apartments overhead. The brigade had two streams pouring on the blaze before it was subdued. The chief damage was caused by smoke, although the stock in E. Smith's feed and chop store on York street was damaged by water. The Hirsh firm is the chief sufferer.

Horace McDowell, of Lindsay, was badly burned at a local garage when gasoline ignited and burned his hands and arms. He was wiping grease off his hands with gasoline when a man standing nearby lighted a cigarette. The gasoline ignited. McDowell was taken to the Ross Hospital for treatment.

Mr. and Mrs. Stuart Bull, of Minden, parents of triplets, have received from the Privy Purse Office, Buckingham Palace, England, the King's bounty, amounting to three pounds. A letter from His Majesty the King accompanied the bounty.

Jackett brothers of Fenelon Falls, while trucking from the gravel pit near the village to the Cameron-Fenelon highway, uncovered large block of solid ice while excavating at a depth of 35 and 40 feet at the pit. Heat, as a rule, will penetrate as frost does, and how this ice resisted the heat has the villagers puzzled.

Thirteen years in penitentiary was sentence meted out at Beaverton to Clifford Hollywood, a youth who was arrested about two weeks ago for breaking into cottages and carrying a revolver. He got four three-year terms for four charges of breaking and entering, armed robbery and one year for carrying a loaded revolver. The accused had a court record.

The Italian Government has announced that all foreign Jews will be barred from Italian schools beginning with the fall term.

Traffic fatalities in Toronto this year show a 17 per cent. increase over last year, according to police statistics.

Canadian Girl Weds Dodge

ROCHESTER, Mich., Aug. 4 (AP).—Daniel G. Dodge, 21-year-old heir to a portion of the Dodge motor millions, was married Tuesday afternoon to Miss Laurine MacDonald, Gore Bay Ont., telephone operator, with whom he fell in love while on a north woods vacation three years ago.

The wedding was solemnized at Meadowbrook Hall, the estate of Mrs. Alfred G. Wilson, mother of the bridegroom. The bride's parents, John A. MacDonald, Manitoulin Island tugboat captain, and Mrs. MacDonald, were unable to attend the wedding on account of the mother's illness. Only members of the immediate families were persent.

Dodge is the beneficiary of a trust fund, amounting to $9,331,600 at the last accounting, left him by his father, the late John F. Dodge.

Mrs. Frederick G. Holmes of Windsor, Ont., sister, was the bride's only attendant. The bride wore a French gown of Chantilly lace in a pale wheat shade, with a fitted bodice and full skirt.

Going-away Frock

The bride wore a going-away frock of black French crepe, with a bolero jacket of rose crepe and a large hat, bag and shoes of black antelope.

Mrs. Holmes said that on their return they will live at Lawridge, four miles away from the Rochester home of the bridegroom's mother.

Daniel Dodge is described as the least spectacular of the newsmaking Dodges, although he is wealthier than his sister, Frances, whose extravaganzas have been the subject of society page headlines for years. She married James B. Johnson, Jr., editor of a recent swing music publication, The Cat's Meow, July 1. Eight hundred guests helped celebrate.

The Dodges have been in the news for years. The two brothers, John and Horace Dodge, set up an automobile shop in Detroit that was just sold before the depression for $140,000,000. The cheque was reputed the largest ever written in a private business transaction. The brothers died, and their fortunes were divided between the two families.

John's first wife died. They had three children, John Duval Dodge, Mrs. Wesson Seyborn and Mrs. Dodge Sloan. Dodge married again and by this union he had three more children, Frances, Daniel and Anna Margaret, who died when 4.

Horace Dodge had two children, Horace Jr. and the often-married Mrs. Delphine, Cromwell, Baker, Godde.

Typical Honeymooners

Mr. and Mrs. John Roosevelt pause on a bicycle tour of Coral Islands, Bermuda, to pose for this 'honeymoon' photograph. The U.S. president's youngest son and his bride, the former Anne Lindsay Clark, arrived in Bermuda a few days ago, after having spent several weeks at his parents' estate on Campobello Island, New Brunswick.

Vast British Arms

form of collective security rather than prolong the uneven contest in which Britain's vast gold reserves and almost unlimited world credit are big fatcors. But one thing Britain is determined to do—never be caught again with an army, navy and air force definitely inferior to other first class powers.

The Reason Behind It

The whole reason for Britain rearming was the failure of other countries to disarm. It all goes back to the Treaty of Versailles which was designed to leave Germany impotent as an aggressor nation and line up all countries within the League of Nations so that never again could a world war start.

In keeping with this general policy, Britain disarmed. At the close of the war, her navy almost equalled the combined fleets of the rest of the world but she scrapped scores of ships, stopped replacements, cut down the limits of ships and guns. The air force was almost disbanded and not one single squadron was retained for home defence. The army was neglected.

But other countries did not follow her example. Germany began to arm secretly and finally, after Hitler came into power, renounced the Treaty of Versailles and started to build a vast air armada, a navy and army. All of this made France too apprehensive to disarm and she put into effect a two-year army service, reorganized her air force and spent vast sums on border defences. Mussolini put his army on a war footing, finally marched into Abyssinia. Russia built up an army of 1,300,000 men. Japan invaded Manchuria, then China. Spain was torn by civil war which might spread.

Britain remained hitched to the wagon of disarmament, surrounded by nations arming to the teeth. Her wagon bogged. Her idological policy, which reached its zenith at the disarmament conference of 1932, was failing her. The disarmament conference flopped.

Finally Wakes Up

Britain finally woke up to the fact she was at the mercy of several European nations. With no armed forces, she was losing her traditional role of European referee because she had nothing with which to back up her demands. Even at the disarmament conference, her bargaining powers were impaired by disarming in advance and alone.

In 1935, Britain started to rearm and the program has been gathering momentum ever since. The stress has been on the navy and air force, not as huge striking forces, not with the old idea of 'two keels for one' but an armed force able to defend home territory, trade routes and an empire scattered over two hemispheres. Every effort is being made to make up for the years of neglect.

Still Fights for Peace.

But it's a two-way policy. While Britain is rearming, her foreign policy remains dedicated to peace. She admits an arms race is vicious madness and is ready to call a halt anytime a world agreement can be reached. But if the rest of the world wants an arms race, Britain is determined to prove she can set a pace that no other European or Asiatic country can follow and in that roundabout course may yet gain her objective of permanent, international disarmament.

The rearmament program is so vast and comprehensive it almost beggars description. For instance, the naval tonnage being built on January 1, 1935, was 139,345, and on January 1, 1938, 547,014. There are 118 naval ships being built in Britain to-day, the biggest peacetime program in world history. In May, 1935, Britain had 844 first-line aircraft. To-day she has more than 2,000 and is aiming at 2,850 by 1940, in addition to vase undisclosed reserve strength. The army is being strengthened and mechanized with the stress on coastal and anti-aircraft defence.

Mexico derives its name from the Aztec god of war, who was called Mexitili.

Fiery, Itching Skin Gets Quick Relief

There is one simple yet inexpensive way to stop the itching and irritation of Eczema instantly, and that is, to apply Moone's Emerald Oil night and morning and people who suffer would be wise to try it.

Ask McDermid & Jury or any first-class druggist for an original two-ounce bottle of Moone's Emerald Oil (full strength) and refuse to accept anything in its place. It is such a highly concentrated preparation that two ounces last a long time.

MINISTER OF HIGHWAYS TO INSPECT APSLEY-BANCROFT ROAD

T. Carley Begins A New Year In Full Stride

After all, as it turned out, it wasn't the heat and the humidity of the hotest day of summer that warmed up Tom Carley in his verbal brush with F. D. Kerr, K. C., acting Crown Attorney, in police court Wednesday, possibly it was solely his solicitude for his client Izzie Botnick, but granting all that, perspiration and professional zeal and diligence, it was also his birthday, and a manner of celebrating the event that came close to engaging him in a second case later on in the afternoon.

Mr. Carley had two of the twenty-two cases on the Wednesday docket before Magistrate Gee of Lindsay, most of them minor affairs in which Traffic Officer Broughton had a hand, and incidentally eighteen of them were within the county jurisdiction, and after His Worship announced that it was too hot to give judgment in the Botnick traffic accident case yesterday it transpired that Mr. Carley would have preferred to have proceeded in the morning with a charge of reckless driving against his other client, J. J. Brady, 198 Rubidge Street, accused of reckless driving May 28 on the Peterborough-Port Hope highway. Mr. Carley protested that this case had been repeatedly adjourned, and announced that because of those circumstances of delay he felt inclined to request his client to get some other lawyer to act for him because he wasn't "getting to first base" in having the charge brought to trial.

In the meantime, Mr. Kerr had his hands full. He spent the morning and part of the afternoon on the Botnick and other cases, and then had to leave with Magistrate Gee for Havelock where an assault case was waiting for scheduled hearing, with various witnesses attending. Mr. Kerr explained that the Brady case had been postponed because of injuries to a woman who was an important witness, that she had arrived after police court had opened and was willing to return, and Mr. Kerr said he understood Mr. Carley approved of proceeding with the Botnick case. He was willing to adjourn the Havelock case to accommodate Mr. Carley yesterday afternoon, even to holding court last night, and at that suggestion Mr. Carley drew the line of industry announcing that it was his birthday, that he was entitled to celebrate it after his own quiet manner, and night session would interfere with his plans of going to the lake for the evening.

"I think even one case should be sufficient for one day, even your birthday," Magistrate Gee remarked and so it was agreed that the Brady case be set over until next Monday. Professional amenities were knitted up again, the Kerr vs. Carley bout forgotten as only an incident of a busy and tormentingly wilting day, Mr. Carley betaking himself for the rest of it to the lake, possibly revivified by expression and action of vigor and an assertion reassuring for such an occasion as a birthday, and Magistrate Gee and Mr. Kerr hurrying off to Havelock in the heat.

The windup of the Botnick case, involving a collision of his car with one driven by Alf Hawkins of Orpington Road, provided few details other than evidence brought out at the morning session, and after brief reviews by counsel judgment was reserved.

Rabbi Arrested

Accused of smuggling heroin into France, Isaac Leifer, self-style "Grand Rabbi of Brooklyn, N.Y.", is being held by the police of Paris on dope smuggling charges. Leader of New York Jewry say that Leifer, who used holy books in his alleged smuggling activities, is not connected with any Brooklyn congregation.

Verandahs Are Occupied Long Into Night

It may not seem very low to weary, bedraggled citizens of Peterborough, but the thermometer dropped a full ten degrees here today, soaring to 86 degrees at noon today, after going down as low as 69 last night. However by two o'clock it was up to 89 degrees.

Most people are too exhausted to worry about the temperature. It was a wearisome job for thousands on Wednesday trying to keep cool in spite of the knowledge they were in the hottest part of all Ontario.

Only people to rejoice with the heat were the vendors of gasoline, ice cream, and soft drinks. Dutton's and Campbell's Dairy both reported al-time records for sales of ice cream. R. A. Dutton said that sales yesterday were twice as numerous as ever before in his store's history. His employees worked from ten in the morning until two this morning making enough ice cream to keep up with the demand ,he said. At Campbell's Dairy officials said sales struck an all-time record, higher even than during last year's heat. On the other hand, both Silverwood's, largest manufacturers of ice cream, and Hooper's Bakery reported their sales were little above average. They were not particularly rushed, they said.

Gasoline station owners did a rushing business, particularly in the evening, as entire families went driving as a means of keeping a little bit cool.

All the bathing beaches in the city were crowded, particularly Inverlea, where children swarmed the water in the stifling heat. Not until near nightfall did many bathers leave the water, some not then.

Beverage companies in the city reported a bumper day, one of the best in years. Trucks were delivering soft drinks all day long, drivers rushing from one store to another with never a minute all day in which to rest.

When the temperature failed to drop signally at night, worn out business men and housewives gave up the idea of sleep, many of them let their children stay up past their usual bedtimes. Verandahs were occupied until long after midnight as residents realized there would be little sleep for them. It was a weary crowd that came to work today.

Existence Of Trent Not Widely Known

An acquaintance of 20 years ago was accidentally renewed by Fred L. Roy this week when he drove his car on the George street wharf while waiting for the C.P.R. nono train and discovered that a beautiful cruiser at the wharf was owned by a Mr. Fabens of Huron, Ohio, with whom he had done business 20 years ago.

The American yacht was named Randy VI and was a trim looking fast craft. Mr. Faben with his wife and family had been cruising the Trent Waterway for two weeks and were enthusiastic about the scenic beauty and the courteous reception extended them everywhere by Canadians. The skipper told Mr. Roy that comparatively speaking only a few people in the States know of the existence of the Trent Waterway.

CALL GRAVEL TENDERS

A Department of Highways advertisement calling for tenders for various contracts includes "crushing gravel" for the Port Perry to Cavan highway. This is for the supplying of piles of gravel used in maintenance of the road. Ninety tons of calcium chloride have been spread on the road this season as a dust layer, and other grading improvement has given the road a fifty mile an hour surface. Many favorable comments have been heard about the work the Department has done this year since this road through Cavan and Bethany was assumed as a provincial highway.

Be No Reducing Of Charges Chief Declares

Three drunks appeared before Gordon Puffer, J.P., this morning and were remanded for brief terms suiting their convenience. One of them was in from a wood camp, and returns to court next Monday. Another was a Chambers Street boarder whose overplus of beer brought him within the scope of the third offender section of the Liquor Control Act.

"I was just stepping off the street," he was explaining to Chief Newhall on the way downstairs to the cells, "when a policeman caught me. Just another step and I'd have been off the street."

Police say this man was once an actor, but had slipped by way of the ancient enticements, women and liquor, including a period of bootlegging.

Deeply Penitent.

This morning he was deeply penitent and worrying about how he was going to get his freedom again.

"You know how it is, Chief, some one invites you to have a beer and the first thing you know it is three or four. And when I have five the balloon's up," he explained.

"That means your friends got you where you are, and you know what you face as a third offender? Six months."

"I wanted a week's remand to attend to some business, and now I've got to get bail some how or other. I don't think it was fair, third offence and that, and there I was with just the last step off the street."

Out of Question.

"There's no use talking about reducing the charge. That's out. There was one the other day in court, but I had nothing to do with that. After this the charges stand even if we fill the jail up."

He tried to give the Chief a mild argument as to how he could get out to look after some business he did not specify, but Chief Newhall's reply was, "No, no; it's between you and the magistrate."

And a moment later he was talking through the bars, something about his case being adjourned, not that he was remanded, but whatever it was it still means that he was in the end cell until someone scraped up bail for him.

MAIN STREET TOPICS

By an Examiner Reporter.

BANK CLEARINGS

Total clearings passed through the Peterborough Clearing House for the week ending today amounted to $578,713.

LOSES MARKER

PERIODS REDUCED.

Terms of debentures for sewers are reduced from 30 to 15 years, and sidewalks to 10 years according to the instructions received by the council from the Ontario Municipal Board.

NO HEAT DEATHS

Although a good many people probably wished they could, none in Peterborough died from Wednesday's intense heat, which reached a high of 96 degrees, highest in the province.

17-POUND LUNGE.

They say that hot weather never bothers a true fisherman and yesterday Alex Gordon, proprietor of the Chemong Park restaurant, proved his worth. He caught a 17-pound lunge and two bass averaging about 3 pounds apiece from the government wharf on Lake Chemong.

NO FIRE IN AUGUST

Firemen are sitting with fingers crossed these hot days, hoping that their luck will outlast the heat. Not since the end of July has the "100" bell run to give news of a fire. Last one they attended was in the latter part of July. Fire loss for the month ran to about $2,600 according to Fire Chief George Gimblett.

MACHINE GUN PRACTICE.

The Prince of Wales Rangers will hold a machine gun practice at the Ranges on Saturday afternoon next. Transportation will be provided, and will leave the Armouries at 1.45. Later in the afternoon refreshments will be served at the ranges. Those in charge of this event ask that as many as possible participate in the practice on Saturday afternoon.

BOUGHT THE ROYAL YORK.

An Imperial soldier of Toronto who in private lift is a real estate man put over the biggest deal of his career during the Canadian Corps Reunion when a Peterborough veteran running short of funds, sold the Imperial the Royal York Hotel for a dollar and two quarts of beer. Another Peterborough man regaled himself by renting a room on the 17th storey of the same hotel and kept throwing pails of water out the window on people trying to enter the main door. One other local man promised to bring his little daughter a Teddy Bear, but when he opened his grip the next morning after arriving home, he found two dolls, a toy dogs, and four Teddy Bears.

TRANSIENT TENANTS

Of thirty-eight unregistered tenants two nights ago in the old barn of the Peterborough Lumber Company on Burnham's Point, thirty-seven were men, according to the count of one of the temporary occupants whose statement may be accepted for whatever it is worth. It is a commodious building, airy and drafty for comfort on a hot night, but hardly air conditioned according to the meaning of that new term of the building grades. It is said that the thrity-eighth occupant was a woman who shared the lack of Marshall mattresses. However, it is related that one of the men bundled up his coat for a pillow, and another coat was provided for covering if she needed it. And as a further detail from the same source many tongues were represented, a league of nations of the highroad.

STAMPS ADVERTISING CITY

An unsigned letter received at the city hall today from a local correspondent contained fifty large sized stamps intended for use on the back of letters or otherwise as an advertisement of Peterborough. They are in four colors, show the liftlock and are inscribed with the words "Peterborough, Gateway to Kawartha Lakes." The only information accompanying them was that the design was made in the city.

Roumanian Royal Family At Queen Marie's Funeral

Members of the royal family of Roumania are pictured following the casket containing the remains of the late Queen Mother Marie from the palace at Sinaia, for Buchrarest, where burial took place. Immediately behind the casket is King Carol, escorting his sister, former Queen Elizabeth of Greece. Directly behind the King is his estranged brother, Prince Nicholas, who has long been banished from the kingdom. Behind Nicholas is Archduke Anton of Hapsburg. To Anton's right is Princess Ileana, daughter of Marie. Bringing up the rear is Crown Prince Michael, heir to the throne. One of Marie's last requests to Carol was that he and Nicholas patch up their differences.

Property Committee To Meet Friday To Study Revision To Building By-law

Alderman McCannan has called a meeting of the property committee of the council, following the relief committee Friday night, to consider the council's order for the revision of the building bylaw respecting vents from bathrooms into chimneys and other changes that may be desired. Evidently it doesn't mean anything to Alderman McCannan that this is a bewhiskered problem that has been before the council from time to time, and even if it is midsummer he is turning his committee's attention to it four days after the council's motion referring Alderman Bradburn's suggestion to that property committee.

The releasing of the car barn on King Street was effected by Alderman McCannan after applying considerable personal attention to the negotiations, and with a resulting gain to the city of $300 a year. The Border Transit Company's rental has been increased from $25 to $35 a month, and the gasoline pumps and office in front of the building have been leased to the Burlington Refineries Limited at $15 a month, the company paying taxes and insurance. This dual deal was finally completed in a bylaw passed by the council Monday night.

Simone Simon Delays Normandie 10 Minutes To Convince U.S. Agents Her Income Tax Paid

NEW YORK, Aug. 4 (AP).—Trouble beset Simone Simon on every side today but she was finally permitted to sail for Europe with the blessing of the bureau of internal revenue.

That came after the liner Normandie had been held up for 10 minutes while the movie actress searched frantically for papers which would convince a special representative of the bureau that she had made a $4,000 payment on her last year's earnings.

Kneeling on one of the beds in her suite, Miss Simon said fervently: "I have paid my tax, and I wouldn't get you in trouble for the world. If you find that I have not paid, I will come right back and give it to you."

The representative was adamant. The liner remained at the pier until Miss Simon found the papers in a misplaced bag. Miss Simon said her contract with 20th Century Fox had not been renewed.

Punctuating her remarks with rapid gestures, she said: "I won't work for them, I am finished, through, all done and I don't want to talk about them. I might never come back to the United States."

Dare-Devil Star Pearl White Dies In Paris

PARIS, Aug. 4 — (AP). — Pearl White, cinema actress in the early days of the motion picture, died today in the American hospital at Paris.

She was 49 and had been ill for several weeks of a liver ailment. She was born in Greenwood, Mo., March 4, 1889.

In the days when the motion picture business was young, movie audiences sat on the edge of their seats thrilling to the "Perils of Pauline," an adventure-packed serial in which the beauteous heroine managed to reach death's door at the end of each chapter, never to die.

"Pauline" was Pearl White, blue-eyed actress catapulted to fame as the first of the dare-devils of the screen. The public shuddered for a week at the thought of Pauline's perilous predicament, as each instalment faded out with the black-bearded villain likely as not cackling with satisfaction, the hero somewhere on the way to the rescue.

He always made the grade at the opening of the next episode, only to let "Pauline" get into deep trouble again. Besides the "Perils of Pauline" there were the "Exploits of Elaine" and a dozen other serials of the same melodramatic cast.

Joins Gay Set

Pearl White grew rich on this. She went to Paris in the early 20's, and afterward saw little of the United States.

For several years she was in the gay international set at Paris and Deauville. In later years she lived more quietly, either at her town house in Paris or her chateau at Gazeran, near Rambouillet.

She went abroad in the first place because her movie days had affected her health. Bare-back riding and stunting for the films took a toll, and here eyes had been affected by the lights employed in the early studios.

She recovered her health in France, but it was then too late to continue the type of picture in which she was best. She appeared in Paris revues and made a few films, the last in 1927. In the same year she made her last public appearance, on a London stage.

Pearl White did her own stunts. She leaped from speeding trains, clung by finger tips from bridges and steeples and escaped the jaws of death on swinging ladders. In those days there were no stand-ins or doubles.

A Publicity Stunt

On a 1935 trip to London, Miss White crossed the English Channel in semi-regal state, with a part of the steamer deck roped off for her special use.

But most of England was puzzled over her identity, despite the early Hollywood-type publicity efforts.

She liked to see modern movies, but to act again? "Oh, no, not me," she said recently. "I have no ambitions. Why should I? I've got plenty of money. I'm happy now. Why should I go to Hollywood? Do I look crazy?"

Extension Of Active Work Is Sought By Two Members In Interview With Minister

Early Completion Of Pembroke Link Is Being Expected

Rork Ferguson, M.P., and Alex. L. Elliott, M.L.A., interviewed Hon. T. B. McQuesten, Minister of Highways, in Toronto on Wednesday in regard to the extension of active work on the section of the road northeast of Apsley for which the Johnston Construction Company were awarded the constructional contract last year. The eleven miles of this link reach from Apsley to the Haliburton boundary, and as the contractors had done some improvement last fall before operations were suspended, Hon. Mr. McQuesten was requested to permit the Johnston Company to resume work this year for completion before the tourist season of 1939 opens.

It was also pointed out by the two Peterborough representatives that there is an intervening link of four miles that are not yet under contract, and with such a short gap remaining it was contended that the Department should arrange to have it included in the general program that will provide a highway from Pembroke to Peterborough.

To Visit District.

Mr. Elliott informed the Examiner this morning that Mr. McQuesten promised to visit the Peterborough district within the next few days and with R. N. Smith, Deputy Minister, drive over the Apsley-Bancroft road to determine what action should be taken to proceed with completion of the highway. The grade and general condition of the road from Pembroke to Peterborough is reported to be satisfactory excepting the sixteen miles from Apsley to Bancroft, and both Mr. Ferguson and Mr. Elliott emphasized the importance of increasing operations on that stretch of the highway which is of particular interest to Peterborough.

Completing Job.

"Mr. McQuesten assured us that he would be in this vicinity within a few days," Mr. Elliott said, "and we are expecting that the work on the Apsley-Bancroft link will increase in volume by fall. Curran and Briggs have the contract for the section along the Haliburton boundary and are getting on to the finish; "what we want is the Johnston job to become active again, and when we get the other four miles let to some contractor we will have a real highway through Apsley and Bancroft. Personally I think it will bring more steady business to Peterborough than is generally anticipated."

Award Ray Fry Parchment For Saving Boy

Ray F. Fry, 514 Water street, will receive a parchment in recognition of his rescue last year of 12-year-old Maurice Lefave, who tumbled into the Otonabee River from the Canada Packers Limited wharf, it was announced today by the Royal Canadian Humane Association.

The parchments are awarded "in recognition of deed of heroism and presence of mind in saving life." Twelve Ontario and Quebec people received the awards this year.

Fry, an employee of the Quaker Oats Company, was employed at the Canada Packers at the time of the rescue on June 29, 1937. He was walking across the C.P.R. bridge on his way to night shift work when the alarm was raised for the youngster, who had been walking along the edge of the packing company wharf when he lost his balance and fell into the water. He was unable to swim.

Fry leaped fully dressed into the water, came up with the boy under his arm. George O'Dette came up in a motor boat and pulled both rescuer and rescued to safety. The rescue was performed so quickly the youngster had not lost conciousness, although he was ill from swallowing water. Thomas Sargent, then president of the Peterborough Humane Society, recommended Fry for an award a few days later.

Has Death Ray

Invention of a powerful "death ray," so potent it can cut quarter-inch steel plate at 300 yards and wither human or animal bodies, is claimed by Major Arthur W. Marchant, construction engineer, who is pictured at Somerville, Mass. The ray, which Marchant says is invisible and odorless and more mysterious and harder to analyze than electricity, will be given to the United States government for sole military rights. The government has been so impressed by a series of secret tests that Major Marchant and five co-inventors have been supplied with unlimited materials for experiments.

Parade Starts At 8.00 P.M. For Ex' Grounds

The Peterborough Merchants Parade which is being held in connection with the showing of the stage presentation, "Pageant of Progress," will start at 8 o'clock sharp tonight only from the Confederation Square and then proceed directly to the Exhibition Grounds where it will pass in review before hundreds of spectators on the grand stand. Dozens of local merchants, agents and manufacturers are planning floats, exhibits, trucks and every kind of locomotive device which can be uncovered from attics, barns and cellars showing their oldest product as compared with the most up-to-date articles carried by their companys today.

Spectators will be greeted by an array of old motor cars, high wheel and tandem bicycles, old buck boards and covered wagons such as they have never seen since 1888. It is said that Fire Chief Gimblett has a surprise up his sleeve for all except the real old timers.

In case of rain the parade will be postponed until Friday evening and the show will then be advanced one night, being presented on Friday and Saturday.

FICTION AND FEATURES

TWO WORLDS

BY MAUD McCURDY WELCH

READ THIS FIRST:

Noel Shayne, wealthy society girl, is in love with Dr. Julian Paige, a serious-minded young physician who declares he will not permit himself to fall in love with Noel because of the contrasting worlds in which they live. Determined to show Julian she has stamina, Noel gives up a long trip with her aunt, turns over her income of $100,000 to her uncle who is in financial difficulties, buys her first outfit of inexpensive clothes and tells Julian she is going to find a job. After moving to a dingy rooming house she finds an ad for a governess. About to start on her new adventure, she finds her purse has been stolen, leaving her with only $4. Applying for the governess post, Noel is given a cool reception and no job. Later, dropping in at Julian's office, she is irked by the antagonistic manner of Ruth Chester, his pretty nurse. Finding nothing else, Noel takes a job as a taxi dancer, temporarily. She offers to share her room with Laurie Evans, a girl she met in the park. Laurie has just lost her job at the same dance hall. Then Noel runs into Julian. Noel doesn't tell Julian where she is working, leading him to believe she expects to land the governess post. During a scene with Ruth Chester, the nurse tells Noel that her "plan" will never work.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

CHAPTER 7

NOEL HAD never heard so much restrained fury as there had been in Ruth Chester's voice when the nurse had spoken her mind. She had said that Noel would never marry Julian Paige for "a darn good reason." Noel pondered over that a long time. She couldn't imagine what Ruth Chester had meant.

As Noel walked to her job at the Peacock that night, she could hardly get her mind off of Ruth Chester and how coldly furious she had been. From the first moment she had seen her, Noel had thought Ruth Chester was madly in love with Julian. Now she had given herself away, even though Julian might be thoroughly unconscious of it.

Also Ruth Chester was even prettier than Noel had realized. And she had the advantage of working in the clinic next to Julian's office, and could run in and see him all during the day when she was not busy. She had every chance in the world to win Julian's love, Noel had to admit to herself. And Julian admired Ruth very much. He was always saying something complimentary about her.

There wasn't any use trying not to see it, Noel told herself unhappily: Ruth Chester was a dangerous rival, and a very determined one.

But Noel finally managed to dismiss her from her mind. She had to put all her thoughts on her work. It wasn't going to be easy even then, though Laurie had given Noel a number of pointers on what to do, and what not to do. So Noel wasn't going to work in ignorance on her first evening.

As soon as she entered the Peacock, she went to the dressing room and slipped into the gold tulle evening dress and the high-heeled gold sandals, which she had brought with her in a pasteboard box.

There were many girls in there putting on makeup, and adding last minute touches to their hair. Most of them spoke to her, recognized her as a new girl and seemed friendly enough.

Noel found dancing at the Peacock wasn't nearly so unpleasant as she had feared it would be. All the men with whom she danced treated her with respect. Noel hadn't been sure they would. She had been afraid because she was paid to dance with them, and anybody could ask her for a dance, that some of them might feel they could take liberties, might even insist on going home with her.

But nothing like that happened Noel learned that it was against Luigi's rules for the girls to accept the patrons of the Peacock as escorts home. "Just one of Luigi's crazy ideas," one of the girls told her. But it gave Noel a sense of relief.

Quite fortunately for her, the Peacock was only about five blocks from the rooming house on Court street. So she walked the short distance alone.

Laurie was there in the lumpy bed, sleeping soundly. Noel crawled in beside her, and suddenly, it seemed as if her whole body was one intense ache. Once she was relaxed, she found even the slightest movement meant agony.

It seemed to Noel that she had been asleep only about 10 minutes when Laurie awakened her the next morning. But it was 8.30.

Laurie was up, looking rested and refreshed. "I hated to call you," she said, "but we've got to be up and doing, you know. Besides, I've got you some hot coffee."

"Coffee! Where on earth—?" Noel sat up in bed. To her surprise, she found the pain was all gone, even though she had felt when Laurie awakened her that nothing on earth could ever induce her to move again.

Then Laurie was pouring the coffee in a 10-cent store cup which was badly chipped. Once Noel would have turned away in loathing from such a cup, but the aroma of the coffee was irresistible. She held out her hands eagerly.

Laurie, rummaging around in the cabinet of the old-fashioned washstand, found a saucer to go with the cup, even though it didn't match. Then she placed the cup and saucer on the upended top of a small drawer she had withdrawn from the washstand just above the cabinet part. "Modom, here is your tray," she said playfully. "Shall I draw your bawth now?"

Noel didn't look at her for a moment. "How on earth did you manage such a miracle?" she asked at last.

Laurie explained that she had bought the coffee with some of the money Noel had given her, saying that it was lots cheaper to have a bit of breakfast in their room than to go out to a cafe.

"Yes, I suppose so." Noel agreed thoughtfully. Then she said, "You'll have to teach me to—make coffee."

Laurie's eyes grew wide. "You mean you don't know how?"

"Not how to—to make it as you do," Noel evaded.

Then Laurie said, "Feel stiffish this morning?"

"I was just about dead until you gave me the coffee. But I'm feeling grand now." Just to prove it, Noel sprang up and did a little dance step around the room in her pajamas, the cup and saucer in her hand.

"Be careful of the china," Laurie gigled. "It might get chipped."

"That would be too—too awful," Noel laughed.

Then Laurie wanted to know how things had gone at the Peacock. "Better than I hoped," Noel told her, beginning to brush her golden curls, and wondering how soon she'd be able to manage a bath in the bathroom down the hall. Yesterday she had made four trips with soap and towel before she had found it unoccupied. When she had a chance to get in at last, she found it most uninviting. So much enamel had peeled off the tub, it looked as if it had a bad case of scrofula.

But Laurie, it appeared had already managed a bath. "You have to get there early," she said in answer to Noel's question as to when it would be best to try for a bath. "Any time around 8 o'clock you'll get the busy signal."

Then she explained that in an emergency, you could get a bath of sorts in the bowl. Noel looked at it in superb distaste.

But Laurie was still thinking about Luigi's. "So everything passed off okay, did it?"

Noel nodded. "Nobody tried to get the least bit fresh. But I had to dance every dance with a lot of cut-ins: Guess that was why I was so tired."

"If the men are not respectful, Luigi has them thrown out on their ears," Laurie said. "That's the one nice thing about the place. It isn't the men you have to dance with that you have to—" but she didn't finish.

"Listen, you take this money," Noel thrust it into her unwilling hands. Then she said, "You're going to stay with me, aren't you, even when you get a job?"

"Do you want me to?" Laurie asked.

"Yes, I do. I want you very much. You see, I like you," Noel said earnestly.

So that was all settled.

The two girls soon started off in search for jobs. Noel had more confidence than she had had before. When you had one job the chances were you would find another.

But she also knew that dancing was hard on her shoes. The gold sandals, although expensive, were not made for the hard service they had received last night. She'd have to have money for another pair before long, if she stayed at Luigi's.

Once again she sat in the park and studied the ads. She found several this morning that looked promising. A girl to work in a florist's shop. Noel believed she could do that. But when she made application, the dread word experience bobbed up, and the next thing she knew she was out on the street, courteously but firmly refused.

A girl had to find a job before she could get experience. And she had to get experience befeore she could get a job. So what could she do? She decided to ask Laurie.

DOROTHY DIX

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—Do you know of any way that I can wake my mother up and make her see what a lovely world this is and how good it is to live? She has no real cause for her melancholy, for, while she doesn't have everything she wants, she has a comfortable living, a good husband and children who love her and want to make her happy, but she still finds life tasteless and is always saying she would be better off dead. I am always telling her of her blessings and how much she has to enjoy, but she takes them so much for granted that they are of little value to her. And the strange thing about her is that she seems content with her condition. She makes no attempt for happiness. I am thrilled to my finger tips with living and planning what I am going to do, and it hurts me to get so much from life and mother so little.

MARY BELLE.

ANSWER:

"Those who would bring back the wealth of Ophir must take the wealth of Ophir with them," says the old proverb. We get out of life just exactly what we put into it, nothing more. You get happiness because you bring a brave heart and a high spirit and a determination to make the best of circumstances to this business of living, and these are the open sesame to happiness. You go to Ophir with a smile and you come back with laughter bubbling over your lips.

Your mother gets nothing but unhappiness out of life because she deliberately shuts out all the sunshine and lives in a world of gloom. She refuses to enjoy any of the pleasures she could have. She minimizes the good and exaggerates the unpleasantness of her lot. She wallows in melancholy and her bread is sorrow and her drink is tears, and because she hunts for trouble she always finds it. She takes dust and ashes to Ophir and her mouth is dry with them when she comes back.

Happiness comes from within ourselves, and it is more a matter of self-determination than anything else. We must will to be happy if we want to be happy. We must have the courage to fight for happiness and the grit to take it and hold it when it comes our way. We must be strong enough not to let ourselves be overwhelmed and discouraged by the trials and disappointments of life. We must cultivate a philosophy that will be a shield and buckler against the slings and arrows of Fate if we want to be happy.

Most people think that whether or not we are happy is a matter of luck, but it is not. It is a matter of choice since, in reality, our outward circumstances have little to do with it. It is not what life brings us that makes us happy, but our attitude toward life. Some of the happiest people I have ever known have been the poorest, and many of the richest have been the most miserable.

Youth, health, wealth, high position, all of these should make for happiness, but they do not if they are united to a dissatisfied, fault-finding, sour temper that finds nothing good in all God's world. Poverty, sickness, anxiety, care seem excuse enough for unhappiness, but how often we see a blithe spirit nullify all of these handicaps! For laughter can turn a dinner of herbs into a feast. You will see more smiling faces in jitneys than you will in limousines, and many a crippled newsboy gets so much fun out of life that he is a regular cheer leader.

So there you are, my dear. You are filled with the joy of living. You get pleasure out of everything, the song of a bird, the unfolding of a flower, a cheap new dress, an evening at the movies, a good dinner. You like to work. You like meeting people. You like games. Everything brings you a thrill of interest and pleasure. And you are sorry for your mother because life is so dull and drear and drab for her.

But don't worry over her. You are wasting your sympathy over her. She is having the time of her life being miserable. She enjoys whining and complaining, and she wouldn't cheer up if she could. So let her alone and let her divert herself in her own dark blue, pessimistic way. Just thank God you didn't inherit her disposition and go on your own joyous way. If the melancholy didn't enjoy melancholia they would snap out of it.

* * * * * *

DEAR MISS DIX—I have a 10-year-old son who has such filthy habits he runs me wild. He wears a pair of trousers two days and then they are beyond repair. Shoes do not last him more than a week. He washes himself like a cat and will not comb his hair. He looks like a vagabond the minute after I have prepared him for school. He knows no shame. I lecture him, scold him, punish him, but it does no good. I am desperate. What can I do about it?

MRS. J. S.

ANSWER:

Perhaps you did not start training him in the cradle in habits of neatness and order. If a mother begins early enough and has the strength and energy and determination to do it, she can usually civilize a boy by ten years' hard work sufficiently to make him prefer clean clothes and wash behind his ears.

Of course, you can't let your son grow up with slovenly habits and an utter disregard of appearances, because that will handicap him as long as he lives. The first thing we all notice about a stranger is whether he is neat and clean, and it is thumbs down on him if he is grimy and unkempt. It takes genius to offset a soiled collar and finger nails in mourning.

But don't take your little boy's untidiness too much to heart. You may think that all of your lectures on cleanliness have gone for naught, but just wait two or three years until he begins to get girl-conscious and then you will see him begin to put slickum on his hair and polish his shoes and press his trousers, and his father won't be able to keep a single decent necktie.

In the meantime, as long as blame hasn't worked, why don't you try flattery on him? That is the lever that moves even the world of little boys. Tell him how good-looking he is when he is clean and dressed up instead of what a tramp he looks when he is filthy. I knew a mother who turned a rude little boy into a perfect Chesterfield by bragging, where he could hear her, about John's beautiful manners. Johnny had picked up an old lady's handkerchief and eaten his soup without spilling it all over his jacket for once, and his wily mother seized on the incident to establish a precedent that Johnny had to live up to.

It is no use picking on children about their faults. They don't even listen to you. But they are amenable to praise.

GOODNIGHT STORY

By MAX TRELL

"AND NOW," said Ding-Dong to Knarf and Hanid, the shadow children with the turned-about names, "I want you to come with me and meet the clowns in the circus."

The two shadows danced with joy when they heard this. They had always wanted to meet circus clowns. "I bet they're good and funny," Hanid said.

By this time they had reached

"Oh!" cried Knarf. "Teach me how to be a clown, please!"

the clowns' quarters. They were little houses, painted all different colors, with stripes and circles and stars and spangles. But the most curious thing about these little houses was that they were all topsy-turvy. Some of them bent this way, some that way, and some stood on their heads.

All Tumbled.

"They're all tumbled about." Hanid said.

"I know why!" Knarf broke in. "Its because the clowns who live in them are always tumbling about."

"Quite right," Ding-Dong agreed. "I can see that you know a great deal about circus clowns. But there comes one of the clowns now. It's Boo-Hoo. He's the funniest clown of all."

He's Clumsy, Too.

At this moment Boo-Hoo came over. His face was all painted. He was dressed in a funny red and white suit which didn't fit him; his shoes were much too big, and his stockings were different colors. Just as he reached the spot where Ding-Dong and the two shadows were standing, he tripped and landed in a heap on top of Knarf.

"I'm very, very, very sorry," he apologized to Knarf when he got to his feet again. "I should have looked where I was going. Why, you're a very bright young lad, aren't you?" Then he turned to Ding-Dong and said: "One of our clowns left to-day. I think we'll be needing another."

"Oh!" cried Knarf. "Teach me how to be a clown, please!"

The Stars Say . . .

By GENEVIEVE KEMBLE

For Friday, August 5.

This should be a particularly lively and enterprising day. There is prospect of promotion, preferment and honors from superiors or employers. But it is a propitious time for launching new undertakings. Care should be taken in signing papers as there is a menace of fraud or misrepresentation.

If This Is Your Birthday

Those whose birthday it is may have a very enterprising year, with great ambition winning the favoritism of employers and those in authority. It might be advisable to be cautious in signing papers or contracts.

A child born on this day may have splendid initiative, should be successful on its own or in employment, and will be greatly favored by superiors. But it may be disposed to attain its objectives in the easiest way.

Bank Of England Slows Up Gold Scramble

LONDON, Aug. 4 (CP Cable). — Sudden scramble for gold was temporarily halted in the London market this morning when the Bank of England threw in heavy offerings to sell the dollar at $4.89½ to the pound, the highest quotation reached since last April. Yesterday's closing rate was $4.90½.

The bank's action came after gold had reached 142 shillings half penny, also the best quotation in several months, and had a prompt steadying influence.

Financial interests professed to be mystified by the latest demand for the dollar and for gold, but generally were inclined to attribute it to continental gold hoarders and a crop of "wild rumors." The rumors in circulation were:—

The powers adhering to the tripartite monetary agreement are planning general currency devaluation in terms of gold as a means of reviving international trade.

Reports the sterling-dollar rate will be allowed to find its level at the old par value of $4.86 2-3 to the pound; and possibilities of an open rupture between Russia and Japan over the present frontier dispute.

U. S. Stocks In Demand.

Other factors contributing to firmness of the dollar included increased demand for United States stocks on this side and improved commercial demand for the dollar.

Commenting on the latest market activity, the financial editor of the News Chronicle says "The dollar-sterling-gold triangle offers a vista of interesting developments."

"There is a strong body of opinion in the market which sees the dollar up to about $4.86 and the price of gold at 143 shillings or over," he adds. "Superimposed on these possibilities there are ever recurring rumors that the dollar itself will be devalued in terms of gold.

"The prolonged discussions in Paris of Henry Morgenthau, United States secretary of the treasury, have revived them despite all categorical denials. The gold hoarding movement, therefore, looks like continuing. Some observers of the market suggest it has only just begun."

Gold worth £2,977,000 (about $14,385,000) sold at 142 shilling and a halfpenny an ounce—four and a half pence (nine cents) over yesterday's price. The demand came from all parts of the continent.

Conservative estimates placed the quantity of gold hoarded in London at £250,000,000 ($1,250,000,000).

Yesterday's gold price was 141 shillings eight pence (approximately $34.75) an ounce—a figure not previously reached since April 12, 1937.

Seymour Council Sets Tax Rate

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, August 4. — A motion requesting the Hydro Electric Power Commission to erect three street lights at Trent River, was passed at the monthly meeting of the township council held on Tuesday afternoon. It was pointed out that the cost of power for the lights would be born by the township.

A by-law providing for the 1938 tax rates as follows, was passed—County rate 10.5 mills, county rate for high and continuation schools, 4.2 mills; township rate 6.5 mills; general school rate 5.3 mills; high school trustee rate, S.S. No. 8, 5.5 mills; high school debenture rate S.S. No. 8, 4.0 mills.

A request from F. Dobscha, proprietor of Puff-Ball-Inn for some gravel to be placed on that part of the road leading to the inn which belongs to the township was granted. Another request for road repairs made in this instance by W. F. Scott who claimed the portion of road joining concessions 4 and 5 opposite lot 9 was badly in need of repair.

After the report of the committee on the condition of road allowance opposite H. Nicholas's property, had been heard it was decided that no action would be taken to open up the road.

Miss J. Terry requested the council to give her permission to extend the closing time at the pavilion at Trent River from 11.30 to 12.00 o'clock on Monday, Thursday and Friday nights. The request was granted and the clerk was ordered to prepare the necessary by-law.

Cause Of Mexico's Political Split

Disciplinary action to Col. Bolivar Sierra, LEFT, and Gen. Ramon F. Iturbe, RIGHT, because they refused to remove their signatures from a manifesto denouncing both Fascism and Communism, has caused a wide rift in Mexican politics. The P.R.M. (Mexican Revolution party) has dismissed the pair from the organization, branding them "traitors to the cause of the workers." However, the Democratic front, which is gaining momentum in Mexico, is behind the army men and the Mexican congress has decided to take their cases into consideration. This is declared as a decided slap to P.R.M. leaders, who are said to have a tendency toward Communism.

P. Moher. The nuptial mass was celebrated by Rev. Father A. Naessens, O.M.I. Mrs. Olsen played the wedding marches.

For her wedding gown, the bride chose chalk-white chiffon, fashioned Empire style, which fell full length over taffeta and spread entrain. Her long veil hung from a Juliet cap of orange blossom. She carried an originally arranged Colonial bouquet of white roses, circled by forget-me-nots.

As you no doubt have read so often it is monotonous Mousses are about the finest type of frozen dessert to make for your mechanical refrigerator—for they do not "flake."

They are also suitable for hand freezer so nobody is neglected.

Peanut Brittle Mousse

One-half cup ground peanut brittle, 1 cup milk, few grains salt, 1 teaspoon granulated gelatin, 1 tablespoon cold water, 3 eggs, 1½ teaspoons vanilla, 1 cup cream whipped. Put peanut brittle through finest knife of food chopper. Then add it to the milk and heat in top of double boiler. Soak the gelatin in the cold water 5 minutes. Stir until dissolved in the hot mixture. Beat the eggs together well enough to mix them, then pour the hot mixture slowly over them while stirring. Chill this well, then fold in the cream which has been whipped until stiff. Pour into trays of mechanical refrigerator and freeze without stirring or pour into mould, cover tightly, and pack in equal parts ice and salt and leave for 3 hours.

If you desire other frozen desserts kindly let me know.

Kitchen Shower for Lakefield Bride

LAKEFIELD, Aug. 4.—Mrs. Lloyd Crapp (formerly Viola Murphy) was honored Tuesday evening when a number of her girl friends gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. John Blakely and there showered the popular bride with a shower of kitchenware, enamelled in ivory and red.

About twenty-five friends were present. Miss Ethel Blakely made a short speech asking Mrs. Crapp to accept the gifts on behalf of those present and wishing the bride much happiness. Miss Eva Higgins then assisted the bride to unwrap her gifts, after which Mrs. Crapp thanked her friends in a gracious speech and invited the girls to visit her in her new home. Everyone joined in singing "For She's a Jolly Good Fellow."

The evening was spent most enjoyably in games and contests. Candy was passed during the evening.

The members of the staff of the Bell Telephone office at Lakefield, where Mrs. Crapp has been employed for the past year recently presented the bride with an electric sandwich toaster as a token of their regard.

WOMEN'S WORK AND INTERESTS

Reducing the Waistline Tempting Foods Plentiful

By MARY MOORE

If you are thin, don't read this. It is for that great Sisterhood-Under-the-Skin who have bulgitis-at-the-waistline.

I am writing this to shame myself into observing its Spartan truths. I am worse off than Napoleon was (except that I am alive) for I have two Waterloos: one is a great fondness for tomato sandwiches in August and September; another is a wicked delight in reading in bed at night which robs me of time to do my daily waistline exercises (there's no time for them in the morning for the moment the youngsters hear me about they are clamoring for their breakfasts).

So I will not be tempted by foods that nourish me too well I forestall that undeniable hunger that creeps on (especially when I have had only coffee and fruit for breakfast) at about eleven o'clock every morning by eating fruit—peaches, cherries, grapefruit, and not too often a ripe banana—and a large glass of water.

An invariable rule for lunch is soup—if it is a torrid day and soup is out of the question—I drink a glass of skim milk. This takes the edge off of a roast beef and potato appetite and you can look at your salad with a smile instead of a groan.

Put A Thrill Into Your Slimming Salad

A collection of lettuce, celery, radishes, cucumbers, cabbage, tomatoes—even if they are all choice, can be very lack-lustre when a gal is hungry. Keep tiny tins of anchovy fillets, good quality cardines, lobster paste, and ripe olives, and the like in the back row of your canned goods shelves—to me these little tidbits are the rewards of exercising control over an appetite that yearns for toast and jam.

Since there is always a catch to things that seem too simple and too easy there has to be a catch in this salad diet. There is too—mayonnaise made of egg yolks and salad oil is one of the grandest ways to fatten up yet to be discovered. However it to can be frustrated by making

Mineral Oil Mayonnaise

Sift together ¾ teaspoon mustard, ½ teaspoon sugar, ½ teaspoon salt, few grains cayenne into a bowl. Then beat in 1 large egg yolk (or 2 small) into the dry ingredients and add 1 tablespoon lemon juice (or vinegar), stirring. Measure ¾ cup very cold mineral oil, and add it ¼ teaspoon at a time (beating with rotary beater between each addition). When ¼ cup of oil has been added you may now start adding it 1 teaspoon at a time, until it begins to thicken. Add another tablespoon lemon juice at this point and add remaining oil 1 tablespoon at a time until it is used up. Store in cool place, tightly covered. This keeps well.

If mayonnaise is one of your pet hates and you insist on French Dressing some nice variations are additions of Worcestershire or Lea and Perrin's sauce; crumbled Roquefort cheese (or any other old cheese you fancy); onion juice and finely chopped green pepper.

For your fruit salad try mixing some of the juice from a bottle of maraschino cherries with some heavy mayonnaise—pretty and good.

You all have your own ways of serving lettuce, but by this time (meaning if you have read this far) you are willing to try the other fellows:

Lettuce Variations

Slice a firm head of head lettuce into slices about one-half inch thick. Brush the cut side with the cut side of an onion. Garnish with sprigs of parsley or watercress, and dot center with chopped pimiento—or if no pimiento is at hand sprinkle lettuce with paprika. Pass chilled mayonnaise or Roquefort French Dressing.

Pull loose head lettuce apart, breaking the leaves into small pieces with the fingers. Wash well one head of spinach—about 8 leaves—and break them up small. To this add shredded canned crabmeat—about half an 8-oz. can to one medium head lettuce. Marinate (moisten in ice box) with French Dressing well flavored with condiments and serve with whole wheat or rye health crackers and some old cheese.

Young Green Cabbage

A new cabbage, opening its outer leaves as much like a rose as possible is so lovely to me cabbage and green pea salad have become one of my fondest. Shred the cabbage with your sharpest knife as finely as possible—let soak in ice water to which you have added 1 tablespoon vinegar for half an hour, then dry well between towels. To this add 1 teaspoon grated onion or onion juice, 1 teaspoon horseradish (grated or prepared), 1 tablespoon finely grated carrot. Crushed walnuts and little chunks of orange are a nice addition if you want to be exotic—if not serve the salad garnished with sliced or wedge-shaped tomatoes, and pass mayonnaise.

The green pea and cabbage combination treats the cabbage just the same—but the season has passed for fresh cooked green peas, so canned ones have to be trained—use about ½ as many peas as you do cabbage, and blend them with the mineral oil mayonnaise—see above.

Unless you are an inveterate salad addict you will not have tried this.

Caulisalad

One cup finely chopped choice white cauliflower (chopped on board with knife—not ground), 2 tablespoons finely chopped Spanish or Bermuda onion, ½ cup ripe or stuffed olives, 1 head shredded head lettuce, ½ to 2-3 cup French Dressing, ½ cup Roquefort cheese crumbled. Marinate all but the lettuce and cheese in the French Dressing in refrigerator for ½ hour before serving. When ready add the lettuce and chees and toss lightly together with forks in wooden salad bowl. This amount serve six generously. To make this into a main course salad for luncheon or supper add diced chicken or veal.

We mentioned tomatoes so extensively last week, they have been omitted purposely here. We'll go into the fruit salad subject late next month.

Perfect Week-End Outfit

The perfect weekend guest! She is pretty, of course, or at least she is very sweet and dainty. And she is nicely dressed. Here is a charming guest stepping from her train for an August weekend with a close friend. She is dressed in jacket frock of aqua and white printed rayon designed by Betina Casabona. The jacket is very useful for it is reversible. It is lined with linen, which faces the revers and edges the short sleeves. Worn with a wide-brimmed rough white straw hat with aqua ribbon trim. Without the jacket you have a perfect dress for Sunday parties—with or without a hat, as you prefer or the occasion demands.

JUST BETWEEN US WOMEN

"England and America are bound together in peaceful fetters by the strongest of all ligatures that can bind two nations to each other, namely, commercial interests; and which, every year, renders more impossible, if the term may be used, a rupture between the two Governments."—Richard Cobden.

Dear Friends:

Continuing my travel talks, I will now describe our visit to New York City. My sisters live sixteen miles from there, so we took the bus (one dollar return for two days, 65 cents returning same day).

As you approach it fro mthe New Jersey side, the road twists and turns, so that you get a continual view of its marvellous sky-line, than which I think there is nothing to equal it in the world.

This time we decided to go by the Lincoln Tunnel, as the last time we went over in the ferry. It is a weird feeling to drive so far right under a river, but it is all lit up by hidden electric lights on the sides, while a line of lights in the flooring marks the centre, so there is no danger of accidents.

Besides that, there are policemen stationed at different points all along the way. The bus made a hollow sound, and the driver was one of those smart fellows who like to drive with the exhaust wide open to make as much noise as possible, and to give us the odor of burning oil.

When we reached our meeting place with our friend, we had to wait a little while, and saw a police wrecking truck carrying strung up by ropes, the worst looking wreck of a car we had ever seen. We were also surprised to see the wreck was a police car too.

That night we read all about it, where some man who had been in the "pen" for ten years for a beastly crime had been paroled, and had decided to hold up a club on the outskirts of the city.

When the police came in the front door, they run out the back door, round to the front, stole the police car, and in running off with it, could not make a turn, and crashed into a bridge, killing one and maiming the other so badly he did not live. But we acted as if these things were a commonplace to us, as they did.

After we had had a shower and rested for a while, (we, in the meantime giving our friend all the news from home), we sallied out and went to a lovely place for supper or dinner I should say as it was just six p.m. I do not like sweet potatoes, and I like chicken cut in smaller pieces as it is better to handle. But we had a nice dinner.

Then we went to a show, vaudeville and movies, and emerged at 1.30 a.m., and strolled up Broadway as if it were noon. We saw many dressed in evening clothes, the streets were thronged, and as we neared the hotel, we saw a man place a placard in a restaurant window saying "Breakfast was now served" and this at 2.15 a.m.

We then accompanied our friend to the subway, and next day she told us she saw a stabbing in the corridors there, so we were glad we did not go down. Next day we saw a broadcast, which we enjoyed very much.

The Queen Mary was in dock, but we just took a peek at her, no time for anything else. We then went shopping on Fifth Avenue, and the prices would stagger you, yet ladies, believe it or not, the best stores favored black for day or evening wear.

There was a bad storm with hailstones as big as walnuts, a five alarm fire, ambulances trailing behind, in fact no end to the excitement, until I said I was sure they were putting on a show for us.

We saw Hughes big silver plane setting out on that memorable journey, and when we were back in New Jersey we saw it return. Want any more? Let me know.

Your Friend,
ROBERTA.

The Mosquitoes Stayed

SWARTHMORE, Pa., Aug. 4 (AP).—Kenneth Reed dumped 24 goldfish into a spring-fed well on a local golf course with the comment: "They'll eat the mosquitoes." A week later the mosquitoes remained ,the fish were gone. Reed refused to draw any conclusions.

German Request For Pictures

The report of the Manufacturers' committee passed by the council Monday night was as follows:

That several photographs of views of Peterborough be sent to Atlantic Photo-Verlag of Berlin, Germany, as requested by them for use in German illustrated newspapers.

That this city pay, as suggested by the Mayor of Lindsay, $20.00, if a sign is erected at Huntsville, as outlined in a diagram attached to the Mayor's letter, directing tourists to the Kawartha Lakes' district, and other municipalities join in paying for the erection of the sign.

That the Department of Highways be requested to have a pointer placed on the sign post on No. 12 Highway at Manchester indicating the road and mileage to Peterborough, and that a copy of this resolution be sent to A. L. Elliott, M.P.P.

And included in the Legal committee's report was the following resolution:

Whereas Industrial Schools and Training Schools are more in the nature of corrective institutions for the protection of society in general than a part of the educational system of the province;

And whereas the maintenance of penal and corrective institutions is generally accepted as a Provincial and Dominion responsibility;

And whereas it is desirable to obtain a more logical location of services provided by the various governments, and such corrective service in the interests of society as a whole would not appear to be a legitimate charge on real estate alone, from which practically all municipal revenues are obtained;

Be is resolved that the Provincial government be asked to relieve the municipalities of the maintenance of children committed to the Industrial and Training schools of the province under the provisions of the Industrial Schools Act and the Training Schools Act, and that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the Hon. the Provincial Secretary of Ontario.

Jewels This Fall

This fall, according to those in the know, will see our lovely ladies of fashion gaily bedecked in sparkling rubies, sapphires, pearls, emeralds and diamonds, much in the manner of the miss ABOVE. According to the story they tell, it is Lady Mendl, British society leader, who is responsible for this fashion whim. When she recently visited several of the high potentates and Maharajahs of India, her hosts showed their overflowing gem vaults and sent her home with several quarts of the above-mentioned gems. Lady Mendl had several lavish settings made for them and as a result several manufacturers asked permission to copy them.

SPEAKING OF "STUNT" FLIGHTS!

Primary Election Honors Split For Roosevelt

WASHINGTON, Aug. 4—(AP). — Supporters and opponents of President Roosevelt's administration divided the honors to-day in four Democratic primary elections.

Senator Bennett Clark of Missouri, foe of the controversial court bill and other measures favored by the President, won a landslide renomination in that State. So did Senator George McGill of Kansas, loyal follower of the President.

Their victories were not unexpected, however, for both had the active backing of their State party organizations. President Roosevelt had taken no part in either race.

The same division extended to nominations for House of Representatives seats in the other States. Three West Virginia representatives who have supported the President, defeated their opponents, but in Virginia two avowed new dealer backers lost out.

Representative Howard Smith, of Virginia, won a 3-to-1 victory over William E. Dodd, Jr., son of the former ambassador to Germany. The vote, with 10 precincts missing, was: Smith, 19,601; Dodd, 6,530.

Smith, a Rules committee member who fought the wage-hour bill, claimed the right to vote as he thought best on administration measures, while the 32-year-old Dodd had said, "A vote for me is a vote for Roosevelt." Smith was on the "blacklist" of Labor's Non-Partisan League (Committee for Industrial Organization), but he led 2-to-1 in Alexandria, home of John L. Lewis, C.I.O. chief.

A Closer Contest

The only other Virginia House race was much closer. Representative Norman Hamilton, calling himself pro-Roosevelt despite his vote against the government reorganization bill, lost by about 1,500 votes to former Representative Colgate Darden, whom he had unseated in 1936.

In yesterday's Republican primaries, greatest interest was shown in the Kansas senatorial race because of campaign charges that one of the four candidates — the Rev. Gerald Winrod — was pro-Nazi. Winrod, who denied the accusation, ran third.

The nomination went to former Governor Clyde Reed. The count in half the state gave him 22,000 more votes than Dallas Knapp, running second, and 26,000 more than Winrod. The Rev. J. C. Fisher trailed.

Governor Walter Huxman, Democrat, was renominated without opposition. State Senator Payne Ratner was ahead for the Republican gubernatorial nomination.

Winner of the Republican senatorial contest in Missouri was former Governor Henry S. Caulfield, who easily defeated Ray E. White, St. Louis real estate man.

Senator Clark of Missouri polled three and a half times as many votes in the first half of the state to report as did his three opponents combined, Joseph T. Davis, Willis H. Meredith, and Robert I. Young.

Heads Refugee Group

LONDON, Aug. 3—(AP).—George Rublee, United States goverment adviser, today was elected permanent executive director of the intergovernmental committee for aiding refugees from Germany.

Earl Winterton, chancellor of the Duch of Lancaster, became chairman of the committee.

Mountaineer Prexy

Begoggled against the blinding glare of the sun, reflected from the snow-covered mountain, Dr. James Conant, president of Harvard university, is shown returning to his base camp after a long seven-mile grind over the Columbia icefield in Jasper National Park, Alta. Dr. Conant, whose hobby is mountain climbing, made the first ascent this summer—the fourth on record—of North Twin mountain (12,085), third highest peak in the Canadian Rockies.

Rebel Air Might Along Ebro Halts Loyalists

HENDAYE, France, Aug. 4. — (AP).—Spanish insurgents reported to-day that incessant bombardment by hundreds of planes had halted abruptly the government's Ebro river offensive in Catalonia.

The air raiders' curtain of fire was described as so intense that the militiamen were disorganized and unable to reform their lines.

Although dispatches from government lines admitted a slight insurgent aerial supremacy, they insisted government planes had been able to minimize the effects of insurgent bombers.

Observers with the militiamen pointed out that the government continued pouring men, tanks and artillery across the Ebro into the Gandesa sector despite almost a week of insurgent efforts to cut pontoon bridges across the river and isolate government troops.

The government's new tactics of striking rapidly first in one sector and then in another forced insurgents to create a mobile reserve in the rear, thus weakening front line defences.

These shock troops were being moved to a position north of Gandesa—highway junction and General Franco's former insurgent district headquarters 150 miles southwest of Barcelona—to thwart a new menace against the insurgents' left flank which the government reported was ripped open with the capture of the heights of Pobla De Mazaluca.

Lad In For Life Accuses Girl's Father

SOUTH PARIS, Me., Aug. 4. — (CP)—Paul N. Dwyer, 18-year-old convicted slayer of a country doctor, today named former deputy sheriff Francis Carrol as the man who committed the murder for which Dwyer now is serving a life sentence.

Asked by Prosecutor Ralph Ingalls if he had murdered Dr. James G. Littlefield, Dwyer answered "No."

"Did you see him murdered?" Ingalls asked.

"Yes sir, I did."

"Who did murder him?"

"Francis Carroll."

Dwyer, a few months ago sent to prison for life after confessing the murder of Dr. James G. Littlefield, was said by Prosecutor Ralph M. Ingalls in his opening, to have taken the blame after death threats by Carroll, whom he described as a "vicious killer."

His head erect, Dwyer took the witness stand before the room was packed with an audience which included his former sweetheart, Barbara Carroll, 18, daughter of the man on trial.

Dwyer testified Carroll threatened to ruin him and his family unless he relinquished letters from Barbara, which, he said, disclosed allegedly improper relations between the former deputy sheriff and his daughter.

Carroll sat not 15 feet away, his gaze intent upon his accuser, his mouth drawn in a grim line.

Seated in a chair, and speaking in a voice so low some answers had to be repeated by a stenographer, Dwyer, under questioning for Prosecutor Ingalls, related the uneventful history of his small-town boyhood and high school friendship with Barbara.

"Did you become intimate?" Ingalls asked.

"I'd rather not answer that," Dwyer said.

Fatal Prison Threat.

Dwyer testified Carroll killed the elderly physician in the bathroom of the Dwyer home after the doctor had informed Carroll he knew "all about you and Barbara."

Dwyer previously had testified he possessed letters from Barbara Carroll, 18-year-old daughter of the defendant, in which she allegedly disclosed improper relations with her father.

Dwyer said the doctor told Carroll: "I think you belong in state prison, and if there is no one else in South Paris who is man enough to send you there, then I will."

Dwyer testified Carroll followed the doctor upstairs to the bathroom, shouting, "What do you mean?"

"Just what I said," he said the doctor replied.

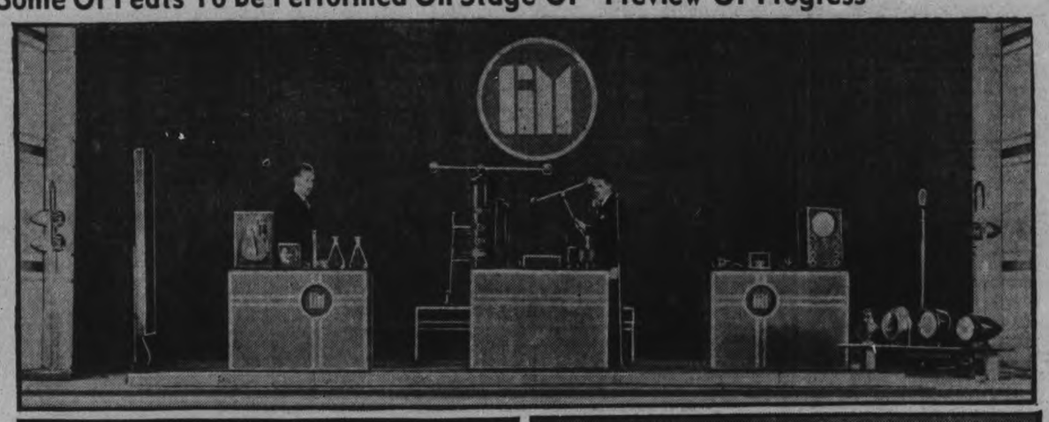
"And then what happened?" asked Ingalls.

"I heard sounds of a struggle. I ran up the stairs, grabbing a wrench and a hammer as I went.

"At the top of the stairs the doctor was stooped over, leaning against the wall, and moaning.

"I tried to hit Carroll with the wrench but it came apart. Carroll grabbed the hammer from me and hit Dr. Littlefield with it."

Some Of Feats To Be Performed On Stage Of "Preview Of Progress"



The stage (TOP) of "Previews of Progress" will be loaded with two tons of laboratory equipment, and marvels of the future will be demonstrated. Frying eggs "sunny side up" is no trick (LOWER LEFT), but Ernest Foss, commentator, fries his using a newspaper for a stove. The feat will be performed Thursday and Friday evenings at the Exhibition Grounds free to the public. You've often danced to music, but did you ever see music dance? (LOWER RIGHT). In "Previews of Progress" music will be converted into a waving line of green light and each sound will dance a different pattern on a glass screen.

Newark To Welcome Corrigan Home As Neighbors Scrap

Newark, N.J., Aug. 4 (AP)

AMUSED over the apparent discord between Manhattan and Brooklyn over the proper reception for Douglas Corrigan, Newark Advertising Club officials today announced plans for welcoming the wrong-way flier to New Jersey's metropolis next Monday.

Corrigan, who started, he said, from Floyd Bennett Field for California and wound up instead in Ireland, will arrive in New York on the liner Manhattan Thursday. Avertising Club spokesmen said he had agreed via radio telephone to their Monday plans.

Millbrook Pastor Honored At Service

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, Aug. 4.—An event of peculiar interest, in connection with the morning service of St. Andrew's church on Sunday, was the dedication of a handsome solid oak communion table, in memory of the late Rev. Joseph and Mrs. Wilkes.

The pastor, Rev. A. L. Siscoe, carried out the dedicatory ritual, after first giving a brief outline of the life of Rev. Mr. Wilkes, who came to Millbrook from Pine, California, during the pastorate of Rev. William Higgs. His early ministry was spent in the Port Perry district, but soon after ordination he transferred to the Michigan Conference of the Baptist Episcopal church.

He was a great lover of the house of God, and did all he could to encourage others, especially the young people, in faithful attendance and service, and in Christian living. It was after his superannuation that Mr. Wilkes came to Millbrook to make his home, and during the years spent here his strong and attractive personality and his active service for the Kingdom, won him the love and respect not only of the entire community, but beyond its borders as well. His death was during the pastorate of W. W. Jones.

The communion table which the church has installed bears carved on its front panel the words "In Rememberance of Me"; and the brass tablet on the side has the inscription, "To the Glory of God, and in Loving Memory of Rev. Joseph and Mrs. Wilkes."

Appropriately following the dedication, Mr. Siscoe preached on the Lord's Supper as told by John, and the male quartette, Messrs. M. McDowell, F. H. Edworthy, J. L. Byam, and W. H. Coombe, sang, "I Know Whom I have Believed."

St. Andrew's will not hold evening service during August, and the young people's choir will have the muscial party of the service for the next two Sunday mornings.

Japanese Smash Chinese Lines On Hankow Rd.

SHANGHAI, August 4—(AP). — Japanese troops were reported today to have overcome stubborn Chinese resistance within 50 miles of Nanchang, an important Chinese air base.

Severe fighting continued, however, along the railroad between Nanchang and Kiukiang, strategic Yangtse river point 135 miles downstream from Hankow, provisional Chinese capital.

The Japanese were thwarted in attempts to crack the defenders' positions at Shahochen, the first town south of Kiukiang, despite deadly air bombardments of Chinese lines on the north bank of the Yangtse.

At least one large-scale aerial battle was fought in that area. The Chinese were reported to have cut Yangtse dikes 125 miles below Hankow to stop by flood the advance toward Hankow.

Japanese forces asserted, however, they have occupied Hwangmei, 25 miles north of Kiukiang. That town gave the Japanese control of the highway to Hankow and placed advance guards on a modern road into the interior.

The Chinese press reported that 20,000 Japanese troops, most of them withdrawn from the conflict in China, passed through Shanhaikwan, near the border of Chihli province in Northern China and Manchoukuo, en route to Manchoukuo.

Start Is Made On Prison Reform Plan

Remissions Eased To Encourage Good Conduct

OTTAWA, Aug. 5 (CP) — The government intends to proceed with prison reform in Canada as rapidly as is possible under the statutes despite the failure of a bill to set up a penitentiaries' commission to pass parliament, Justice Minister Lapointe announced yesterday.

Mr. Lapointe said that some of the recommendations of the royal commission on the penal system, the report of which led to the government's reorganization plans, had already been put into effect.

Inspectors G. L. O'Leary and G. E. Shortt have been named to assist Inspector G. L. Sauvent, acting superintendent of penitentiaries. Inspector Sauvent took over largely the duties of General D. M. Ormond, former superintendent of penitentiaries, who resigned after his retirement had been recommended by the commission.

A major change in the regulations governing the computing of days of remission earned by a convict for good conduct will become effective Aug. 15, Mr. Lapointe's announcement said. The changes will make it easier for remissions to be earned.

The changes "are brought about with a view to encourage good conduct and industry and to facilitate the reformative treatment of convicts," it was said.

CAMP BORDEN, Ont., Aug. 5 (CP) —In preparation for the huge permanent force concentration here starting Aug. 8, and continuing until Sept. 3, headquarters and "B" squadron of the Royal Canadian Dragoons arrived at Camp Borden from Niagara camp today.

The party, consisting of seven officers and 10 0other ranks, with 75 horses, left Niagara-On-the-Lake Monday, and took a little travelled road through Burlington, and across country to Norval and Palgrave, thence north to Camp Borden.

An advance party of two officers and 10 other ranks had been in Camp here since Monday making preparations for the arrival of the main body. "A" squadron, from St. John's, Quebec, is not due to arrive until Aug. 8.

During the four weeks Brigadier W. H. Pelkins, officer commanding Military District No. 2, will be in command of all training at Camp Borden.

The Canadian armoured fighting vehicles school formerly the Canadian tank school staged a mimic "battle" today with an inspection Saturday by a representative of Brigadier Elkins.

The inspection will be the first time in Canada that a tank unit has been inspected. The unit will be the Ontario County Tank Regiment, which went into camp on Monday and leaves on Saturday.

The western detachment of the R.C.A.S.C., from Victoria, Calgary, Regina, and Winnipeg, are due to arrive at Baxter Aug. 8.

Newspaper cameramen, movie and newsreel men, reporters and commentators surround Douglas Corrigan (WAVING) as, with New York's lower West Side in the background, the liner Manhattan steamed up the Hudson to her dock. Britain's '38 R.A.F. Outlay Tops Canada's Budget

Puts Industry On Near Wartime Basis As She Piles Up Vast Secret Reserve

LONDON, Aug. 5 (CP).—Great Britain will spend £126,400,000 ($632,000,000) on the air force this year—more than the Canadian budget for all governmental purposes.

In a gigantic race against time, the Chamberlain government has mapped out a program calling for 2,850 first-line aircraft by 1940, three times as many as in May, 1935. But that's only part of the rearmament program—aircraft factories are being built, airdromes constructed, thousands of pilots trained, bombs, machine guns and other armaments stored up and training schools enlarged.

Between 1935 and the end of 1940, the air expansion program calls for the expenditure of £500,000,000 ($2,500,000,000), representing a fairly big chunk of Canada's whole national debt. The 1938 expenditure will be six times as big as 1934, twice as large as 1936 and 25 per cent. higher than last year. For years after the war, Britain's average expenditure on the air force was £17,000,000 ($85,000,000).

The air force has five functions in Britain's defence plans — home defence, counter-attack, reconnaissance, trade protection and co-operation with the army and navy.

Britain today has an air armada of 123 squadrons, comprising 68 bomber squadrons, 30 fighter squadrons, 15 squadrons of general reconnaissance aircraft and torpedo bombers and 10 squadrons of army co-operation planes. Behind this first-line fleet are greatly enlarged training and reserve organizations in support.

Force Must Equal Any.

"Parity in the air" is the slogan behind it all, a determination to build up an air defence unit which

New York Shows Corrigan He's A Hero

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—(AP). — Cool and brash, young Douglas Corrigan rode triumphantly up lower Broadway to-day, grinning infectiously as the temperature rose and sweltering thousands cheered his progress, indifferent to the oppressive heat.

All the enthusiasm for his mad solo flight from New York to Dublin was let loose in a continuous roar that dinned upon his ears from the Battery to City Hall.

Brokers and business men, bankers and stenographers, clerks and other office workers weren't slowed down a bit by the devitalizing humidity and the heat of the swarming sidewalks.

The tons of torn paper and ticker tape fell, the perspiring crowds yelled and shoved and Corrigan grinned, sitting on back of an open car with James McGurrin, chairman of Mayor La Guardia's reception committee, and the mayor's secretary, Stanley Bowe.

In the second car rode Corrigan's brother, Harry, of Baltimore, and his wife, Anita. In the next car were Walter and Steve Reich, friends who helped Corrigan service his plane at Roosevelt Field in the week Howard Hughes was making his round-the-world flight.

Corrigan Just Grins.

The imperturbable Corrigan grinned just as he had grinned earlier in his hotel suite when he insisted anew he had made an honest mistake in flying to Ireland instead of to California.

He grinned and the crowds roared, trying to picture him alone thinking in the dark mist the time his old crate was thundering through the clouds to soar above the shores of Eire.

From the moment Corrigan was escorted from his hotel by police and detectives who made themselves a flying wedge through the jammed lobby and sidewalk the roars of the crowds were in Corrigan's ears.

The crowd was so dense Corrigan was virtually lifted b ythe police and placed in the automobile for the ride down the west side express highway to the Battery and the start of the parade.

Manhattan and Brooklyn, which in their respective Irish constituencies have been far apart on the Corrigan question joined hands to feet him.

On Long Surprise

Shy, perpetually grinning, and with a ready wit that explodes in the most amazing manner, Corrigan has been in a state of acute surprise since three weeks ago when he flew from Brooklyn for Los Angeles — and landed in Dublin.

Corrigan gets a ticker tape shower down Broadway and a speech by the mayor today. In the manner of air heroes from Col. Charles Lindbergs to Howard Hughes—with a Brooklyn celebration thrown in.

"We've brought the Irish of the two Great borough together, Douglas, my bye," a spokesman told Corrigan as the slight 120-pound airman steamed up the bay yesterday aboard the liner Manhattan.

Dwyer Admits He Lied On One Murder

SOUTH PARIS, Me., Aug. 5.—(AP)—Successful in forcing Paul N. Dwyer, 19, to admit he lied about the slaying of Mrs. Lydia Littlefield, defence attorneys for Francis M. Carroll recalled Dwyer for a third day's cross-examination today.

The schoolboy, sentenced eight months ago to serve a life sentence for the murder of Dr. James G. Littlefield, 67, charges Carroll, a 43-year-old war veteran and former deputy sheriff, actually committed the crime.

A hitherto unrevealed 17-page statement, laboriously penned in prison by Dwyer to describe what he called "the fundamentals of this catastrophe," was read late yesterday. It described Carroll as a "terrible drinker" who "horribly" assaulted his pretty brunette daughter Barbara when she was 12 or 13 years old.

The state contends the girl, now 18, told Dwyer of the alleged assaults and that Dwyer confided in Dr. Littlefield, the latter's knowledge providing a motive for his murder.

Time to Make Story Up

"You had plenty of time to concoct that statement, didn't you," Chief defence counsel Clyde R. Chapman asked. Dwyer conceded he had "several days."

After reviewing Dwyer's earlier confession that he slew both the doctor and his wife, Chapman read the prison-written statement charging Carroll with Mrs. Littlefield's death two days after her husband's last Oct. 13, and asked, "is that statement true?"

"Partially, I think," Dwyer answered.

The youth admitted he lied when he said Carroll handcuffed him to the wheel of his car while the Deputy Sheriff was killing Mrs. Littlefield. He conceded he told it at the time after he "decided to accuse Carroll."

Asked why, he said "I didn't want the officers to know there was nothing to stop me from leaving Carroll there and then if I wanted to."

Purse-Thief Suspect Grabbed In Chase

TORONTO, Aug. 5 (CP).—A man who gave his name as Wilfred Hall, 26, was charged with assault and robbery today after being caught by two men who saw Mrs. Ethel Patterson beaten and her purse snatched by her assailant.

James Milroy and Constable Clyde of the Canadian Pacific Railway heard the woman's cries as they passed in an automobile. Mrs. Patterson's assailant fled when the two men approached, but while the men were taking the woman to a hospital a man was seen who resembled the purse-snatcher.

Milroy and Clyde chased the suspect and captured him in a lumber yard, where they found Mrs. Patterson's purse containing $13.

Silk Is Made From Glass Piping Light

Some Of Wonders Modern Science Told To Kiwanis

Alert businessmen sat in wide-eyed wonder, like a schoolboy seeing his first airplane, today as they looked at inventions so modern they made stream-lining look as though it belonged to the crinoline period. They were listening to an address by Ernest Foss of the Previews of Progress exhibition at the Kiwanis club's weekly luncheon at the Empress hotel.

They saw material that looked like the finest silk and learned that it had been made from glass; they looked through what looked like glass and was actually made of wood and unbreakable; they learned that some day light may be piped just as gas is now; they saw synthetic rubber that is supposed to be better in many ways than the real thing; they looked through a new substance, polaroid, and learned that by it a hundred and one new things may come into existence, including glareless headlights.

"These are only the beginnings," Mr. Foss told them. Through the media of all these substances new industries will spring into being, old industries will fall by the wayside. A new era is opening.

More than ever before men are asking themselves what the world holds in store for them as swift change follows swift change in a seemingly endless parade and no man knows what may come next, he said. At the head of all change stands the research laboratory, foundation of all that is ultra-modern.

Research is not the foreign word most people consider it, but a quest for new knowledge. A few years ago the research laboratry was a "little shack at the back of the shop," he said. Then people began to realize its possibilities as a means of saving money by new and tested methods, and it took on that form. Then it changed again when industrialists learned its value as a means of developing new industries. "I think electric refrigeration is the best example of that," he said.

Coming to Front

"Now chemical engineers are coming to the front and are telling us that we are missing the point of living and working in every way. We have been tearing down the trees, burning and cutting up the timber, digging coal out of the ground. And they are beginning to say that perhaps we have been wrong."

New materials of synthetic nature are being developed to show manufacturers that they can be produced more cheaply than the real article, and to last longer. He showed skeins of yarn, called Lanatol, made not from wool but from skimmed milk. Americans learned the process from Italian manufacturers and are now trying to put it on a commercial basis in this country. "This is far better material than the best quality of virgin wool," he declared. "If it ever goes into production it is going to sell for less than half the cost of wool."

He pointed out that the new product would solve the farmer's problem of what to do with his excess milk, would provide a market for it that would demand larger herds than ever before.

"It looks like glass, but it isn't glass," he said, holding up a material that had all the characteristics of a window pane. "It's made of wood and it's unbreakable. It can be made from as poor a base as sawdust. It lets pass 30 per cent more light than ordinary glass, most of it ultra-violet light." In consequence, through its use in a home, a man might sit inside and obtain almost the full benefits of direct sunlight. Producing an inch-thick bar about two feet in length, he showed that no light is lost in transmission from one end to the other. "You are seeing for the first time piped light. Perhaps some day we will pipe light into our homes, in the same way we now pipe gas." The material can be bent in any way and still no light will escape in transmission. The World's Fair in New York in 1939 will see much of this material in use, he said. The very walls of homes of the future may contain the new material in any colour.

In the path of destruction of forest lands are large heaps of sawdust, up to now of no value. They may be used in fashioning this un-

Grizzly Spreads Terror In Pittsburgh 5 Hours Before Being Shot Down

Pittsburgh, Aug. 5 (AP)

A FEROCIOUS grizzly bear that broke from a steel-barred cage in the Highland Park the adjoining residential district, Zoo and spread terror through was shot and killed near a reservoir in the park five hours after her escape today.

Arnold Schaumann, zoo superintendent, shot the bear twice as she emerged from a pedestrian tunnel in the park and charged him, snarling and pawing. The animal, struck in the shoulder, dropped eight feet from Schaumann, rolled down an embankment, reared up and attempted to run back into the tunnel.

Schaumann fired two more shots and bruin topled over. Sergeant Ralph Barton of the police homicide squad, dashed up with a sub-machine gun and fired a stream of bullets into the quivering body. Other police of a large posse came up and riddled the carcass with bullets.

Dutch Airlines Defies Ban From "War Zone" In British Airforce Test

Sending Ships Usual Route To London Through 950 Zooming Fighters Despite Request To Follow Coast

LONDON, Aug. 5 (AP).—Nine hundred and fifty planes of the rapidly expanding Royal Air Force began two days of large-scale manoeuvres today as a foreign airline declared its craft would cut directly across the "war zone" the Air Ministry has plotted over the North Sea.

An official of the Royal Dutch Airlines said seven of the company's airliners would make their usual trips between Amsterdam and Rotterdam, The Netherlands and Croydon, England, flying across the area.

The Ministry had advised Belgian, Netherlands, and German airlines operating to England to follow the continental coast down to the English Channel and cross at a point near the British south coast town of Folkestone.

"The North Sea is a neutral area," the company official declared. "Nobody can put a ban on crossing it."

The Ministry this morning professed ignorance of the situation.

Notify Ministry

The company was reported to have told the Ministry by telephone of the decision to ignore the warning and later confirmed it by letter, which was said to have gone unanswered.

The government established an emergency wireless control system to warn Royal Air Force machines of any civilian planes straying into the "war" area, which stretches from the middle part of England across the east coast to the territorial waters of Belgium, the Netherlands and France.

To give the airmen maximum training there will be no theoretical casualties and the "destroyed" planes were ordered to continue after being "hit."

The announced object of the manoeuvres is to "test the air and ground defences of Great Britain against attack in the area of the exercises, and the organization and efficiency of the various forces taking part."

Mother Is Cut Saving Baby

WINDSOR, Ont., Aug. 5 (CP)—Mrs. Cecil Sawyer, 36, Windsor, suffered severe abrasions and a badly cut right arm as she protected her 18 months old son, Davie, from serious injuries when two heavily loaded trucks collided here today at Chatham street and Glengarry avenue.

Cecil Sawyer, driver of one truck, said he was driving his two-ton loaded dump truck east when he saw another truck going north. Fearing a direct collision, Sawyer swung north on Glengarry and the two trucks collided.

Sawyer's truck, loaded with gravel, overturned. His wife a car passenger, protected her child and had her arm cut and side badly bruised as the truck skidded slightly on its side. J. Reed, of Leamington, driver of the other truck, escaped uninjured.

France To Aid Russia If Germany Attacks

PARIS, Aug. 5—(CP-Havas). — Leon Blum, former French premire, said to-day that in the event of a struggle between the Soviet Union and Japan the Third Reich might be forced to attack Russia from the west, in accordance with existing understandings between Tokyo and Berlin.

Writing in Le Populaire, organ of the Socialist party, Blum said, 'No one has the right to overlook the hypothesis by which Germany, to obey the letter and the spirit of its alliance with Japan, may be forced to give aid and consequently attack the Soviets in Europe while they will be fighting with Japan in the east."

Blum went on to say that if this should occur France would have to go to war in accordance with the Franco-Soviet mutual assistance agreement. Another possibility, he said, was that Germany, judging that Moscow is preoccupied by Far Eastern affairs, may now find its hands free for a move in Czechoslovakia.

Highways Head Loses To C.C.F. In Humboldt

HUMBOLDT, Sask., Aug. 5.—(CP).—For the first time in its history, Humboldt constituency had a Co-operative Commonwealth Federation supporter in the Provincial Legislature to-day, following victory of Joseph Burton, prominent Humboldt farmer, over Liberal Minister of Highways C. M. Dunn in yesterday's by-election.

In this fifth election attempt, Federal and Provincial, in the last four years, Burton gained a 145-vote majority over the Highways Minister in an election made necessary by the resignation of Dr. J. C. King. Dr. King resigned to open a seat for Mr. Dunn after defeating Burton by 195 votes in the June 8 general election.

It was the Highways Minister's second defeat, as he lost in Melville constituency in the general elections. In yesterday's vote he polled 3,763 ballots, as compared with 3,908 for the C.C.F. representative. The total vote 7,761, was 209 higher than at the general election.

Maxwell wrote 38 novels in his lifetime; the latest being "Jacob's Ladder," published last year.

Colored Water

NORRIS CITY, Ill., Aug. 5—(AP)—Water from the taps in Norris City homes had lots of color the other day. Ed Walsh's automobile, loaded with cases of dye samples, failed to stop at the end of a pavement and plunged into the city reservoir. The dye dissolved, causing a "rainbow".

Russia Ready For Peace If Japs Move

Japanese Report Changfukeng Again Under Fire

MOSCOW, Aug. 5. (AP).—Russia is ready to grant Japan peace on the frontier with Manchoukuo, if the Japanese discontinue attacks upon Soviet territory and withdraw their troops.

Russia then would be ready to start diplomatic discussions on the establishment of frontier posts, but only if Japan recognizes the border establishment by maps attached to the Russian treaty with China of June 26, 1886. This stand left the next move to Japan.

It was foreign minister Maxim Litvinoff's reply to Japanese proposals for mutual withdrawal of troops from the disputed area, at the juncture of Russian Siberia, Japanese Korea, and Manchoukuo, and for diplomatic negotiations to settle the boundary on the basis of documents possessed by both parties.

The critical situation grew from the Japanese allegation that Russian troops fortified Changkufeng Hill in the disputed area July 22. Japanese protested that the hill was Manchoukuo territory. The Soviet government replied brusquely that the territory was Russian, established by the 1886 treaty maps of which Japan professes ignorance.

Following upon the diplomatic exchange, sharp fighting began and since Sunday it has been almost continuous. (Tokyo dispatches said Soviet artillery was shelling Japanese positions about every half-hour today and that Japan had made a new protest to the Soviet charge d'affaires.)

New Attacks

TOKYO, Aug. 5 — (CP-Havas — Unofficial Japanese advices today said four Soviet light bombers attacked the Japanese lines in the disputed Siberian - Manchoukuo - Korean Border zone late today.

The raid was the second of the day. It followed authoritative reports that the Soviet reply to the Japanese proposal for settlement of the Manchoukuo border incidents was acceptable as a whole to Tokyo.

A 2-Hour Parley

A short time before, the vice-minister of foreign affairs, Kensuke Horinouchi, conferred for two hours with Constantin Smetanin, Soviet charge d'affaires.

Horinouchi and Smetanin met again today, during which Horinouchi was said to have protested against the continued bombardment of Japanese positions, in view of his suggestion that hostilities cease as a prelude to withdrawal of troops.

General Kazushige Ugaki, Japanese foreign minister, explained the situation at a regular cabinet meeting. Japanese reports said Soviet artillery firing on the frontier was occurring at regular half-hour intervals during the day.

Shigemitsu's official report on Litvinoff's reply—that Russia would negotiate for peaceful settlement if Japanese soldiers evacuated Soviet territory and Japan recognized Soviet borders established by the Russion-Chinese treaty of 1886 — was not yet received here and for that reason no formal comment wa sat once available.

Prisoner With Broken Back Gets Hot, Goes For Walk

TORONTO, August 5—(C.P.). — Police radio cruisers and patrolmen scoured the city last night searching for a patient from the Toronto General Hospital who went for a walk with a broken back strapped up in a cast covering his back from hips to shoulder. He returned after two hours of freedom and explained to an astonished desk clerk he had found it too hot in the building, so he had gone out to get cool.

The patient, a 21-year-old prisoner from the Guelph Reformatory, refused to say where he had gone when he left the hospital. Injured while working on the new cell block at the Reformatory, the young man was admitted to the Guelph General Hospital, but was discharged after two days. He aggravated his injury in some manner when back at the Reformatory and was brought to Toronto early in June, and admitted to the hospital here with a broken back, two fractured ankles and a cut tongue.

Last night, perhaps finding convalescence irksome, he got out of bed, and, wearing only a nightshirt and the plaster cast, walked down three flights of stairs, traversed two long corridors, passed a spot where desk clerk is normally on duty, and left the hospital.

"I'm pretty mad," said Miss Wilfred, night supervisor at the hospital, after the patient had returned. "He just walked out, and now he won't tell us where he's been." She said the patient had been able to get around for some time, and suggested last night's escapade might not have been the first.

Museum Heads Gloat As Bushmaster Lays First Egg

New York, Aug. 5 (AP)

THERE was much excitement at the American Museum of Natural History yesterday — the bushmaster laid an egg.

The bushmaster, second only to the king cobra among large poisonous snakes, lays eggs aplenty in its native habitat, but this was the first time, museum officials said, that one ever laid an egg in captivity.

Reads Of His Death, Writes Denying It

OUTLET, Ont., Aug. 5.—(CP). — Someone must have been misinformed according to a letter received here yesterday from William A. Fodey, serving with the Spanish Loyalist army. Fodey reported receiving Toronto newspaper which said he was "killed in action."

"At the time of writing I am sitting in an olive grove with the drones of airplanes nearby," the letter said. Fodey left his home here some months ago but even his friends did not know his whereabouts until yesterday.

Outlet is near Kingston.

SENNETERRE, Que., Aug. 5 (CP), —Section hand J. A. Ebacher was killed and foreman E. Bouchard was injured late yesterday when a load of railway ties hauled on a push-car behind a speeder tumbled over four men manning the speeder.

The accident occurred on the Canadian National Railways northern transcontinental line a short way from here. The two other sectionmen riding the speeder escaped injury as they sat at the front of the conveyance, Ebacher and Bouchard rode in the rear.

Ottawa Sets Wheat Price At 80-cent Minimum And Bans All Hoarding

New Board Policy Will Be To Purchase All Wheat Offered Regardless Of What Market Does

OTTAWA, Aug. 5 (CP).—Western Canada farmers today were assured of at least 80 cents a bushel for this year's crop of No. 1 Northern wheat, delivered at Fort William, and world wheat markets had the Canadian government's word there would be no hoarding by it to boost prices or create monopoly.

Waited expectantly by the world grain trade, Prime Minister Mackenzie King's announcement came last night at Ottawa shortly after Cabinet Council had fixed the base price of 80 cents for top grade wheat.

The price is 7½ cents below the minimum fixed last year but an important reservation attached in previous years has been withdrawn. The Canadian Wheat Board will buy all the wheat offered regardless of what the market does. In the two previous crop years the Wheat Board was not permitted to buy wheat at 87½ cents unless the market dropped below 90 cents and it never did.

Today speculation in the capital turned largely on what might be the financial results for the government of the new Wheat Board policy of buying all wheat offered it.

A Loss For The Board?

October futures closed yesterday on the Winnipeg exchange at 76⅞ cents—this being the market's estimate of what the predicted 300,000,000 bushel crop of western Canada will sell at when it reaches the market. If the market is guessing right then the wheat board stands to lose substantially and the government will have to make good.

Mr. King said all circumstances had been taken into account. He first read a brief statement prepared by Trade Minister Euler. It said:

"The milling and grain trades of the world are advised that notwithstanding the internal initial price of 80 cents a bushel the Canadian wheat board will continue its work of encouraging the use of Canadian wheat which will at times be competive on the world's markets."

This statement was taken as assurance there would be no withholding of Canadian wheat from the market to bolster prices.

"All circumstances were taken into account," Mr. King said in amplifying Mr. Euler's satement. "The position of Western Canada in recent years, the world situation today. There was a careful weighing of the position of western Canada in relation to the east."

Take All Offered.

The act under which the Wheat Board operates provides it must accept all wheat offered and pay the fixed minimum prices. Prices for other grades than No. 1 Northern will be announced.

If the market rises above 80 cents then the Board is likely to handle less of the crop. Much would then be sold through private channels. But undoubtedly with the 80-cent minimum guaranteed many farmers would prefer to deal with the Board in the hope of sharing in any profits in the ordinary sense of the term. If it sells wheat at a higher price than 80 cents, farmers will receive extra payments per bushel. If the Board sells the wheat for less than 80 cents, the Dominion treasury will take the loss.

250,000 Arms Makers Go On Holidays

PARIS, Aug. 5 (AP).—Some 250,000 Paris workers and their families began a mass exodus from this already deserted capital today for their annual two-week vacation with pay.

Instead of staggering the vacations, as is the custom in most countries, the great automobile, airplane and metal factories that rim Paris suburbs were closed completely for the two weeks. More than 60,000 workers were given leave by the Citroen and Renault plants alone.

Most of the workers arranged trips to the country, the seashore or the mountains.

Even masses of tourists were unable to keep Paris from taking on the look of a deserted city. With departures this weekend, the normal 5,000,000 population of greater Paris was reduced probably by one-third.

Britain's '38 R.A.F.

will rival any aggressor force likely to attack this country. It is part of a huge program embracing the army, navy and air force, entailing hundreds of millions of pounds and designed to make this country inviolable to attack by any of the European nations which, for the past seven or eight years, have been arming to the teeth.

At the close of the Great War, Britain had 3,300 first-iline aircraft. Almost as many planes were in training schools as reserve equipment. The whole force was disbanded in 1919 with the exception of 30 squadrons, representing 350 planes, and a small number retained for training purposes. Of the 30 squadrons, two-thirds were overseas and most of the others were with the navy. Not one squadron was retained for home defence.

The disarmament move was the spirit of the times. A war had been fought to end wars and everyone agreed that nations should enter the spirit of collective security and lay down their arms. Attempting to set an example for other nations, Britain reduced its air force to an even greater extent than its army or navy, in fact it almost wiped it out.

Builds 30 Home Squadrons.

This continued for several years until about the time the Locarno agreements were signed in 1925. Britain began to make small increases in the air force. The home defence unit was built up to 30 squadrons but it still remained a much neglected arm of the service.

Events in Europe moved quickly—the disarmament conference failed, Hitler came into power in Germany, nations began to arm and they concentrated, Germany particularly, on Britain's weakest force, the air.

Early in 1935, the British government abandoned disarmament as a national policy and bega nto pour millions of pounds into the army, navy and air force. If the rest of Europe was determined to arm, so was Britain and to an extent that would overshadow any power.

In May, 1935, Britain had 77 air squadrons and 844 first-line planes. Russia, France, United States, Italy and Japan all had bigger fleets. The 1935 program called for 154 squadrons and a fleet of 1,800 planes within two years. The program was enlarged in 1936, with the objective of 2,200 planes by 1939.

Again this year the program was expanded until the objective now is 2,850 planes by 1940, 2,370 at home and 480 overseas. These figures, which reveal nothing of the reserve strength of the air force, indicate that Britain is far more formidable than three years ago. And they do not reveal the actual increase in striking power. The first-line quadrons are being supplied with machines which are faster, carry heavier loads, fly farther and in every way are more efficient military weapons than the aircraft of five years ago.

96,000 In Force By 1940

But that's only half the story. On March 31, 1936, the strength of the air force was 32,034 officers and men. Today is is 72,000 and by the end of 1940 it will be 96,000, three men for every one under colors in 1935. Elementary training schools were increased from four to 13 and are expected to go to 20. Service flying schools jumped from five to 11 and four more will be added. Airdromes totalled 52 in 1935 and the 1940 program calls for 140.

On top of all this is a reserve force of men and planes about which Britain isn't talking very much—an accumulation of bombers. Fighters and reconnaissance craft which do not figure in the public records. It has been built up secretly to make sure the period between the outbreak of war and the time Britain's aicraft industry could be operating in high gear would not witness the decimation of the first-line quadrons for want of replacements to meet the day-to-day wastage of men and machines. The air ministry has never made public the size of this fleet but it is supposed to be formidable. It is Britain's ace-in-the-hole in this rearmament race.

Almost War-Time Basis

A program of such proportions practically amounted to the aircraft industry of Great Britain going on a war-time basis. When expansion period started in 1935, number of service planes being delivered to the air ministry was 700 a year, representing almost the capacity of existing factories. This production figure had to be increased enormously. Today it is several times 700 and must be increased three or four times more. Plans for 1938 call for an increase of 50 per cent. in the production capacity of this year alone.

This enormous acceleration within the aircraft industry has been accomplished in two ways. Arrangements were made with plane manufacturers and engine factories to increase their production. But that wasn't enough. Shadow factories were built—the government paying for construction and equipment but leaving control in private hands, the management working on salary plus a production fee. Already there are two shadow factories turning out planes, five making engine parts, two are assembly plants and thre others are making carburetors, propellers and magnesium. That makes 12 with several others being built or under design.

Production Still Lags

The present situation may be summed up in this way: Production is increasing rapidly but it is still behind other countries who started air rearmament before Britain, Germany particularly. Recruiting is satisfactory and has never been behind the program.

Canada enters the air program in three ways. Twenty cadets are receiving preliminary training there, preparatory to finishing their four years' pilots' course in England. Secondly, it is expected 100 Canadians will be selected this year with the assistance of the Department of National Defence to enter the Royal Air Force direct and train in England.

Thirdly, negotiations are proceeding for the air ministry to place orders direct with Canadian aircraft manufacturers. Some of the orders will be for big bombers which may be flown across the Atlantic. This may entail subsidies and financial assistance from the British Government to permit construction and enlargement of factories, details of which will be worked out by a mission from the air ministry which has been investigating conditions in Canada.

King and President

Huge Hawaii Clipper Given Up As Lost

MANILA, Aug. 5 (AP).—The giant Hawaii Clipper and her 15 occupants were logged today as victims of a mystery air disaster by the United States navy which ordered searching vessels home from a fruitless hunt across 100,000 square miles of ocean and shoreline.

For neary six days, warships and fighting planes combed the Pacific stretches in all directions from a point more than 500 miles east of here where the flying boat radioed her last position a week ago today.

Army and navy authorities said they stood ready to answer any call if a clue to the plane's whereabouts was found, but naval officials said they had abandoned the search because every probability and possibility of finding the Clipper was exhausted.

Silk Is Made

breakable glass that still is not glass. "Doesn't it seem possible that this material is the salvation of the lumbering industry of the future?" he asked. Already 150 plants are producing the material, some from wood, some from cotton for various uses. He showed one of the first pairs of eye-glasses, made from a physician's prescription and fashioned from the same material. Their chief advantage is that they are unbreakable.

Develop New Ideas.

The glass industry has already solved the problem of possible loss of busines through the new product, by developing new ideas of its own, he said. He passed about the room samples of a material that looked as though they were made of the finest silk but which were actually made of glass. They seemed in every particular to be serviceable and beautiful. Not only that, the glass industry has produced glass-cloth tape, use of which in industry will enable production of motors half the size of those now in use, yet carrying all their efficiency.

"Polaroid" glasses enable a man to look into water and see what is going on beneath the surface. "And what a fine thing that's going to be for fishermen." He demonstrated a machine by which could be determined visually the exact strain placed on any object, polaroid being the medium. This material may solve the problem of headlight glare in night driving, he said.

"When we see the things that are yet to come, we have great faith in the destiny of the human race," said Rev. Canon J. D. Paterson, moving a vote of thanks on behalf of the club. Introduced at the meeting were Mr Kirby, public relations officer of General Motors, sponsors of the show, H. L. Garner, managing director of the Peterborough xaminer who, said Chairman L. J. Pettit, "had the insight to see what this show would mean to Peterborough." He also introduced Andy Rutter of the Examiner staff, and paid tribute to his work of organization.

The club gave thanks for donations to the Kiwanis camp for underprivileged children by A. Wander Lt.; the Quaker Oats Company, Fred Ford of the Purity Bread Company; McLarin's Ltd.; Bill Ovens of Campbell's Dairy; the St Lawrence Starch Company; J. I. Allen, Mrs. Mathers, Mr. Collins of Neill's Shoe Stotre, Mr. Fitzgerald of Zeller's. The club provided more than 5,000 meals to children during July, said Secretary J. A. McKone.

Representatives of the other service clubs were guests at the luncheon.

Famed Sam McGee Writes To Friends

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LINDSAY, Aug. 5—Three inquests are scheduled for Lindsay during the next few days. Coroner Dr. Collison has announced that he intends to proceed with the inquest into the death of Mrs. Brown, of Toronto, who died here recently as the result of what is believed to be an illegal operation. An inquest will also be held in connection with the death of Mrs. Frank Sholer, of Toronto, who suffered fatal injuries in a motor accident near Rosedale on Sunday morning. An inquest into the death of Clifford Mark, of Lindsay, who was electrocuted at Long Point, Sturgeon Lake, Wednesday morning will be held on August 15.

Constable Dixon, of Victoria Road, came across a man named Tripp, a resident of Toronto, dozing in a car at the side of the road near that village Thursday morning. A quantity of liquor was found in the car. He will face a court charge in Lindsay in a few days.

Friends of Sam McGee, a former resident of Cameron, Victoria county, who was immortalized by Robert W. Service in his poem, "The Cremation of Sam McGee," have received word from the old miner. He arrived recently at Prince Rupert enroute to prospect for placer gold at Whitehorse, Yukon Territory.

A transient named John McGrath has been arrested by the police at Cannington in connection with the robbery at the Brock Creamery and Charles Whiting's garage. McGrath could give no satisfactory account of his movements.

Relief in Lindsay is still a major problem with which the council has to deal, and a special meeting will be called to discuss the situation. During June there were 55 heads of families on relief.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, August 5 — (CP). — Winnipeg wheat futures dipped sharply to-day after a firm opening when brokers interpreted the Canadian Wheat Board's 80-cent-a-bushel price as bearish. Final quotations were 3 to 2⅜ cents lower, October 73¾c, November 74c. December, 72⅞ to 73c, and May 75½c.

Despite a good export business, estimated up to 350,000 bushels, nervous speculative selling by discouraged longs drove prices down after they had climbed a cent at the start.

Brokers, it was said, looked upon the Dominion Government announcement last night as indicating stiff competitive export business in the next few months. As Canada's export business would remain on a competitive basis, Chicago wheat futures also dipped a cent or more.

Some Sandwiches

DETROIT, Aug. 5—(CP)— Efram Poltorak doesn't believe in half-way measures in being a good guy. Released from jail here, he was back shortly with two loaves of bread, a half-peck of apples, four pounds of onions and two pounds of Bologna. He was permitted to make the food into sandwiches when he explained his ex-cell mate had complained he was hungry and had asked for something to eat.

Two Killed

Two U.S. navy fliers were killed and a third escaped unhurt, when their torpedo airplane crashed into San Diego bay. Pilot J. A. Porter escaped injury by making a parachute jump of a few hundred yards. Navy men are pictured here salvaging the wreckage of the airplane.

4 Men, Woman Arrested In Truck Raids

TORONTO, Aug. 5.—Four men—one of them a storekeeper—and a young woman, were arrested last night on charges of stealing and receiving goods from trucks in downtown Toronto. These thefts have reached alarming proportions during the past three weeks, police reported.

The storekeeper, Max Zakon, 31, at present out on bail of $2,000 on a charge of bribery, is alleged by police to have bought the toilet articles, foodstuff and smallware from the ring of thieves and sold them in his store.

The other suspects are: Thomas McIntosh, 25, of Carlton Street; Hugh Holland, 23, no address; William Cole, 36, of Jarvis street, and Gladys Nicholl, 27, same address. McIntosh and Holland are charged jointly with four counts of theft and one of receiving, the latter two with one charge of receiving.

Serious Problem.

The problem of the petty thieving had become so serious that at least one of the larger trucking concerns had placed a second man on each of their pick-up trucks to frustrate the ingenious tactics of the robbers.

The two men charged with theft were riding bicycles which had been reported stolen, when Plainclothesmen William Crichton and Fred Paveling trapped them. The wheels, stolen from delivery boys, were equipped with large carriers in front. Police allege the thieves trailed the trucks on their machines, and when drivers were forced to stop for traffic lights or were otherwise delayed, lifted packages off the back.

Loot In Carriers.

The carriers were used to transport the stolen goods to a hideout on Jarvis street, and also succeeded temporarily in deceiving the police, whose suspicions were not aroused by the sight of what appeared to be messenger boys delivering parcels.

The plaincolthesmen have been watching the house on Jarvis street constantly for the past few days. The men were caught as they entered. Packages of soap, cigars and toilet articles were found in the carriers of their bicycles. Two other stolen bicycles were also recovered.

Inside the house, the officers allegedly uncovered stolen property valued at $450, and the two suspects are being held on receiving charges. The storekeeper operates his shop a block away.

Quaker Oats Cops 26-13 League Tilt

Quaker Oats took a 26-13 win over Little Harlem last night in a Southend Softball League tilt at the Brinton Field. In a loose game, the Quakers assured themselves of a playoff spot. Hits and walks were frequent and some errors. An early lead made it a cinch for the Porridge Punchers, as they added to it from time to time. Stanley walked eight and gave 15 hits on the Quaker mound but good support in the pinches helped him. Craig and Dennie hurled for the losers, neither being very effective. Stanley and Caccavella had homers while Tompkins hit safely four times in five, while Craig and Dizon were best afield. The teams:

Quaker Oats: Cournyea, 3b; Starr, 3b; Coughlin, rf; Delpellaro, c; Dixon, cf; Caccavella, ss; McCullough, 1b; Shine, 2b; Clark, lf; Webb, lf; Stanley, p.

Swat Right Back Says Judge If Wives Get Pugilistic

HACKENSACK, N.J., Aug. 5 (AP)—Men who have pugilistically inclined wives, says a representative of New Jersey's Chancery Court, should follow instincts of self preservation rather than the ages-old unwritten rule that says gentlemen should not strike the so-called weaker sex.

In other words, advises Advisory Master N. Demarest Campbell, when the missus starts smacking hubby with rights or lefts, mister should reply in kind.

Campbell gave his advice to husbands-at-large yesterday when a West Norwood man asked for a divorce on grounds of cruelty. He left his wife, he said, because she beat him and he was tired of "taking it."

"Don't you know that self preservation is the first law of nature?" the Advisory Master asked the petitioner. "When wives attack their husbands the husbands don't need this court, and they don't need lawyers. What these wives need is a good healthy swat you know where."

"You had your remedy and didn't use it," he added.

"I believe if you had, it would have done some good. Petition denied."

Kawartha Tennis

Kawartha Crees gained undisputed leadership of the North Group on Wednesday night as they downed Peterborough B in matches postponed from last week. The Indians captured all events save one, the ladies' singles, to ring up a 5-1 victory over their intra-city rivals.

Miss Vi Davidson started the Swartz crew off on the right foot, overwhelming Miss Margaret Jackson 6-1, 6-1. Miss Davidson's confidence and calmness proved altogether to much for her younger opponent. Crees evened the count by winning the mixed doubles when Miss Anna McKenzie and Orm Benson rallied from a set point against them in the second canto to take the set and the match 6-3, 7-5 from Miss Mabel Nixon and George Scott. Hubert Sills and Art King had very little difficulty against their young and inexperienced opponents, Doug Long and Allan Thompson. They won by scores of 6-1, 6-1. Second men's doubles also went to Kawartha and Bill Brown and Al Drynan administered a 6-3, 6-3 pasting to Horace Steer and Don McPherson.

It was a tidy battle in which Misses Anne Davis and Nan Boorman edged out Misses Betty Middleton and Linden Reed. All four girls played good, steady tennis. But the Drynanites had just a little more finish and won out 7-5, 6-4.

Men's singles was a bitterly fought battle indeed. Rolly Hull of Kawartha won the first set fairly easily 6-3. But the persistent Benny Swartz, fighting to keep his team in the running came back to grab the second set seven games to five.

By this time both players were pretty well tuckered out, but Rolly Hull seemed to have just enough left to take the final set. Once he got started, he proceeded to run it out 6-2. Complete score was 6-3, 5-7, 6-2.

Tomorrow (Saturday) Peterborough "A" are scheduled to play at Port Hope and Kawartha Hurons are at Quaker in the South Group. In the North Group, Kawartha Iroquois travel to Lakefield as Kawartha Crees go to Lindsay to do battle there. Peterborough "B" have a bye tomorrow.

Passenger Injured

GALT, Ont., Aug. 4—(CP)—Miss Babe Lambert, Kitchener, was taken to local hospital early to-day in a serious condition after an automobile accident. She was a passenger in a car driven by F. A. Rugle, 148 Earl street, Kitchener, which failed to make a curve on the Galt-Hamilton highway three miles below Shatfield and piled in the ditch.

LAKEFIELD

Mr. and Mrs. Lloyd Crapp (nee Miss Viola Murphy) were guests of honor at a shower held at the home of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Murphy, Lakefield, when about fifty neighbors, friends, and relatives of the bride and groom gathered to shower the recently married couple with miscellaneous gifts.

The crowd gathered at Mr. T. Braden's corner and arrived at Mr. Murphy's home in a body.

After the gifts were laid upon the table, Mrs. Alfred Higgins made a short address, asking Mr. and Mrs. Crapp to accept the gifts on behalf of those present and expressing best wishes for long years of happiness together.

Three small girls, Miss Shirley McKee of Smith and Mary Alice Renwick and Winifred Murphy of Lakefield assisted the bride and groom in unwrapping their gifts.

Then Mrs. Crapp expressed warm appreciation of the kindness and generosity of those present and invited her friends to visit her at her new home. Mr. Crapp added a few words, heartily endorsing the sentiments expressed by his wife.

The remainder of the evening was spent in an enjoyable social time, candy being passed during the evening.

Loyalists Advance To Albarracin

HENDAYE, France, Aug. 5.—(AP.)—Spanish government dispatches reported to-day that General Jose Miaja's militiamen were within rifle range of insurgent headquarters in the city of Albarracin, north-west of Teruel.

Such an advance would place the Spanish government troops in the heart of mountains which control the western flank of General Franco's eastern front.

Insurgent communiques insisted only small units of government troops were operating in the Albarracin sector and that they had been "pursued with success."

Government reports not only said their troops were on the outskirts of Albarracin but claimed the advance was extended north to include the Valley of the Tagus and the Gaudalaviar rivers.

Dispatches reported capture of the village, Puerto Macharro, and heights dominating the Valley of the Tagus, which rises along the border of Teruel and Guadalajara provinces.

On the curving Ebro river front, the two armies still were locked in front of Gandesa, the insurgents' eastern flank headquarters until the start of the present government offensive.

Give Lots Of Water and Sponge Often Dr. Dafoe Advises For Panting Kiddies

Callander, Ont., Aug. 5 (CP) DR. Allan Roy Dafoe, physician and guardian of the Dionne quintuplets, voiced advice today on the care of children during hot spells.

"Give them plenty of water," he said. "Keep their bodies sponged off. Don't expose them to the direct rays of the sun. Keep as few clothes as possible on them."

The humidity here was 90 per cent of saturation and the temperature was 87 yesterday, but the Dionne quintuplets didn't mind the weather at all, Dr. Dafoe said.

There is no hokus-pokus used to keep the quintuplets cool. "They're just healthy kids and they enjoy the heat," Dr. Dafoe said. "They run around and enjoy life. We've been getting a nice breeze off Lake Nipissing and the babies are doing very nicely."

This Changing World

The other night hundreds of Peterborough citizens sat in the stands at Riverside Park until midnight and watched two teams play baseball under electric lights which, if they did not light up the park like the noonday sun, at least supplies sufficient illumination to allow a game to be played.

There was a car in front of The Examiner a day or two ago bearing a California license marker and pulling a modern trailer, divided into three compartments and a veritable home on the road. A sign on the car conveyed the information that the Californians had recently been the guest of the Maritimes and here they were in Canada's banner province, thousands of miles from home and yet living in comfort in an outfit that enabled them to travel from one end to the other of the continent as if on a magic carpet.

The next day we noticed two cars from West Virginia and they had a banner to the effect that they visited the Dionnes at Callander, so they too had travelled a long way and yet the journey they had taken was a nothing compared to the few miles their ancestors used to travel on foot to get their grain ground.

From the top of Memorial Park Hill, overlooking the many lights of the city, two men seeking a moment of coolness away from the stifling heat that lay close to the city streets and had turned houses into ovens, sat in a car a night or so ago and from the radio attached to the dash of the automobile listened at midnight to Kentucky's colorful Governor Chandler make a whimsical appeal to the electors of Louisville to choose him as their candidate for State Senator.

These are just a few of the signs that show how rapidly our world is changing. We take them for granted nowadays and the only way we can begin to grasp how wonderful are some of these things that we now accept as a matter of course is to try to imagine how impossible they would have seemed only yesterday.

More Traffic Officers

The Ontario Safety League is advocating the appointment of a large number of additional traffic officers on Ontario highways, a suggestion that is more likely to impress the government with the expense that would be involved in augmenting the traffic squad, rather than with the benefit from a safety viewpoint that might be expected to follow the appointment of more motorcycle men.

There is no disputing the fact that the sight of a traffic officer in the neighborhood has a very marked effect for the better on driving technique. The most reckless driver steadies down, the speeder brings his car within the limit, the roadhog keeps to his own side and the blithe spirit who things it fun to weave in and out of traffic gets into line and stays there.

Unfortunately, however, motor cycle officers cannot be everywhere at once and their present routes are decidedly long. The result is they are able to deal only with a fraction of the driving irregularities that are committed on the highways and there are not enough of them to make drivers realize that their movements are more or less continuously under observation and that it would be good business to obey the traffic code. The Safety League has something there when it suggests that conditions on the highway cannot be expected to improve materially until the roads are more closely patrolled. That of course can only be done by the appointing of more officers. The present officers are doing all that could be expected of them. Their beats are extensive and there is no limit to the hours they work, both night and day.

Twice as many of them would do twice as much work and it is reasonable to say would cause drivers to be twice as careful.

He's Needed

The effort that is being made to have an inspector of beverage rooms appointed to control the operation of such places in this city and county is a move that beverage room proprietors in their own interest should support.

In certain cases abuses have been allowed to develop and conditions have been created that are crystallizing public opinion against the sale of beer by the glass, and that if allowed to get worse may eventually drive the beverage room business out of existence.

There is too much drunkenness permitted around some of the licensed premises, there has been fighting and disorderly conduct in a number of cases and it is obviously much too easy a matter for a minor to obtain beer in some of the beverage rooms whose motto seems to be all the traffic will bear and no questions asked.

To The Examiner it has been no surprise that while some proprietors with good sense have conducted their establishments on a thoroughly satisfactory manner, others have been short-sighted enough to take advantage of the fact that the Government has seen fit to leave the beverage rooms virtually uncontrolled. When it was announced that there was to be only one inspector for six or seven counties, this paper pointed out that under such a system abuses were bound to creep in because it was pain that one official could not hope to cover such a large area and accomplish anything worthwhile in the way of effective inspection.

There has been no reason to change that opinion in the light of what has happened since because it is not an injustice to say that there has been no inspection worthy of the name and that the beverage rooms have been allowed to go their own gait, the only check being the judgment of the proprietors themselves and unfortunately some have shown little or no judgment.

In the old license days there were two inspectors for the county and while they did not succeed in eliminating all the evils of the trade, the fact that they were on the job here all the time served to keep conditions under control and enabled proprietors of the wrong type to be eliminated. There is no such safeguard under the present system.

The government is making millions of dollars a year out of liquor profits. As a partner in the business it should be seriously concerned about the manner in which the trade is conducted and prepared to sacrifice a small portion of its liquor revenue to setting up a proper system of beverage room inspection. An inspector is needed for this immediate district and should be appointed before a few short-sighted proprietors succeed in having the whole business condemned at the bar of public opinion.

It Cannot Go On

That story from Hamilton of a truck driver being threatened with lynching by an infuriated crowd, after his machine had swerved over the curb and killed a child, is highly significant.

It offers clear proof that public feeling is being aroused by the slaughter on highways and city streets and that if drunken driving and hit-and-run cases are not soon eliminated the time may not be long in coming when the public will cease to sit passively by and watch the death roll mount but will insist on doing something about it.

Public opinion, once aroused, is a powerful force and there are indications, as seen in this Hamilton incident, that automobile fatalities, especially when they occur under circumstance that show recklessness or carelessness on the part of the driver will not be accepted much longer as a matter of course.

Motorists who insist upon filling themselves with liquor and then take their automobiles out on the highway and by their incapacity to handle them efficiently and their befuddled condition kill a pedestrian, a cyclist or some one in another car may find themselves confronted with an ugly situation in which the public will refuse to wait for the machinery of justice to handle the case but will take the law in their own hands. It nearly happened in Hamilton; the next time the crowd may go through with it.

Too long have highway killings been regarded as mere accidents and there are very definite signs that a change has come over the attitude of the public on this question. Now the feeling is that while some deaths are the result of an unlucky combination of circumstances, there are far too many that can only be explained by crash recklessness and when that recklessness is the result of drink, the driver concerned comes close to being guilty of murder.

If drastic penalties do not clear up the situation—and so far they have failed to do so—then it may develop that mob rule will step in and that is something that no good citizen cares to contemplate.

A Policy Needed

The full text of the brief submitted to the Rowell Commission by the Federation of Ontario Naturalists in contending that forest and wild life resources should be administered by the Federal government instead of being left to the tender mercies of the provincial governments is at hand and makes very interesting reading.

Moreover it contains many facts in support of its proposal and some arguments that would be difficult to refute.

"In the past and still today in at least four provinces," points out the brief, "revenues from the forest, wild life and game fish have been used to contribute to the upkeep of Government services and it is generally true that apart from fire protection, restrictive legislation regarding hunting and fishing and some development of game fish hatcheries, which, judging by results, have not achieved outstanding successes, very little has been done toward the management of these resources in such a way as to perpetuate or improve them."

Is there anybody in Ontario, beyond the politicians who are in duty bound to defend the policies of their own government who will rise up and say that this indictment is unfair or untrue?

We boast about the amount of revenue we take out of the administration of our fish and game resources when we would be in a much more sensible position if we were able to boast about how much we put into them. Our tourist business depends to a large degree upon our fish and game and yet we are satisfied to drift along in the administration of these resources, following a haphazard system in which there is little sign of a constructive program designed to perpetuate what is left of our reserves.

Ontario's naturalists claim that under Federal administration there would be an improvement all around and certainly there is room for such an improvement. It may not come, however, until some government with vision enough to realize what Ontario's wild life means and with courage enough to take the steps necessary to give it a chance to survive, happens to be elected to office.

Officially Recognized

The fact that the Peterborough branch of the Children's Aid Society has been given higher government rating is gratifying news.

In the first place the changed status of the organization means an increase of $500 a year in the grant paid it by the government and that in itself is an important development.

More significant, however, is the evidence afforded by the new rating that the Children's Aid Society is now proceeding on sound lines and that its ability to do useful service in the field to which it is devoted, that of caring for neglected and dependent children, is considered by the government to have been materially increased in recent months.

The rating is at once a tribute to the work that has been accomplished by the new superintendent, Miss Rachel Young, and to the judgment of the executive of the Society in having selected her as a proper person to be entrusted with the responsible duties of the situation.

The Children's Aid Society is a very important factor in social service work and its duty of reclaiming neglected children and giving them a fresh start in life is major responsibility so that it is satisfactory indeed to have official recognition given to the recent increase in the efficiency of the organization. The Examiner hopes that it will not be long before we will be able to record that the Peterborough branch has again had its rating increased, as a token of still greater improvement.

NOTE AND COMMENT

The worst feature about a heat wave is that folk persist in talking about how hot it is.

Nearly 50,000 people have visited Casa Loma this year. The Pellatt castle threatens to turn into a gold mine.

Russia and Japan have not declared war but the people who are being killed are just as dead as if they had.

A Toronto authority says jay-walking is not a crime. Still there is no room on a tombstone to chronicle that fact.

Brampton lacrosse player has been hurt in a traffic crash. He must have been bumped around a lot or he would never have noticed it.

Western banks are increasing their staffs and that is clear proof that conditions on the prairies have taken a distinct turn for the better.

A film dance director says there are no beautiful co-eds. If that is true hundreds of college songs and scores of college movies will have to be debunked.

Winnipeg police were called in to shoot a porcupine. That was a case with many points but apparently no point of law was involved.

A story from Pennsylvania tells of a three-year-old girl falling from a bridge into a creek and swimming ashore. At eighteen she will probably be doing the crawl stroke across the English Channel.

It has been found that many Montreal school children are deaf. That may be from the noise of too many Western films, or the weird sounds of modern swing bands.

Nine baby emus are to be featured at the Canadian National Exhibition. In case you do not know an emu is something used to fill a three-letter space in a crossword puzzle.

It has been officially ruled in a New Jersey Court that when a wife beats her husband, he is entitled to use force in self-defence. This item is published in the hope that it may prove useful to some one.

TWILIGHT

Twilight has a secret door;
We have found the way;
Mocking shadows stretch before,
Serpentining more and more,
Like the echoes on a shore,
Locked in play.

And the shadows, silver-tongued,
Leading far away
Where the piping trees are thronged,
Seem to mock the many-songed
Hills and hollows, each prolonged
In its lay.

Twilight tells his mystery
To us on the way;
Opens wide for us to see—
Sombre though their music be—
Shadows move in harmony
On toward day.

Here's the Art Of Keeping Cool

(From the Winnipeg Free Press)

PERSONS going round disturbing the calm of life by saying, "Warm, isn't it?" are holes in the icebox. They let in the heat. Their mention of the unmentionable flusters the gasping.

They day may be warm, but what about it? When it could be taken coolly there was no sense in getting hot about it. You could be hotter, so were cooler than you thought. Instead of tactless friends telling you how hot they are, some frigidity in their poise would be preferable. They allow themselves to get excited about something so invisible as is heat, and become choleric, just as when dinner is late. They lack polite indifference to the thermal wave, which reveals them as weaklings, without the nerve to keep cool while the temp sizzles, or the embarrassment felt when it is your turn to pay for the iced drinks.

Irritating citizens who talk of the heat to persons asking a policeman to direct them to an iceberg, should be liquidated faster than their dripping countenances promise to erase them.

These overstuffed human furnaces seem unable to condition themselves against summer's wafts. The air gets into their hair without helping the scalp. Yet nature provides them with insulation. At 90 even, a wind blew at 11 miles an hour. It was a refreshing northwest wind, probably come to town from the Bad Lands. It was there to stay the trembling of the person fearing hives from the heat. But did folk feeling the heat seek out that wind? No. They sought the refrig, and because they grew drippier, and drippier, complained of the heat more and more.

Tut, tut! In heat, keep cool. Many books written round that stimulating thought have sold like hot-dogs at a croquet tournament. Be calm, and you may be cool, no matter who calls at the door. Be ruffled, and wipe and re-wipe the glistening brow and the moist jowls, and hoarsely you will be unable to resist exclaiming "Warm, isn't it?" What nonsense. Pull up your socks, if you wear any, and be yourself. Pause to reflect and regain your icy composure.

Ignore the dripping undergarment. Be not discomfited by the shining nose. Forget the trickle down the spine. Be not shamed by the clammy paw. Rise, superbly, above the thermometer. Think. The temperature may be at 95, but the wind blows. The northwest wind is blowing at 11 miles, at six miles, perhaps at two miles an hour. To sit in it makes you afraid you will catch a cold. You are not warm. You are cold, and if not careful may freeze a cheek. How nonsensical, how disgusting, then, to go around accosting perspiring acquaintances with the repulsive refrain, "Warm, isn't it?" Only the electric fan has the right to think so.

COOLING THOUGHTS.

(Guelph Mercury)

WITHIN a few months we will be getting back under the blankets, as the evenings become cool. Then, after a short while, the annual exchange of shovelling the snow will again be indulged in with a greater zest than could be imagined before had it not been for the experiences of the hot days and nights, when we lie awake and think of conditions that are more congenial than the blistering, perspiring befuddling things that bother our rest at the present moment.

Then, if the thought of the snow is not sufficient to induce sleep or comfort, think for a moment on the coal that will have to be shovelled during the long winter which, like it as we might, just now, will probably be altogether too long before it is ended. Think with what glee you can heave the black diamonds into the roaring furnaces, with the thermometer daily sinking below the zero mark.

When you do this, think for a moment of the early part of July and be consoled, that is if you have a coal supply on hand. If you haven't, then it's a different question.

Already, some of the ladies are studying the catalogues showing beautiful fur coats. This is always a fascinating study, and, though sweltering in bathing suit costumes or the thinniest of georgettes, the imaginary smoothing down of a beautiful fur garment makes a glorious shiver of delight creep over you.

There may be other ways of indulging the cool thought, but for one hot day these few suggestions ought to be enough.

ADVERTISING.

(St. Thomas Times-Journal)

ADVERTISING is a mighty force to which we become exposed the moment our father puts our birth notice in the newspapers, Harold M. Gulley, vice-president, Silverwood's Toronto Dairy Ltd., Toronto, told members of the Rotary Club at a recent noon-hour meeting. The average accountant may say it is a questionable expense since you cannot always trace results, and the experienced manager may say it is an absolute necessity, added Mr. Gulley, "but call it what you will, advertising keeps your stock-in-trade from having holidays; it brushes away cobwebs and dust, smartens shop windows, quickens the knowableness of salespeople and lets in the sunlight."

ALGOMA INCENSE.

(Sault Ste. Marie Star)

ONE SAULT MAN, for instance, tells of a car ride he took the other evening after dark. The first realization he had of his quickened senses came when almost a block away he whiffed the mingled perfumes from George Farwell's rock garden. Then, as he proceeded to drive through the Township of Tarentorus, he got a keener appreciation of the scent of the new mown hay, of the clover, of a clump of pines here or of cedar there.

Perhaps the dew helped to release the perfumes. But of greater importance was the absence of the distractions of the day.

YES—USE YOUR HANDS

• Women Bandits In Ontario

(From the Sarnia Observer)

SEVERAL FARMERS in various parts of Western Ontario have recently been the victims of a unique racket. The loot obtained has amounted to more than a thousand dollars and so far there has been no arrest of the culprits, due principally to the fact that the robberies are committed at farms that are isolated or have no telephonic communication. The robbers are believed to be two gipsy women or they may be men masquerading as women. They are physically powerful and so far have been able to overpower their victims, who have been mostly aged men, without much trouble.

These bandits have been touring the province in an automobile. First they were heard from east of Toronto. Recently they were in the Goderich district, where they robbed John Baker, aged 75, of $300. Another robbery was committed near Orangeville.

The plan is to drive along sideroads until a farmer is seen working in the fields. He is approached and engaged in conversation. If he is crippled in any visible degree he is told that they can cure him. In other cases the conversation has been along the lines of negotiating the purchase of farm produce. In the Goderich case the aged farmer, who lived alone, was lured to his own house on the pretext that the visitors wanted salt to cook the vegetables they had bought. In the house the man was grabbed by the women, who threw him down and took his wallet, containing three hundred dollars.

There have been eight such robberies reported within a few weeks. Some of the victims thought the gipsies were men disguised as women, they seemed so powerful. In any event, they are proficient in violence and are gathering up a considerable amount of money. The unfortunate circumstance, so far as apprehending these bandits is concerned, is that the victims have been unable to give good descriptions of the malefactors. They have been so astounded at the sinister outcome of the meeting with the strangers that the robbery was accomplished before they had time to collect themselves sufficiently to realize what it was all about. However, the warning is now widely circulated and it is possible that new victims will be more difficult to locate. In the meantime, farmers who are accosted in the fields by individuals who have the appearance of gipsy women, have reason to be on their guard.

• Rural Home A Beauty Spot

(From the Farmer's Advocate)

FARMING is a way of living. Without the home, the farm—as we think of the farm—would not exist.

The farm is not a place where sufficient money can be made to enable the owner later on to travel or live in idleness. But the farm is a place where a comfortable home can be provided for a family, where children can be raised and educated, and it is a business that permits the parents to give the young folk a start in life.

The farm has done this from the start of agriculture in Canada, and no doubt will continue to do so.

Naturally the productiveness of the land and the management determine to some extent the standard of living that may be enjoyed in the farm home, but culture, genuine comfort and ideal home life are not always bought with money. On some rough, impoverished farm, one will find a cozy cottage, vine-covered and surrounded by trees and flowers, while the fertile farm may have some structure called a home that stands out bleak and bare, indecent in its nudity.

It is not a question of money or of wealth. It is a state of mind. Unfortunately it is a state of mind, when in reverse, that makes young people dissatisfied with rural life and robs them of those youthful pleasures that boys and girls should derive from the pleasant associations in the home which they admire and adore.

With time, patience and effort the rural home can be made a beauty spot without the outlay of money, and why should it not be attractive, from without as well as within? Nature, with trees and shrubs and flowers, will make the home a part of the landscape; something that draws rather than repels.

The tidy, well-kept home adds value to the property, but more important still it stimulates the pride, self-respect and inward satisfaction of those who dwell within. Not only does it enable its occupants to live, but it makes life really worth living.

• Average Car Trip 20 Miles

(From the W. S. Bureau of Public Roads)

WHILE widespread use of the motor car for travel is increasing lengthy trips, most highway traffic remains local in nature and cannot be channelled on a few trunk routes.

Eighty out of every 100 motorists on the main highways today are headed for destinations less than 20 miles from home, and only two out of 100 are going more than 100 miles.

This is shown in preliminary figures for 11 of the states now co-operating with the United States Bureau of Public Roads in making highway planning surveys.

These studies are under way in 43 states. From this survey work the Federal highway authorities expect to obtain sufficient factual data on the principal requirements of highway travel in all areas of the country to be able to project highway development for years to come along sound and economical lines.

Typical of the information being collected are the following results recently announced by the Bureau of Public Roads:

"The main highways and their extensions through cities carry 58.9 per cent of the total motor vehicle traffic; 30.8 per cent is on the large mileage of other city streets, and scarcely more than 10 per cent of the total occurs on all secondary and local rural roads which, in mileage, have eight times the extent of the main highways.

"Preliminary data from 17 States show traffic on the main highways and trans-city connections to be 58 per cent urban in origin and 42 per cent rural. These are approximately the percentages of the urban and rural population in the States where the counts were made.

LAUGHTER.

(Timmins Press)

PATRICK MONTFORD, visiting Irish publisher, dropped a few remarks about laughter the other day in an interview just before his return home.

He recommended it as an antidote for economic depression, war fears, and political distress. He reported that in the United States he had found a great deal of it. A great deal of laughter, that is.

What kind of laughter he found he didn't say; and that would have been illuminating. Laughter is so many things.

A laughing nation might be one to whom laughter had become merely an escape, a kind of drug. Or its laughter might be desperately and hysterical. Or it might be smugly derisive, or again it might be spontaneous expression of a genuine well-being. Or it might be the kind of mature, critical laughter that forces corrections of the blunders it finds laughable.

A man with an ear for laughter could make a tour round the globe and come back with a pretty accurate report of the state of the world.

TOURIST'S FOOD.

(Halifax Chronicle)

TOURIST OFFICIALS of the provincial government have been urging Nova Scotians to feature Nova Scotian foods rather than to attempt to please visitors by offering Virginia ham, Southern fried chicken, or corn pone. The visitor can get his usual American dishes at home, but a good Nova Scotian fish chowder, some of our fresh strawberries, or later in the summer, a deep apple pie with biscuit crust, will give him an impression of this province he will long remember.

DISILLUSIONED.

(Ottawa Journal)

A VISIT to a bathing beach is sometimes a disillusioning experience; this revelation of the human form so nearly unclothed that no smallest departure from the beautiful is concealed. Are these the handsome, dignified gentlemen we see on Sparks street — these the charming, well-groomed women of the office and the home?

For men the rule about trunks is a simple one and self applied. No, if there is the least suspicion of a bulge above them. Trunks demand a form that is slim and straight. Women also should consult the mirror and the weigh-scales rather than the advertisements of streamlined beauties.

MONDAY HOLIDAYS.

(Charlottetown Guardian)

IF THE Dominion Day holiday were changed from July 1 to the first Monday in July, it would doubtless meet with very general approval. The celebration on a Friday this year must have suggested to many the desirability of the change, which would make possible the greater enjoyment of a long week-end.

There could be less objection to this change of date than there was to the proposed changing of Armistice Day. Because of the deep sentiment connected with that day, it is almost sacred to many people and they preferred keeping to the exact date.

To The Editor

IN THE SHADE

To Editor of Examiner:

Sir,—Of all the bunk that people are expected to read and believe the bunkiest is the statement of the reading in the shade of the government thermometer. Its conditions are ideal while the conditions of those down in the streets and hot buildings, shade or no shade, are many degrees worse. The truth is the reading should be "in the sun" where most people are at different times and not "in the shade" where breezes blow on the government thermometer, but where no breezes blow nine times out of ten for the great mass of taxpayers and sweaters.

MORE TRIPE

"Authors vary greatly in the methods they employ to commit their ideas to paper," observed a man in the train.

"Yes," replied an elderly gentleman, "some of them seem to be using a tripe-writer.

STAYING AT HOME.

(Chatham News)

THE MODERN IDEA seems to be that if we are to have a "good time" we must jump in a motor car and race all over the country, and then race back again. Far away fields are green on holidays; whereas if the people would only join together in a neighborly spirit and "make their own fun" right in their own town, they would have a better time, and would be far more satisfied and refreshed the next day.

SOMEBODY ELSE.

(Daily Express, London)

FIVE HUNDRED and thirty-six people were killed, twenty thousand seven hundred and eighty-eight injured on the roads last month. These figures will not mean much to you. You know you are a careful driver. You know you walk delicately. People read of the casualties on the roads as they used to read of the casualties in the war. You always think the other fellow will get it. Never yourself.

REASON BEHIND IT

(Brockville Record and Times)

It is altogether probable that Britain's rearmament, causing a further increase in her military, aerial and naval strength from day to day, has quite a lot to do with the more reasonable attitude which is being displayed by certain European dictatorships.

PRISON REFORM

(Stratford Beacon-Herald)

A Missouri editor thinks that "there never will be satisfactory prison reform until we induce a better class of criminals to patronize our jails." Here in Canada there are people who seem to think any improvement should be in officials, the prisoners being quite all right.

Montrealer Rowing In Channel Gets Merry Ride Out To Sea

FAREHAM CREEK, England, Aug. 5 (CP-Cable).—After the harrowing experience of being carried in an open rowboat by the tide into the English Channel and buffetted by a choppy sea for hours, Eric Wainwright of Montreal was safe in this south coast hamlet today. He said he was determined hereafter to do his rowing in safer waters.

Mr. Wainwright, employed at Vickers Aviation Works at Weybridge, was spending his holidays at Folkestone and yesterday decided to escape the oppressive heat by rowing out into the channel breeze. On the beach at Sandgate, near Folkestone, he left his raincoat tied to his bicycle.

A few minutes later, to the alarm of persons on shore, he was seen heading out to sea before a stiff breeze. An alarm was promptly given and a search was launched by three men in a rowboat, an air force plane, and the Hythe lifeboat. The searchers returned without finding any trace of the Canadian.

Mr. Wainwright today explained what happened.

"After hiring the boat I soon found the tide sweeping me out to sea," he said. "I had become exhausted when I saw a cargo vessel and hailed it. The crew picked me up and hauled the rowboat aboard. I saw the airplane but had no idea it was searching for me. I guess I was mighty lucky and, believe me, I'll do my rowing on a smaller river henceforth."

Salzbury Festival Now For Germans

SALZBURG, Austria, Aug. 5.—(CP-Havas)—The Salzburg music festival has been transformed under Nazi auspices this year from a brilliant international event for the social and artistic elite of two worlds to an almost strictly German holiday excursion, with Reich vacationists in sports clothes filling the seats once occupied by foreign visitors in evening dress.

According to figures released last night by the Salzburg police, there were 598 English guests here this July as against 2,037 in 1937; 283 French music lovers as against 1,477; 1,139 Americans as against 2,442; 2,701 Czechoslovaks as against 6,386 and 143 Belgians as against 465.

From March, when Austria was incorporated into the Reich, until July, when the festival opened, the Nazi authorities worked feverishly to prepare Salzburg in its new "Aryan" dress. The entire program had to be reorganized. Seven operas were prepared with new settings and new casts, two new open air spectacles had to be found to replace Hoffmannsthal's "Jedermann" and Goethe's "Faust," and the entire production had to be "purified" of Jewish influence.

Where 52 Died In Railway Disaster

Fifty-two bodies have been recovered from the battered wreckage pictured here, near Kingston, Jamaica, and total deaths are expected to reach 60. The huge toll of life was claimed in the worst railway disaster in the history of the West Indies. It occurred when a pusher locomotive telescoped another engine, tender, baggage car and four coaches of the Jamaica government railway lines, forcing them over an embankment and into a river. Almost half the 300 native passengers were killed or injured in the wreck.

Magistrate Finds Things Trying On Hot Day In Cobourg Court

Cobourg, Ont., Aug. 5 (CP) MAGISTRATE O. A. Langley of Peterborough, found things trying during his sessions of police court here on Thursday afternoon and evening. Lack of what His Worship regarded as proper containers for exhibits caused him to express annoyance during the afternoon.

"I want a large envelope to put these exhibits in. Has this court any large envelopes?"

When none was forthcoming at that moment, Magistrate Langley strode from the court room, with a remark that court was adjourned. He came back with a large envelope. The magistrate also commented on the lack of a police court cler kto kee ptab on minor details such as exhibits and endorsements.

At the evening session the magistrate demanded a box for some exhibits.

"I can't go on like this. I'll adjourn until morning," he threatened while a constable hurried out for a box.

"Get a shopping bag at a store," suggested the magistrate.

"The stores are closed at this hour," reminded Col. F. D. Boggs, K.C., Crown Attorney.

The magistrate later demanded another box.

"Get a wood box this time," suggested Col. Boggs.

An exhibit in one case which was an article of women's attire and of a violent red shade, raised some doubt on the part of His Worship as to what it was.

"It is a waist," was the expert opinion of the woman court stenographer.

"They are undies," ruled His Worship.

Controllers Renounce "Blue Sunday" And Throw Open Toronto Parks

Toronto, Aug. 5 (CP.) BOARD OF CONTROL today renounced Toronto's traditional "blue Sunday." Controllers decided to open all city parks and playgrounds for use of citizens on Sundays starting August 7.

Bowling greens, pools and tennis courts will be open Sundays in summer, hockey cushions and skating rinks will be open in winter, and the matter of permitting slides in winter will be discussed later since they involve supervision. The use of equipment in playgrounds will be limited for the present to those not requiring supervision.

The order opening the parks and playgrounds Sundays specifies "from 1 p.m. to dark."

Mayor Ralph Day emphasized that no organized or commercial sport would be allowed Sundays. "The idea is that people will be able to use the parks as they might their own backyards," he said. "They may play tennis or anything they like on their own responsibility as individuals."

Leafs Record Second Win Against Birds

TORONTO, Aug. 5 — (CP) — They're strictly a long shot, but don't count Toronto Maple Leafs out of the race toward the International League playoffs.

Six games behind the fourth place Syracuse Chiefs and a half game further astern of the Buffalo Bisons, the Leafs, who have won 10 of their last 13 games, figure on upsetting one of the two teams in the stretch drive.

While the Bisons and Chiefs continue to battle each other today and over the week-end, the Leafs will be tangling with the last place Baltimore Orioles, over whom they recorded their second straight victory last night, 8-2.

Joe Gantenbein clouted a homer with the bases loaded and rapped out two singles to help Lefty Joe Sullivan chalk up his twelfth victory of the season. Sullivan held the Orioles to eight hits, one a homer by Earl Bolyard, and fanned seven.

Meanwhile the Chiefs whipped the Bisons 8-3 in their series opener and extended the herd's losing streak to eight games. The Chiefs belted out eleven hits and took advantage of four Buffalo errors, three by Moe Mulleavy, to make things easy for Jake Mooty. The Syracuse righthander, after being hit hard in the first three innings, settled down and allowed only one safe blow in the last six frames.

The Montreal Royals broke a five game losing streak and snapped Jersey City's winning skein at three when they halted the Little Giants, 4-2. Harry Smythe, veteran Montreal southpaw, was reached for ten hits but the Little Giants couldn't get to him in the pinches.

The Newark Bears moved up their scheduled game with the Rochester Red Wings to make a doubleheader Sunday.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

TWO TILTS on here tonight, and folks may see both as one is early and the other under electric lights. Young Petes and Cobourg clash at six in Riverside in the second semi-final playoff of the Lakeshore Junior Baseball League. Cobourg took the first but it has been protested. However, the locals have to get in there and win tonight, or else. Should be a real ball game with lots at stake and two good young crews performing as though their lives depended on it. Bob Todd will twirl for Manager Herb Ralph's boys this fray. The locals also have an exhibition game tomorrow aft at two, standard time, in the Lakefield Fair Grounds with a Toronto junior team, which is second in the Viaduct Park League.

* * * * *

OTHER TILT tonight is at nine in the George St. lacrosse arena, an O.L.A. senior "B" scrap betwixt Brooklin and the Petes. It'll be a battle al lthe way with the Brooklin boys tougher than rump steak in a cheap boarding-house. Several ex-Oshawa stars aboard the Brooklin lineup and this is the team to lick for league laurels. The Petes aren't pansies, either, and fans can bank on a contest of continuous action and excitement. Seems to us it'll be a battle of veterans, both sides having half a dozen dandy oldtimers of the gutted-stick sport. Should jam in the cash customers like a girlesque show with an S.R.O. sign out.

* * * * *

Or a Ton of T.N.T., Eh?

LOT OF BIRDS like to see fireworks in their sports offerings, but—to digress from athletics a moment—we'll bet there are some birds in Brampton who will sport no more with fireworks. Seems a gent there got fed up on being awakened at dawn by a flock of starlings raising the dead with their racket in a tree outside his window. Knowing firearms are illegal, he rigged up a skyrocket with a long fuse, tying it to the bottom of the tree. Next a.m., the chorus wakened him again, so he lit the fuse. A minute later there was a hair-raising whirr and the rocket whizzed up through the branches. Half a hundred startled starlings nearly died of heart-failure and then flew off with surprised squawks. They didn't return either for a second helping of skyrocket! Wonder how the GM-men, if they get tough in the C.O.B.L. playoffs, would react to a few well-placed rockets.

* * * * *

OMEMEE AND WESTCLOX he-male softballers fought it out in nine heats last h'evening to a 5-all deadlock. Which means the standing is still the same with a couple of contests left before playoffs. This tie tilt will be replayed Monday at the Bowl, while Westclox and the Motorists meet again here Saturday. Bateman and Stephenson pitched fair ball and had good support in last night's fray, and the boys are really playing softball now with the end in sight—and it is anyone's race yet.

* * * * *

Where Do the Colleens Go?

SEEMS the gals' softball game in Keene last night, Westclox vs. Keene, was called off owing to wet grounds—or so we were informed this fine morn. The Keenesters clash with C.G.E. at the Bowl tonight, and no further info has been sent this corner regarding a possible gals' softball double-header on the morrow. Remaining tilts must be hurried along as there are a number of local playoff contests in the offing yet, and a loop winner must be ready to meet the Ottawa lasses in two weeks time. We don't just get the P.W.S.U. angle where Peterborough and Ottawa meet first, whilst Cobourg damsels sit back with a bye in P.W.S.U. playdowns. Seems to us much money could be saved by having these nearby towns settle their series first.

* * * * *

AT 11 A.M. tomorrow, the Petes pull out from the Y.M.C.A. for their first C.O.B.L. playoff fracas in Oshawa, return one in the four-in-seven serial being next Saturday at Riverside. Looks like a left-handers' duel tomorrow betwixt McNally and Biddle, both clubs hoping muchly to grab this initial joust. With McGarry not hitting the size of a lady's shoe this season in senior company, Rowden may play the infield with Matthews back in the right garden. An exhibition game will be staged here next Tuesday in the twilight at six bells between Bright's A.C. seniors of Toronto and our gang.

* * * * *

Are These Races Kept Clean?

DAN McISAAC of Peterborough, a local Y.M.C.A. entry in the Canadian soap-box derby at Belleville yesterday, came first in the "duffers' heat" to win 10 bucks and a helmet. But he was disqualified from the main race on account of the wheels on his er-ah vehicle (which he had hoped to qualify for the Akron, Ohio, championships) weren't up to the standard of manufacture required for this event. It seems there are actual rules now governing these soap-box extravaganzas and we suppose that is right and just—else maybe even Sir Malcolm Campbell would come over with his "Bluebird Special," rub out the name of it and paint on his car: "Use Whozis Soap, It Floats," and make a farce of the whole thing! Henry McIsaac was the official entrant from here but was sick so his brother took his place. And did right well, too.

* * * * *

OUR LOCAL LACROSSERS didn't fool last night. They took a full team along to East York and copped a 12-8 decision. A dandy battle with the Torontos fighting their heads off but up against a slightly better gang. All the Petes looked neat in this number, from the goal out—and an especial mention might be made of Red Dallin, the hard-working forward, for his effective backchecking. The Petes drew more penalties but clicked on passing and shooting most of the route against their scrappy rivals. The locals have a large roster and should be able to field a strong squad for every game, alternating the players around so that all will get in some action without too long a layoff. Playoffs won't be here for awhile yet.

C. V. Whitney's Horse, Equipoise, Dead Second To Sun Beau As Money Winner

LEXINGTON, Ky., Aug. 5 (CP).—Equipoise, which blazed a golden trail in seven years of race track campaigning, is dead.

The C. V. Whitney horse, second to Sun Beau as the greatest money winner in turf history, died last night on Whitney's Blue Grass farm near here after a two days illness. An autopsy was scheduled today.

In 51 starts the chestnut son of Pennant-Swinging by Broomstick, finished in the money 43 times, winning 29 races and earning $338,610. Sun Beau won $376,744.

"Ekky" also held the world's record for the mile, running it in 1:34 and two-fifths, June 30, 1932 at Arlington Park.

Equipoise lost a chance to pass Sun Beau's money mark when he bowed a tendon in the 1935 Santa Anita handicap finishing seventh. He was retired to stud after that race.

Suspended

Suspended without pay is the present lot of Cliff Melton, above, New York Giants' pitcher. A rookie sensation last year when he won 20 games, Melton got off to a good start this year by winning his first six starts. Since then, however, things have not gone so well. Manager Bill Terry gave no reason for the hurler's suspension.

SPORT SPICE

By EDDIE BRIETZ

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—(AP)—Brand new spirit of Cub team has thrilled New Yorkers...You had to be at the Polo Grounds yesterday to get it first hand...When beaming old Gabby Hartnett poled a long one into the stands every man on the squad was on his feet and outside the dugout waiting to welcome Gabby who is 100 per cent. with all hands...If Phil Wrigley had been there he probably would have said to himself: "How long has this been going on?"...Corrigan and his old sewing machine are the big news here at the moment, but it might be worth mention that the best you can get on Armstrong now is 13 to 5 with most of the gamblers holding out for 12 to 5.

The fighting Zivic brothers of Pittsburg are at Pompton Lakes tuning up for an eastern campaign ...Time something was done about Mace Browne of the Pirates—a "day-of" or something...So far the Bucks have played 69 home games and Old Mace has been in 33 of 'em...The way those Boston Bees win games on nothing has the baseball world talking...Give 'em three runs and they'll win a doubleheader any old day...Which brings to mind that Deacon Danny McFayden has won six of his 10 victories by one marker...By the way, what's become of Joe Louis?

Today's tall one: A team down in Gaston county, North Carolina, has a pitcher who is 50 per cent. cross-eyed...One eye looks straight ahead and the other slants off at a complete right angle with a sort of westward ho! gleam in it...In other words, the guy (who is a right-hander) can stare the batter in the face and keep a glimmer on first base all at the same time...Question is, what would an umpire who takes his balks seriously, do if the pitcher, while eyeing the batter with his right eye, suddenly whips the ball to first picking off the runner which same he is looking at with his left bob?

Brintons Beat Electrics 3-0

Brintons advanced further in the league standings at the expense of C.G.E. when they defeated the Electrics 3-0 at King Edward Park last night (Thursday). The C.G.E. won the toss and Newt Downer put the ball in motion with the Electrics being the first to attack. Adams in goal clearing from A. Mitchell and W. Harris, the ball being cleared up the field to the other end, where the Brintons were awarded a fruitless corner. Play then running from end to end until S. Clarke broke away on the right wing, to cross over the ball where N. Downer got possession to beat J. Bolton in the C.G.E. goal with a lovely shot to put the Brintons ahead one to nothing.

A few minutes later, N. Downer had another nice try, J. Bolton in the C.G.E. goal having a nice save. Play ran from end to end, the C.G.E. forwards missing many chances to score through lack of good shooting and Adams in goal for Brintons putting up his usual good game. Clarke broke away on the right wing to cross the ball, where G. Downer got possession to make the count 2 to nil.

Second Half

On resuming, play ran from end to end until N. Downer again had a nice try from about 14 yards, causing J. Bolton to make a lovely save. At this stage J. Bolton, in the C.G.E. goal was injured and had to be carried from the field; J. Mitchell taking his place in goal and making a good job of it until Bolton returned. The C.G.E. seemed disorganized and a breakaway by the Brintons gave Richardson a chance, and he shot past, while at the other end B. McMaster had a nice try which Adams saved beautifully. Brinton wing men were very dangerous at this stage, and F. Earle and A. Mitchell of the C.G.E. breaking up many a Brinton rush. Line-ups:

C.G.E.—J. Bolton, W. McKenzie, J. Mitchell, Earle Buchan, McPhate, Keith Rosso, McMaster, A. Mitchell, W. Harris; subs., Goodhue, Cribbs.

Referee.—A. McKinley.

Lawn Bowling

By HERB MARTIN

The saying "As the Peterborough bowlers go, so goes the district," was certainly true yesterday when down at Port Hope our club not only had 9 of the 16 entries, but walked away with all of the sets of prizes—Mrs. J. Arnold topping the list by coming first and winning the cup. We believe this record has only been equalled once before and that at Lindsay about four years ago.

But the real kick about this tournament was the fact that there were two of the nine rinks who had no transportation, so they clubed together, hired a taxi, went to the tournament, taxied home again, had a good time ,and incidentally one of them got in on the prize distribution.

The other four rinks were skipped by Mrs. A. Hope, Mrs. C. Williamson, Mrs. H. Staunton and Mrs. W. Hepburn.

Local Lacrossers Are Hard Put In Defeating Powerful Yorkmen

Creighton In Goal Plays Steady Game

The Petes defeated East York by a 12 to 8 count last night on the latter's grounds in an Ontario Lacrosse Association senior "B" fixture. The visitors got off to an early start but saw the Yorks tie it up before halftime and then it was a ding-dong battle all the way. The Petes' third-quarter rally gave them the nod.

Practically at full strength again for this important tussle, the locals were in rare form and had to be against the powerful East York aggregation. The latter made it a hard grind throughout in a rugged, speedy and exciting contest. Dallin starred with some fine back-checking with Creighton good in goal and having fine aid from his husky defence. There was little to choose among the forwards, the whole gang playing their heads off and looking good. Graham, Hedley, Davis and Hayward were best for the losers.

Petes Open Fast

Starting off with a rush, the Petes rammed home four counters before there was a comeback. Worthy scored the first on Magee's pass, and he got another shortly on Whitton's assist. Reid ran in a lone counter and then Worthy, who was flying in this fray, tallied once more. East York suddenly came to life to even the count. Davis twisted his way through for two counters with Graham and Hedley notching the others.

Hendy put the Petes one up for a minute but Hedley got it back and then A. Graham gave the East Yorkers a lead. The Petes broke out again in the third to take a safe margin with nifty teamwork and shooting. Magee got two nice goals alone, and Reid scored two nifties, aided once by Dundas and once by Whitton. Pammett took Crowe's pas sto tally. Davis got a pass from Sinclair for the Toronto team. Chute and Crowe parked the ball in the homesters' cage before the finish on neat tries and Rhinehart wound up the scoring for East York just before the last whistle. Penalties in this tilt were drawn by Reid, Crowe (2), Sloan, Magee, Miller and Hendy of Peterborough and Rhinehart (2), Sinclair and McLean of East York. The teams:

Petes: Goal, R. Creighton; defence, Worthy and Miller; centre, Magee; wings, Crowe and Dallin; rover, Pammett; alternates, Chute, Sloan, Whitton, Reid, Hendy and Dundas.

East York: Goal, Hayward; defence, Rhinehart and Sinclair; centre, Hedley; wings, Prosser and J. Graham; rover, A. Graham; alternates, McLean, Carr, Davis, Hughes, Lindow, Wilson and Harley.

Referee, J. Davidson of Mimico.

Cricket Notes

Tomorrow (Saturday) Whitakers play a return match with Toc H in Toronto.

In the afternoon the Peterborough Club will hold a full field practice at the Oval. In view of the important match against Toronto Cricket Club on the following Saturday, a full attendance is requested.

Brooklin Squad To Play Petes

At nine tonight (Friday) under the lights at the George St. lacrosse arena, the Brooklin squad and the Petes mix it up in an O.L.A. senior "B" fixture. It will be preceded at 8.15 by a midget contest between Rotary and Kiwanis. The senior setto ought to be a humdinger, probably the best seen here this summer. Brooklin is one of the best "B" outfits in Ontario and the team that beats Brooklin should cop honors. The Petes feel they can knock off the all-star squad making up this aggregation, including the pick of last year's good Oshawa crew. With both clubs expecting to field a full lineup this evening, the fur should fly and a big crowd of fans should see a grand game.

Daniels, Barron, DeGray and Bovin are some of the ex-Oshawa players going good in senior ranks this season and there should still be plenty of rivalry between these huskies and local lacrossers. The teams fought it out to an 8-all draw their last meeting and anything may happen here this evening. Local officers believe the Brooklin boys will arrive on time and with all their players on hand for a real scrap. The Petes are all set for a hard tilt.

Yachtsmen Organize

SYDNEY, Australia, Aug. 5 (CP-Reuters).—Owners of pleasure craft will place their yachts and their services, without reservation, at the disposal of the Royal Australian Navy in the event of a national emergency under a scheme inaugurated by a number of Sydney motor yachtsmen.

The founders urge instructions for yacht owners in emergency patrol duties. Captain M. B. R. Blackwood has been appointed commodore of the yacht owners. He plans to divide the volunteers into flotillas, each with a leader. Spheres of usefulness will be found for craft of all types.

CHICAGO BLANKS GIANTS 6-0; YANKEES INCREASE MARGIN

Indians Need Weekend Sweep To Take Lead

NEW YORK, Aug. 5 (AP).—Another of those "turning points" that have had this season swinging along in a groove somewhere between a merry-go-round and a streak of lightning, pops up in both major baseball leagues today.

New York Yankees, enjoying their gaudiest western whirl of the year, tangle with Cleveland's persistent Indians in a series for the American League leadership. And New York Giants, doddering along 5½ games off the National League pace, make a last-ditch stand in their own Polo Grounds against the front-running Pirates of Pittsburgh.

The heat is all on the Indians and Giants. Anything less than a sweep in the weekend campaigning will do either little good.

By virtue of hanging an 8-4 beating on Detroit Tigers yesterday, while the Tribe's tilt with the Red Sox was rained out, the Yanks invade Cleveland with a 2½-game bulge. The Giants were blanked 6-0 by Chicago Cubs, and, although the Bucs lost 4-3 to Boston Bees, Bill Terry's Terriers were left seven games back on the all-important losing side.

If the Indians should lose only one game to the Yanks, Gehrig and company will go back east in front—and when the world champions are on the sunrise side of the Alleghenies, bouncing them out of the league lead is no easy matter.

Both Teams Weak

In this "crooshal" American league set, both teams are nursing physical ailments. For the Yanks, big Rufus the Red Ruffing is suffering from an ailing knee, and belting Bill Dickey had to retire from yesterday's game with a slightly banged up leg. The Tribe isn't exactly cheering about the sore arm bothering its pitching ace, Johnny Allen.

As a result, manager Joe McCarthy, holding the upper hand anyway, is gambling with Bump Hadley, who's something less than a dependable winner, in today's opener against young Bobby Feller.

The Giants, coated with whitewash yesterday for the second time in three days and the 12th time this season, are lifting the suspension on Cliff Melton, the stringbean southpaw, to start against the Pirates. Pie Traynor's hired hands are bringing rookie Bob Klinger off the hospital list for his first outing since he discovered he couldn't pitch off a sore arm back on July 24.

The victories for the Cubs and Bees comprised the only business transacted in the National league yesterday. The Cub conquest was accomplished through a totally unexpected six-hit flinging job by lefty Larry French, while Deacon Danny MacFayden did the honors for the Bees.

Beaten twice by the Athletics on Wednesday, Chicago White Sox just reversed the proceedings yesterday. Thornton Lee's six-hitter took an 8-2 decision in the opener, and the whole club ganged up for a 17-hit attack for a 7-3 edge in the nightcap. Harry Kelley's steady hurling and Zeke Bonura's four hits gave the Senators an easy 10-4 win over the Browns.

World's Champion

One of the big surprises of the year in the boxing world was the one-round knockout of world's middleweight champion, Freddie Steele, by an unknown, in the east at least. Al Hostak (ABOVE). Al, only 22 years old, took just one minute and 43 seconds to finish off Mr. Steele and confiscate his title.

Henry Won't Know What Ambers Will Do In Ring, While Lou Won't Know Himself

NEW YORK, Aug. 5.—There have been great champions in the lightweight division—McAuliffe, Lavigne, Gans, Leonard and Tony Canzoneri—and by comparison with these men Lou Ambers doesn't look so good. But there is one department of boxing in which he doesn't have to give any of them an edge. In the matter of heart the little Italian hitter from Herkimer is the equal of them all.

The courage of Ambers is what makes forecasters wonder when they weigh the lightweight champion's chances to keep Little Henry Armstrong from snatching his crown, Aug. 10.—That, and Lou's unorthodoxy. Ambers is a slam-bang fighter, always bouncing around, tossing punches from all angles, offering a hard target by reason of his activity. Hennery is an unorthodox fighter, too, always boring in, hurling hundreds of punches, possessed seemingly of endless stamina, and depending upon it in a big way. Hennery knows what to expect from orthodox fighters, but he is at a disadvantage against Ambers. He doesn't know what Lou will do. Lou doesn't know what he will do himself. So it ought to be a whale of a fight.

Both Came Up the Hard Way

Both boys have come up to the top the hard way, overcoming chances that were overwhelmingly against their success. A few years ago both were bumming their way on trains around the country, fighting for pork and beans in this club and that. Lou's father had some money before prohibition, but the amendment wiped him out. Lou worked in mills and factories, but he loved boxing. One day he told his father he wanted to become a fighter. The elder Ambers (Ambrosio is the family name) told him to go ahead, but not to come home with a black eye, because if he did, he'd get another one when he got home.

Lou beat his way east and west, not having much luck. He was only 16 when he first came to New York, and slept in Grand Central station until a policeman told him that if he caught him ther again he'd have him put in a boys' home. He slept in subways, walked the streets. When he would get $25 or so for a fight he would send part of the money home where his mother, father and nine children could use a few dollars.

His first recognition came when he beat Frankie Wallace, out of Cleveland, at a time when Wallace was regarded as a contender for the lightweight title. Fights came a little easier after that, and Lou fought more often because his father died about that time (four years ago), and back home they counted on Lou as a life-saver.

The Big Chance

Three years ago Lou got his big chance. Barney Ross left the lightweight throne vacant because of inability to make the weight, and an elimination tournament was staged to select his successor. Ambers was tossed in against Tony Canzoneri in the final bout, and though Lou lost, he looked like the coming champion that night.

Ambers literally stormed his way to another championship bout, beating Frankie Klick, Baby Arizmendi, Pete Mascia, Orville Drouillard, Joey Greb, and knocking out Tony Herrera, Eddie Marks, Tony Scarpati, Buster Brown and Lou Jallos. He got a return battle with Canzoneri in the fall of 1936, and won in 15 rounds. As champion he has lost some fights, but whenever the title was on the line, he has fought like a tiger to keep it.

Whatever else Armstrong is expecting to get from Ambers, he can depend on that—the Herkimer Hurricane will fight with him from gong to gong. Lou is not going to lose easily.

Westclox Tie With Omemee

Westclox and Omemee softballers battled to a 5-5 tie at the Bowl last night before a fair crowd, leaving the standing still undecided and forcing a replay next week. It was a dandy scrap all the way with darkness forcing the contest to be called at the end of the ninth. Bateman and Stephenson, rival moundsmen, each allowed nine hits, the latter walking four and fanning seven while Bateman struck out six and gave no walks. Good fielding was dished up over most of the route. Omemee got their runs early while Westclox nicked four in the seventh frame.

Ellis of the locals had a double and two singles while Dormer got two singles. Brockley and Rehill of the O's each collected a two-bagger and single. Fielding features of a nifty struggle were contributed by Brockley and Weir of the visitors and Dormer and O'Leary of the Clockmen. The teams

Westclox: Dormer 3b; O'Leary cf; Ellis, 1b; Calladine, ss; Stanger, 2b; Bateman, p; Currie, lf; Foster, rf; Mowry, c.

Score by innings:

Omemee	130	001	000	5	9	2

Winnipeg Nearer Dominion Honors

WINNIPEG, Aug. 5 — (CP). — United Weston of Winnipeg to-day were a step nearer the finals of the Dominion Football Association after they tied 1-1 with Vancouver North Shore United in the second game of the best-of-three series here last night.

Coupled with their 3-2 win over North Shore Tuesday, Weston have only to tie the Vancouver eleven Saturday, to take the Western Canada title. A North Shore victory would necessitate another contest.

Jim Spencer of Vancouver and Doug. McMahon, Winnipeg, were last night's scorers, Spencer netting in the first half and the Weston player equalizing in the final half.

Local Juniors Here Tonight

Weather permitting, the Young Petes will play a crucial ball game here tonight (Friday) at six o'clock in Riverside Park when Cobourg tangles with them in a Lakeshore Junior Baseball League semi-final playoff fracas. It is the second of the two-out-of-three series, Cobourg having won the first—though the locals have put in a protest on it. Young Petes must win tonight or if the protest is not upheld, the they're through for the year. A home win would sew up the series and force a third game. Winner of this goes into the league finals against Oshawa, with the loop victor heading into O.B.A. junior playdowns on Aug. 20th.

Tonight's tussle should be a good one, between two smart young squads with plenty at stake. It deserves a big crowd of fans, especially as there is no ball game here this Saturday. Manager Herb Ralph of the Young Petes will pitch Bob Todd, while it is uncertain who will get the mound assignment for the visitors. Both teams are to be at top strength for the important semi-final fray and will battle it out for nine innings in the twilight. Date of the third game, if necessary, has not been set as yet, nor has any word been received from the league officers regarding the protest.

TORONTO, August 5—(C.P.). — Cattle trade was the dullest so far this year with a holdover of 2,700 head on Tuesday reduced to about 1,200 by the close on the Toronto Livestock Market this week, the Dominion Livestock Branch reports. Prices were down fully 25 cents on all grades of killers, with bids as much as 50 cents down on some of the unsold cattle.

Calves were active at firm prices. Hogs dropped $1.50 cwt during the week, and lambs opened 25 cents down, holding steady for the balance of the week. Sheep prices were unchanged.

Cattle receipts included 1,400 from the West, mostly stockers. The top for choice weighty steers was $7.75 for two loads, with other steers from $7.50 down to $5 cwt. Exporters shipped 320 cattle to Great Britain, mostly light steers and heifers of medium to good quality.

A few good butcher cattle reached $6.75 on Tuesday, with sales for the balance of the week mostly between $5 and $6.25. Butcher cows were from $3 to $4, with a few up to $4.25. Canners and cutters were $2.25 to $2.75, and a few as low as $2. Butcher bulls opened at $4.25 for tops but closed with none over $4 and with most at $3.75. Bolognas sold from $3 to $3.50.

Calves $9.50 Top

Fed calves ranged from $7 for mediums up to $9 and $9.50 for choice. Stockers moved slowly at $4 to $5.15 according to quality. A few picked feeders brought $5.50. Good milkers and springers were steady at about $65 for tested tops.

Choice veal calves traded from $8 to $8.50 with the bulk of calf sales between $6 and $8. Grassers and drinkers moved from $3.75 to $4.75 cwt.

Off-truck bacon hogs closed generally at $9.50 with a few long hauls up to $9.65. Sows were sold mostly at $6.50 off trucks for both grades. Sucking pigs brought $2 to $4 each and a few 80-pound chunks reached $8 each, with some left unsold.

Sheep and lambs made a moderate run. Good ewes and wether lambs opened at $9.50, continuing to the close. Bucks were generally $8.50 and culls $7 to $8. Sheep were $2 to $4 cwt. according to quality.

Sulphide Man Is Gored Badly By Bull

(Examiner Correspondence.)

TWEED, Aug. 5.—Thomas Cassidy, thirteen-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Michael Cassidy, residing near Sulphide, is suffering from a shaking-up, the result of being gored by a bull in the yard at his home last evening. Young Cassidy was driving the cattle from the barn back to the fields and when he attempted to prevent a thoroughbred Holstein bull from entering another part of the premises the animal turned on him, inflicting rather severe injuries. His two fingers were mangled, he suffered a fractured rib and his neck was lacerated slightly. He was treated at the office of a local physician, following which he was taken to his home.

William Masterson, was given not less than three and not more than seven months in the Ontario reformatory when he appeared before Magistrate Lloyd, charged with the theft of a watch from Mrs. Charles Purchase of Sulphide, on Thursday. In the same court a local woman pleaded guilty to a charge of operating a car without the necessary license and was fined $10.00 and costs.

A car driven by James Courneyea of Bogard and one driven by Everett Beatty, Sulphide, collided head on at the crest of a sharp knoll south of Bogart. Teresa Ann Courneyea, aged 2, received head injuries and was treated by a local physician. No charges were laid by Chief Hayes, who investigated, as matters were amicably settled between the drivers.

Phyllis Kleinsteuber, three-year-old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Dewey Kleinsteuber, Hungerford township, was seriously injured when she fell through the balcony of their home to the cement floor, fifteen feet below, last evening. The youngster fractured a leg and suffered severe head injuries. Following local medical attention, the child was removed to the Belleville General Hospital.

Walter J. Ayers of Ottawa, suffered arm injuries when the car which he was driving failed to negotiate the curve at the junction of Highways 7 and 37 at Actinolite. It is alleged that the speed of the car was so great that the driver had no control of the vehicle after colliding with the guard rails. He drove westerly in the ditch three hundred and fifty feet before upsetting. Ayers was alone at the time and escaped with a few scratches and a shaking up. A charge of reckless driving was laid by Chief Clair Hayes, who investigated.

A carton of empty honey cans, a part of a load being transported in a truck owned by Harvey Chisholm, Roslin, dropped off the vehicle south of the village of Thomasburg, and a passing motorist stopped and removed a number of the cans.

A watchful farmer noted the license number of the car and promptly reported the matter to Chief Clair Hayes. Later in the day, the officer located the car, in which the cans had been left. A charge of theft was preferred against the driver, a Belleville man.

Charged under section 513a of the Criminal Code, Eddie Linkie of the township of Wicklow was sentenced to three months imprisonment by Magistrate Lloyd at Bannockburn when he pleaded guilty to setting fire to the forests. The prosecution arose out of the suspected incendiarism on two fires in North Hastings County, which was investigated by officers of the Ontario Forestry Branch, assisted by the Provincial Police.

Convicted of a second offence when charged with assisting in the operation of an unlicensed distillery apparatus, Joseph Parks, Bancroft, was fined $500 and also sentenced to serve three months in the common jail when he was convicted before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd at Bancroft on Wednesday. In default of the payment of the fine, however, an additional three months in jail must be served. The case was investigated and prosecuted by Constable Wm. Beatty of the R.C.M.P.

Man Is Given Month In Jail Following Fight With Foreman On Oregon Trail

Two Young Men Engaged In Highway Construction When Fight Occurred

Convicted by Magistrate Langley today of having assaulted on July 19 and caused bodily harm to Charles Swanson, foreman for the Johnston Construction Company, building the new highway on the route of the Oregon Trail between Burleigh Falls and Buckhorn in Harvey township, Leslie Perry was sentenced to one month in jail. On similar charge reduced to common assault, Charles Perry, pleaded guilty and was freed on suspended sentence. J. A. Fair represented the two young men who had worked a week under Swanson, having been sent up from the city, and F. D. Kerr, K.C., conducted the prosecution in the absence of V. J. McElderry, K.C., Crown Attorney.

"I find Leslie Perry guilty as charged," His Worship said, "and also that there was no counter assault by Swanson. The accused had no right to hit the foreman. Perry hit him a vicious blow and I find him guilty on the evidence."

Interest was added to this case by rumors to the effect that for some time Peterborough men who had been sent by Relief Officer Metheral to work on the highway had not fared well under Mr. Swanson's orders.

In his evidence, Swanson said "Leslie Perry was trying to make out he was shovelling.

Doing Very Little Work

"He was hardly doing anything. I told him I thought he could do better. He said something about how he used to shovel and I told him to get his time. He walked up to me and hit me on the mouth. It knocked out a tooth and cut my lip."

Swanson told Mr. Fair he was 33 years in this country but had not become a naturalized citizen; and had been eighteen years in construction work.

"Then the other fellow came up and hit me and knocked me to the ground, so hard there was a big lump on the back of my head."

Mr. Fair—"Can you fire a man on simply you own word?" "Yes, if he does not do his work. If he do de work de way it should be, nobody bodder him."

Swanson denied that he knew the two men had been sent up from Peterborough's unemployed.

"You've had other Peterborough fellows up there?"

"Yes."

"And you fired them all?"—"No, no."

"How many?"—"Not more than three I fired."

"But they all got fired after they were up there a week?"—"I don't think so. Some of them quit."

"Did you ever hear a complaint you put your watch back 15 or 20 minutes, and worked them overtime?"

"No. One day my watch stopped, and I asked a fellow what time it was and he said ten past six."

"You got Toronto fellows up there?"—"Yes."

"Johnston Construction's own men," Mr. Fair suggested.

Bawling Boys Out.

"You were after these two boys the whole week, bawling them out?"—"No, I didn't bawl them out."

"You just fired them?"—"Oh, no," witness answered, and said this was his first fight.

The work-day on the Oregon Trail was from 7 a.m. to 6 p.m., with an hour for lunch.

"Do you know the percentage of Peterborough men fired?" — "No. Anybody fired was not doing what he was supposed to do."

"Did the boss say this will be a lesson to the Peterborough boys?"—"No. He said we'll go to Peterborough and tell the police."

"Did you hear it said around the camp that Peterborough boys were no good and they were not wanted?"—"I never heard that. Quite a few of them are working all the time there."

Ryeburn Code, time-keeper, testified that 70 per cent. of the men on the job were from Peterborough.

Mr. Fair—"Seven or eight from the city?"—"More than that."

Some of the city men had quit of their own accord because they were not used to road work.

"Don't you think a 10-hour day in the sun is pretty long for this age?"—"No. I've done it myself."

Mr. Fair—"There may be other slaves up there. Isn't this fellow known as a hard boss?"—"No, sir."

John Larock and Maurice O'Brien were 75 feet up the road from the place where the Perrys were working. Their evidence was what they had seen of the fracas from that distance.

James Anderson, truck driver for the company, said that at the camp after the incident down the road he heard each Perry man say it didn't take two of them to beat up Swanson, "I can do it alone."

Threatened To Do It Again.

"When they threatened to do it again, I told them to use their heads. They were in enough trouble without getting into more," witness said.

Charles Perry, brother of the accused, was called for the defence. To Mr. Fair he said Swanson started to tell him and his brother how to shovel along a ditch. He said, "Get up on top and scoop it down." My brother said, "You can't scoop it down that way and showed why. He said he had done shovelling long before he had seen that job. Swanson told him to go and get his time. My brother said, does that mean I'm fired. Swanson said, "Yes, get to hell out of here. He raised his shovel sideways and swung it at my brother's head. He ducked and hit Sawnson on the jaw."

Chased All Week.

Perry said Swanson had chased him and his brother all week. "You couldn't do anything to suit him." He said 20 to 24 men on relief in Peterborough had been sent up to the job, and "only three of them were left there when I left."

Describing the incident, Leslie Perry said he was levelling earth from a pile when Swanson came up and told him to get on top of it and scoop it down. "I said no man can scoop it down and level it at the same time." I told him "I've shovelled long before I saw you." He told me to "get your time." I pushed the shovel in the ground and started to leave the pile. I had to pass Swanson. When I got near him he swung the shovel sideways at me, and I hit him My brother came up to take the shovel from him and Swanson backed up and fell down. My brother didn't hit him. When we got to the office Snider, the boss, slammed the door in our face and told us to get to hell out of the office."

"I wasn't annoyed that morning," the accused said. "I was glad to get away from a boss who was a slave driver. We got our cheques about 12.30 and left for Peterboro."

Swanson in reply denied he had raised his shovel to hit Perry. "I carried it in the middle of the handle. It was about three feet off the ground."

Dog Owners Hailed Into Police Court

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 5.—Three cases for non-payment of dog license were disposed of in Police Court here Thursday when Wesley Stevens J.P. presided. Shock Kills Worker As Pipe Touches Wire

IROQUOIS, Ont., Aug. 5—(CP)—Mason Shaver, 51, of Iroquois was electrocuted yesterday at Point Iroquois, summer resort on the St. Lawrence River near here, when the pipe of a pump with which he was working touched a live wire overhead.

Shaver, Samuel Webb and Frank Timleck were working on the pump which supplies the resort with water. They hoisted the pipe in the air. As they were lowering it, it swayed and hit a 2,200-volt power line. Shaver was the only one touching the pipe at the time.

Webb suffered severe burns to the hand while applying artificial respiration to Shaver. He came in contact with a chain hanging from the hoist holding the pipe up.

Coroner Dr. Peter McLaughlin, Winchester, will consult Crown Attorney J. H. Harkness at Cornwall before deciding on an inquest.

Portion Of Crowd Which Filled Grandstand At Exhibition

A portion of the huge crowd which jammed the grandstand at the Exhibition Grounds Thursday night to see "Previews of Progress" is pictured above. More accommodation has been provided to handle the crowd when the show will be repeated this (Friday) evening. There is no admission fee and the interesting and highly educational feature was brought to the city under the joint auspices of the Peterborough Examiner and the five service clubs and Chamber of Commerce.

900 Unemployed Are Registered

For some unknown reason there were more applicants for farm positions at the Employment Service of Canada than there have been for many weks, according to Dan Douglas, manager. Most farmers already have their help hired, and few openings are available for today's applicants.

He has been able to fill all inquiries for farm help this year, even though the number has not been as great as this mornings, Mr. Douglas said. Nearly 2,400 unemployed have registered since the beginning of the year and the "live" fyle stands at some 900 men and women.

Few jobs are open to them and many of the applicants are becoming depressed, he said. Many of those registered are not on relief and all in all are a fine group, he said. "A few come in with chips on their shoulders, but they've got to take into consideration what they're up against and make allowances," he said. "Most of them know that if you haven't a job for them, then there's nothing can be done about it."

Given Adjournment On Drunk Count

Charles Gies had touched up his appearance with marked improvement since his remand on a drunk charge Thursday in police court. He asked for a week's adjournment to see a lawyer and get witnesses.

Magistrate Langley reminded him that it was a third offence, if proved, under the Liquor Control Act. Gies looked clear-eyed, shaved, hair arranged neatly, probably 75 per cent. of the smartness he must have presented before he first exposed himself to the penalties of the L.C.A.

"I couldn't do anything yesterday while I was locked up," Mr. Gies said.

Magistrate Langley assented to the week's shift, without bail, and Chief Newhall remarked that if he did not "show up in a week, a warrant could be issued for him and it might be one way of getting rid of him." Such was the eclipse of the former actor.

Judgment Reserved

After hearing argument by counsel, W. B. Gordon, for the defendant, and F. D. Kerr, K.C., acting Crown Attorney, in the case of George H. Perrin, accused of being drunk in charge of a car, Magistrate Langley reserved judgment until next Tuesday.

Other cases quickly run through the mill were a fine of $14.50 to a Smith township man who "guessed he had too much to drink" on Wednesday seven days in jail for a vagrant; and $10.75 fine on a man for driving a car without a license.

Race To Escape Other Fellow's Dust Costs $32 and License 2 Months

KAPUSKASING, Ont., Aug. 5

JOSEPH E. DUBE sped faster and faster in his motor car to prevent the car behind him from passing him. "I didn't want to to take the other fellow's dust," he explained to Magistrate E. R. Tucker.

But the "other fellow" was a police patrol car containing two provincial officers who started chasing Dube when he sped through an intersection here. The officers chased him half way to Hearst, 60 miles away, before abandoning the pursuit. Most of the time their speedometer showed 72 miles an hour. They testified.

Magistrate Tucker convicted Dube of reckless driving, fined him a total of $32.75 and suspended his licence for two months.

Twentieth Century Magic Startles Immense Crowd Which Packed Grandstand

Progress of the Times Revealed in Parade Held Prior to Show

Twentieth Century Magic startled a crowd of more than five thousand people who witnessed General Motors Previews of Progress at the Exhibition Park Thursday night, and a lecture on the scientific progress made during the last quarter century rounded out a truly interesting and educational display.

George Street was lined with cars on both sides of the street from the Exhibition Grounds to Confederation Square by people watching the long parade which started at eight o'clock. J. K. Hughes, J. J. Duffus and Hood and Cummings Motors dominated the parade with car models old and new, from a "coffee boiler" of 1905 vintage to the finest 1938 streamlined jobs. Stocks Bread had several vehicles in the long line and the first was a single wagon with small box at the back, and one of the first used to deliver bread in the days when the company was young. Directly behind this a modern delivery truck with streamlined trailer attached showed the radical change even in the manner of transportation. A two wheel hand cart with milk cans, dipper and pail was pushed along in the parade clearly depicting the old style of milk vending. Directly behind this were the spotlessly clean present day wagons of Campbells Dairy. Silverwoods were also there. All the oil companies were well represented and Fred Goodfellow has his service truck. Gray Copping showed the old way of welding on the blacksmith's anvil and now the modern way.

Should Be Seen By Everyone

Mayor James Hamilton extended a civic welcome to the crew of men handling the exhibits and congratulated the Peterborough Examiner and merchants who had collaborated in bringing Previews of Progress to the city. After seeing the show he remarked that every person in the city should take advantage of this opportunity to view the remarkable exhibition. The same show will be given tonight in the Exhibition Grounds starting at nine o'clock sharp.

H. L. Garner, managing director of the Examiner spoke briefly and in the course of his remarks thanked the Exhibition Board for their splendid cooperation in permitting the park to be used.

Mr. Garner said in part: "On behalf of the Peterborough Examiner it pleases me to welcome you here tonight. In sponsoring the Preview of Progress the Examiner had one thought in mind, and that was to bring to the citizens of this city and vicinity a demonstration that is replete with interest and not a few thrills. Having seen this performance in its entirety I have no hesitation in saying it is one of the most educational and entertaining performances I have ever witnessed and the Examiner is delighted to be able to bring to you this outstanding presentation of things we might expect to utilize some time in the future. I want to pay tribute to the Rotary Club, Kiwanis Club, Lions Club, Kinsmen, Y's Men and Chamber of Commerce for their generous cooperation and assistance as co-sponsors in this evening's performance. Without their valuable help it would have been difficult to complete arrangements for this preview."

Few Of the Sights

A few of the near spectacular sights enjoyed by the large audience were as follows: A flame travelling down a long glass tube and exploding at the end with a pop that had sufficient energy to spin a bicycle wheel several times. An egg frying on a stove that was cold while an Examiner folded to provide fuel was not even scorced between the stove and frying pan.

Mr. Foss placed a large nail on which had been sprinkled some oil in an induction furnace, and then inserted his fingers in the same furnace. In a moment the nail became red hot and the oil went up in smoke, but the demonstrator's fingers were not even warm.

Wonders of the photo-electric cell or "electric eye" as it is also called provided plenty of amusement when Foss by merely stepping in front of a beam of light stopped music being played on a phonograph. Using the electric eye as the receiver and stroboscope for a broadcasting set, Foss produced a variety of sounds from the purr of a motor boat at full speed to melodic sound resembling the tune "How Dry I Am." Many other experiments equally entertaining rounded out the two-hour wonder program. A lecture by Mr. Foss was described by many of the audience as a masterpiece and many intend to hear it a second time this evening.

Ample seating accommodation is available, as special blocks of seats have been placed in front of the grandstand so that everyone attending will be comfortable. Last night's crowd packed the stand and overflowed to the front and around the stream-lined truck carrying the apparatus.

At the conclusion of the show, Mr. Garner urged everyone present to give their utmost support to the officials of the Peterborough Industrial Exhibition this year, so that the Fair may have the success it deserves.

Met Former Buddy For First Time Since Great War At Corps Re-union

TALES OF REUNIONS of old war buddies are beginning to be told now that veterans have exhausted the stories of their amazement at the splendour of the Canadian Corps celebration in Toronto.

One of those stories is told by Dan Douglas, manager of the Employment Service of Canada. Dan was walking about the grounds after Saturday's celebration hoping to see some of his pals of the old 2nd Battalion and was feeling downhearted because he saw not a one of them. Suddenly his heart leaped, for before him stood one of his closest friends of war days, a man he had fought with and lived with during the war. "We saw each other at the same instant and I tell you it made the whole reunion a success," Dan said.

The friend was Gordon H. Grahame, who taught at the Grove School at Lakefield just before the war. He and Dan became close friends on the boat on their way to war when they were "jugged" for fighting. They had not seen each other since the war ended. "Why Dan, you're grey now," Grahame said. "He was grey himself," Dan said today.

Grahame was the only one of eight war time buddies that he saw, although five of them are still alive. He saw many old 2nd Battalion survivors, but was surprised at the few he had actually known overseas.

Old Timer Returns To City On Visit Still Knows Where To Get "Big Ones"

THE OLD TIMERS evidently have not lost the knack of catching fish nor do they forget where the big ones are to be had. An old Peterborough resident, "Mede" Gagnon, now living in Niagara Falls demonstrated that fact Thursday when he succeeded in landing one of the largest muskies that has been caught in this district this summer and he made his kill only a few yards away from Walter Stocker's ornamental garden along the bank of the "Goose Pond."

Mr. Gagnon, who is an uncle of Constable Leo Murphy of the local police force and has numerous other relatives here is paying a short visit to his old home after a long absence and yesterday the urge to go fishing was too strong for him. It was hot and there were suggestions that no luck could be expected in such weather but the Niagara Falls man secured an old punt, found an old trawling spoon and set sail on the Otonabee. He had gone only a short distance and reached a point just north of the end of Antrim street when he had a "strike" that almost pulled him out of the boat.

Then the battle was on and it was no sham fight. The big musky took command of the situation at the start and aided by the current pulled the Gagnon boat almost around the Goose Pond bay. However the line proved reliable and gradually Mr. Gagnon hauled the fish in until after a struggle lasting many minutes he succeeded in yanking his capture into the boat.

It was one of the grand daddies of the maskinonge family for when the proud fisherman got ashore and placed the musky on the scales he was found to weigh exactly 23 pounds — one of the prize catches of the season.

FICTION AND FEATURES

TWO WORLDS

BY MAUD McCURDY WELCH

READ THIS FIRST:

Determined to show Dr. Julian Paige, the man she is in love with, that she can make her own way in the world, Noel Shayne, wealthy society girl, burns her bridges behind her, moves to a rooming house and, for lack of anything better, obtains a job as a taxi dancer which she feels will be only temporary. She is living with a girl named Laurie Evans whom she met in the park. Noel feels she has a dangerous rival in Ruth Chester, Julian's pretty nurse, who has been antagonistic.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 8

But Laurie hadn't found a job either. She looked so discouraged when Noel got back to the room, that neither of them talked very much. And the next day passed and things were just the same. No jobs for either of them.

That night before they went to bed, Laurie said, "I've been wanting to tell you something about Luigi, Noel. He's the one you'll have to watch at the Peacock. They say he's in some kind of a racket. I just thought I'd better warn you."

NOEL HAD more invitations to dance at the Peacock than any of the other girls. Sometimes two or three men good-naturedly contended for her dances, each of them holding a string of tickets. All the time Noel was conscious of Luigi's pale eyes watching her from his usual seat in the corner of a divan at the far end of the big room. Occasionally when the contention for her dances became heated instead of good-natured, Nick would get up leisurely and stroll over to where Noel stood, not knowing how to settle the matter, and Nick would decide who was to be her partner with a curt wave of his hand, not even saying a word or taking the cigar out of his mouth.

Long before it was time to close the Peacock, Noel was conscious of weariness. She probably wouldn't have noticed it so much, if she hadn't been on her feet most of the day walking about the city in constant search of another job.

Laurie's warning about Luigi had made Noel more determined than ever to get away from here. She hated the place enough as it was, but with Luigi's pale eyes on her almost constantly, it was just more than she could bear.

Once tonight she found his eyes upon her wearing a queer speculative expression. The next thing he had walked up to her and said in his low, secretive voice, "Take it a little easier, baby. Sit out some of the dances if you're tired."

Never had Noel heard anything that sounded more grateful to her ears. But she was afraid there was something behind Nick's unusual thoughtfulness. She knew the other girls danced when they were asked, no matter how many times that might be during the evening. They had rests during intermissions only. But the intermissions were very short, at which time they were supposed to sit at the tables and induce the customers to order drinks, which they hardly had time to finish, before the music started again. Another one of Luigi's crazy ideas, Noel had heard one of the girls say while in the dressing room.

But as yet Noel had not taken a seat at any of the tables and tried her hand at coaxing the men to order drinks. That was one thing that she simply had not been able to do.

During an intermission while Noel was sitting in one of the gilt chairs against the wall, one of the girls passed and stopped for just a second. "You'll be able to get away with this as long as the customers are buying long strings of tickets hoping to dance them all with you, but even if you are so darn pretty, you'll probably get fired. Nick wants girls that can make the men spend money on drinks, too." She said it all in a whisper and hurried on.

Something else happened at Luigi's that night also which made Noel feel uneasy. A young man came up and asked Noel to dance with him, exhibiting a long string of tickets, and said: "Every one of them is for a dance with you."

"But that's against the rules," Noel said quickly. She knew Nick didn't like a girl to dance with the same man more than twice in succession. It wasn't good for business. For some of the others, seeing the girl they wanted to dance with, having all her time taken up by the same man, might get discouraged, cash in their tickets and leave.

But this young man was red-haired with hard black eyes, and a rather jutting chin. "I'm going to dance them all with you or else," he said stubbornly.

Noel didn't know what to do. While they were dancing the first dance together, she became suddenly conscious that he was looking at her rather queerly. At last he said, "There's something very familiar about you. If I didn't know it was the craziest thing on earth, I'd say that I'd met you at a prom in Washington and danced with you there."

"That wouldn't be at all likely," Noel tried to say calmly. She didn't remember him in the least, but thought it was quite possible that she had danced with him at a prom in Washington. Of course she couldn't remember even one-tenth of the various young men whom she met and danced with during a social season.

"But I still say I've seen you somewhere," he insisted. And then he added, drawing her closer against him, "Anyway, I've met you now, and I'm ready and willing to make up all the time we've lost. What about lunch tomorrow? And the afternoon, on the river? I've got my yacht anchored out there, a nice little craft. You'd be crazy about it. And there wouldn't be any need for you to come back here, if—you didn't want to."

This was the first time a thing like that had happened. Noel's face flamed with angry color. She drew away from his arms. "I don't think I care to dance with you any longer," she said coolly.

She started over to a chair, but at that moment Nick came up. He said in his tight-lipped voice. "I'm going to ask you to leave, Mr. Courtney. I think you have had a little too much to drink."

"You know d . . . well better than that," the red-haired man returned. "But I'll go. It's plain enough to see how things are here. But before I go, I'm going to tell you something. This young lady's name is not Doran at all. She's not what she seems. Her name is—"

Nick interrupted him then, turned to Noel. "You better go to the dressing room, Miss Doran. You probably need a little powder."

Noel was only too glad to obey. When she came back to the dancers, the red-haired young man was gone. Nick was sitting in his usual place on the divan. Everything was going on as usual. She had two partners waiting for her, and had to make a quick decision between them, all the time wondering what the red-haired young man had told Nick. Had he really recognized her? Did Nick know her identity now? But she had no way of knowing, for certainly Nick's dark, almost saturnine face gave her no clue.

Noel was more tired that night when she went home than she had ever been. She didn't know a thing after she retired until she awakened the next morning about 8 to find Laurie fixing a light breakfast for them both.

"It's a lot cheaper to eat here," Laurie said, and produced three slices of golden brown toast. "You are a magician," Noel declared. "How on earth anybody could make such toast on that thing," she indicated the gas rings with a slender pointed finger.

Laurie laughed. "What a little ignoramus you are. But I'll teach you. I'll teach you lots of things."

"You're already doing that," Noel told her, as she began munching the toast.

Laurie then asked what had happened at the Peacock. Noel admitted that things were not going so well.

"Nicks always been crazy about blondes," Laurie said. "I've been afraid he might cause you trouble."

"I'm going to get another job—just you watch and see," Noel said with determination.

So once again the two girls started out. Noel was going to answer an ad for a mother's helper, which she believed she might fill, not realizing in her ignorance, that a mother's helper might mean doing anything from heavy laundry work to cooking, neither of which she had the slightest knowledge. But when she got there, the place was filled. And she had the same luck with the other jobs. There just wasn't any chance there seemed.

At 6 o'clock she went to the De Luxe, and took a seat by the plate glass window facing the Medical Arts. Maybe she would see Julian and maybe not.

In a few minutes she saw him leaving the building. Ruth Chester was with him. They walked along side by side, smiling at each other as if they were sharing a delightful secret.

While performing it, Hensley accidentally swallowed a rusty razor blade.

Girls Rush Into Marriage Blindly and Then Have Many Years To Rue the Mistake of Not Thoroughly Investigating the Characteristics of the Men They Wed

TRAVELLERS tell us of a tribe in Darkest Africa in which the women are only permitted to keep one eye open in the presence of men. Well, this is one more eye than girls keep open in the presence of men in this country. At least before marriage. For how else can you account for the many misfit marriages and the hordes of disgruntled wives except on the theory that women never even give the men they marry the once-over before they accompany them to the altar?

Total blindness is the only possible explanation for the men, before and after taking, are just the same. They look just the same. They act the same way. They carry the same line of conversation. They have the same peculiarities and habits and ways all of which stick out like a sore thumb, and the only way a girl can possibly keep from seeing them is to keep her eyes shut tight.

Women are such adepts at camouflaging that a man is virtually forced to buy a pig in a poke when he gets married. He never even knows whether his wife is a blonde or a brunette until he gets her home and she takes off her complexion and the hair dye begins to fade. Every girl before marriage is so mild and meek that butter wouldn't melt in her mouth, so a man has no chance to get a line on her real disposition.

Also, before marriage every girl understudies the role of a man's ideal and is what he wants a woman to be. If he is athletic, she tramps miles over golf links, no matter how she lothes exercise. If he belongs to the intelligentsia, she develops enthusiasm for art and reads high-brow books that bore her to tears. If he is domestic, she buys a ruffled white apron and serves him angel food that she alleges she made with her own hands.

Not even Sherlock Holmes could see through the impenetrable disguise that a girl can slip on at a moment's notice, and so when a man discovers that his wife isn't in the least the sort of woman he thought he was marrying he has an alibi that will stand in any court.

But men take no such trouble to befool women as women do to befool men. They don't have to, for one thing. For another, every man considers himself a matrimonial prize just as he is that any girl is lucky to get. So there he stands with all his faults thick upon him for her to see if she will only take a casual glance his way. And she is to blame, not he, if she doesn't like him when she looks him over after marriage.

This is what chills the sympathy in breasts and makes us want to say: "Well, for goodness sake, where were your eyes?" when so many wives come to us with their tales of disillusion and disappointment in marriage. Mrs. A. wails that she and her husband have nothing in common, that he is ALL business and she is ALL soul. Mrs. B. beats upon her breast and declares her marriage is a failure because her husband is grumpy and grouchy and about as chatty as a store dummy. Mrs. C.'s husband bores her to death. Mrs. D.'s is a stick-in-the-mud who never takes her anywhere. Mrs. E.'s is a tightwad. And so on and on through a long list of faults and blemishes that none of these ladies ever suspected before marriage that their husbands had concealed about their persons.

But how can such things happen, one asks in bewilderment? After all, one does not marry a perfect stranger. How, then, is it possible for a woman to "keep company," as the phrase goes, with a man for months, sometimes for years, without finding out whether he is slouchy in his dress; whether he has repulsive table manners—and many wives complain of these things; whether he is an intelligent and interesting companion; whether he is selfish and high-tempered and jealous; whether he is interested in the things she is interested in and has the same views on politics and pie?

Surely if in the days of courtship she kept only one eye open like the savage Janes, she could see whether the cut of his jib and the set of his collar was to her liking. She could have perceived how strong was the lock on his pocketbook and how long it took to get it open. She could have got a fairly accurate line on his disposition and discovered whether his society in large doses would be a stimulating experience or an ordeal that would sink her in depression, and that was only to be endured by the grace of God and for the sake of a meal ticket.

But if before marriage women should keep both eyes wide open and be on the lookout for faults and defects in the men they are considering spending the next thirty or forty years with, after marriage they should shut their eyes and be as blind as bats to all of their husbands' frailties. A good motto for all women is: "Wear magnifying glasses when you look at a man before marriage, but wear blinders after marriage."

The Examiner Fashion Service

Here's a darling swing skirted sun dress with young suspender back, that does double duty. As for practicality... it's unequaled. You'll wear it for spectator wear with its brief bolero jacket. It doesn't hide the cunning shirt collar of the dress. You'll wear the jacket over other frocks. The dress is grand for sunning with its halter-like bodice and free and easy for tennis. Rosebud-pink linen-like cotton is very effective in combination with navy blue cotton, dotted in pink. The dress of a print cotton with solid colored jacket in a tone picked out of the print is a smart scheme. You can use the pattern separately! You can't have too many sun dresses or jackets for vacation days.

Style No. 2797 is designed for sizes 12, 14, 16, 18, 20 years, 30, 32, 34, 36 and 38-inches bust. Size 16 requires 4¾ yards of 39-inch material with ⅝ yard of 35-inch contrasting for dress; and ¾ yard of 39-inch material for bolero.

By MAX TRELL

Now the clown was a very sly fellow. So when Knarf, the shadow boy, asked to learn how to be a clown in a circus, Boo-Hoo (which was the clown's name) agreed with a smile. "I'll teach you myself," he said. "A clown has to know how to do lots of tricks. But you look like a bright lad. I don't think we'll have much trouble getting you to learn them."

Knarf felt very good to hear this. He liked people to think he was bright because, as it happened, he thought he was pretty bright himself.

He turned a somersault

"We'll start right away, my lad," Boo-Hoo said. "We'll start with an easy trick first. This is the trick of standing on your ear. I don't suppose you'll have much trouble doing it."

Now Boo-Hoo, as I said before, was a very sly fellow. He had no intention of teaching Knarf any tricks at all. What he meant to do was to play some of his tricks on Knarf. But you mustn't forget this: Knarf was a shadow and not a boy. For a boy to have stood on his ear would have been a wonderful trick, indeed. But for Knarf—well, you shall see.

Clown Is Surprised

"I'll start by standing on both ears," said Knarf. And with that he turned a somersault in the air and came down on both his ears as lightly as a feather.

"Well...that was...very good," Boo-Hoo said, trying to hide his surprise. "You must have tried that trick before. Come, tell the truth to Boo-Hoo, my lad."

"Oh no. I've never done that trick before in my life. I'm glad you like it. Now teach me another trick."

"Ah yes—another trick. Now just let me think. I have it. It's a very fine trick indeed. I'd like to see you climb up the side of that wall and sit yourself down in a corner of the ceiling."

And Boo-Hoo smiled. He was sure Knarf wouldn't be able to do that one.

For Saturday, August 6

This day may be notable for the breaking up of stagnant conditions, although it might be advisable to be alert to behind-the-scene activities. In the romantic or emotional life there is quite likely to be a surprising development.

Those whose birthday it is will be gratified by the breaking up of long stagnant conditions, but in this stratagem or intrigue may be necessary. In private life there is need for discretion.

A child born this day may be industrious, serious and hard-working, at the same time tactful and intriguing. It may be rather lax in its private life.

Cavanagh—Healey

Healey, Euclid Avenue and the late Richard healey, became the bride of Mr. Emmett Cavanagh, son of Mr. and Mrs. W. F. Cavanagh,, 604 Stewart street. The wedding was solemnized by Rt. Rev. Dean O'Sullivan who celebrated the Nuptial Mass, and Mrs. D. Campanaro sang during the progress of the Mass and at the signing of the register.

The bride was given in marriage by her brother Mr. Leo Healey of this city and wore a charming gown of white marquisette over taffeta, and full veil caught in halo style with tiny clusters of orange blossoms. Accessories were white and the bride carried an arm bouquet of Premier Supreme roses. The house was tastefully decorated for the occasion in pink and white with a profusion of flowers, and the bride assisted in receiving the guests by her mother. Later the young couple left on a brief honeymoon trip and the bride travelled in a two piece suit of crepe in rosewood shade and hat, purse and shoes were black. On their return they will reside at 328 Euclid avenue.

JUST BETWEEN US WOMEN

"Life is not made out of money, and friendship, and talents, and family influences, and patronage, and good chances, and good positions, and good health, and good nature; it is made out of faith, and virtue, and patience, and godliness, and brotherly kindness and love."—T. T. Munger.

Dear Friends:

You know, when you travel around, the thing one notices most is the appalling lack of religion in any form. The name of God is used so often, not in praise or prayer, but as an exclamation. Fear predominates, because so many are depending on the things of the earth, while starving their spiritual side altogether.

They clamour for a leader, at the same time ignoring the greatest Leader of all. They try unions, organizations with all the letters of the alphabet, but they will not organize or join with the greatest union ever known, God and man.

We shudder when we read of countries where religion has been stamped out by those in power for the time being, but we should shudder to think of how few homes in which the Bible is ever opened, where children get no groundwork in knowing of God at all.

"What shall it profit you if ye gain the whole world and lose your own soul?" What will you get out of it when you withhold the true knowledge of God from your children, and see them slowly but surely slip down to everlasting darkness?

And it is the parents, young or old who are to blame and who will be held accountable. You can teach them when they are young, you can make them go to church then and learn all they can about Him, but you can't get very far even with that if you yourself show them no example.

How can you expect them to respect a God whom you seem to despise, and the only time they hear you speak of Him is when you use His name as a swear word?

Even the remote peoples of the world have erected gods to themselves, not gods that lie down, but something they can look up to and worship, and I think our Father will take that worship to Himself seeing they know nothing of Him but the yearning inside of themselves.

We send our missionaries to far countries, but we need a few here. What are the children going to tie to when trouble comes along? Whom are they going to turn to when the spirit within them will not be still? There is a different atmosphere when you enter Canada, a feeling of peace, less unrest. Not that I would disparage America in any way, after they had all been so kind to us, but that unrest is very evident so that it affects you wherever you go.

You may say: "What did you do about it Roberta when you were there?" I did what I am doing now, I talked of God. I told them how very kind He had been to me, how He had helped me in so many ways, and believe me they drank it in like people who had gone long thirsty.

People are thirsty for the word of God. Not a long-faced religion where all the joy is taken out of living, but for a closer relationship with God and spiritual things. Your body may be satisfied with food, and comfortable with clothes.

Your bank book may give you a thrill, and you may look at your home with pride. Your job may give you many happy hours, and your friends be congenial, but if your spirit is not comfortable, if you have no communion with your Maker, you are dissatisfied, unsure, ill-at-ease, so what have you truly got from all this?

Get right with God. Choose Him as your leader. There is nothing you will have to give up that He will not replace with better, and above all, give your children knowledge of Him, else you will pay a bitter price one of these days. Your Friend,

ROBERTA.

Even Beach Suit With Outfits of Princess' Dolls

PARIS, August 5—(CP).—When Marianne and France, the two magnificent dolls being prepared in Paris for Princesses Elizabeth and Margaret Rose, cross the Channel to greet their new mistresses they will be following a custom of many centuries.

As long as there have been princesses such gifts have gone from one country to another. Dolls from Russia and France and Germany have found their way into Buckingham Palace and some of them may be seen today in the Royal Museum of London where are displayed the toys of Victoria, Alexandra, Mary and other royal children.

Nothing in the past, however, can approach the sumptuousness of the trousseaux in preparation for these dolls which are to be given by the "Children of France." No doubt one day after the princesses have enjoyed them, they too will find their way to the showcases where their trousseaux will constitute one of the most complete records of feminine apparel at any given period of history.

Inside the gowns, cloaks and hats are the names of some of the world's most celebrated dressmakers and milliners. Glove, shoemakers, jewelers, coiffeurs, even the silk and velvet manufacturers have been called upon to produce materials which will be unique in their originality and rich beauty.

Marianne is blonde and her hair has been arranged suitably for a young girl. It is lifted at the sides and falls in soft curls at the shoulders; France, a brunette, is the elegant and stately young woman with her hair dressed as it would be at the Opera or the smartest cocktail parties in the coming winter. She is at least six months ahead of the time with her curls piled high on top and little clusters of curls at the base of the neck.

Complete Wardrobe

No article of wearing apparel has been forgotten. Beach clothes of crisp-colored piques, beach cloth, linents and rough-woven peasant cloth in bright-colored and daringly-original designs; sun hats which fold up like an umbrella; whole costumes which include bathing suit, sun shorts, air mattress, beach gowns with all the rest of the regalia. Evening, afternoon, cocktail and morning clothes, sport things, a dozen complete sets of exquisitely handmade "undies" in pale shades, particularly the new silver blue which is this year's sensation.

Scarfs, gloves in silk, velvets, and the finest kid, suede and doeskin. They are embroidered, stitched, hand-painted and colored. Shoes which are a miracle of the shoemaker's art with microscopic tapering heels and dainty decoration; stockings like cobwebs, purses, compacts and saucy veils.

Next winter instead of "Wallis Blue" it will be "Marianne Blue" and "France Green."

Special roadsters are being made for them by one of the largest automobile companies in the country; luggage of unprecedented "chic" will carry these heaps of frills, fripperies and fantasis and when all is complete they will be displayed in Paris so that every child may see them before they go to England. The dolls will no doubt delight Princesses Elizabeth and Maragaret Rose but they will also show a future queen of England what French genius can do to clothe a woman in beauty.

Wife Preservers

Double slip your nice new pillows, brides. The under pillow slips may be of cheap material, but used under the good ones they will keep perspiration stains from the pillows. Wash the under-slips whenever they are soiled

His wife, formerly Emma Russell, died in 1925. He is survived by two sons, Edmund of Toronto and William of Peterborough; two daughters, Mrs. Frank Barrie, Peterborough, and Mr. Albert Delahaye, Peterborough, and one brother, John Armstrong, of Otonabee.

ROY WINDRIM

The funeral of the late Roy Windrim was held on Saturday, July 30, from his home just north of Omemee.

Mr. Windrim's tragic death, during the severe storm of the preceding Thursday morning, has removed from the community a successful young farmer, and a respected citizen who had interested himself in the life of the community. He was a member of the Omemee Board of Education, and of the Orange Order. He was also an official of St. Andrew's Presbyterian church. Left to mourn his loss are his wife (formerly Miss Beatrice Johnston of Lakefield); his son, Donald, aged ten; his mother, Mrs. L. Windrim of Lindsay; and two sisters, Mrs. Harold Dick of Emily and Mrs. Lawrence McGaughey of Lindsay.

The funeral was a large one, attended by neighbors and friends, some from a great distance. The service was conducted by Rev. Dr. Young of St. Andrew's church, assisted by Rev. Mr. McTavish of Trinity United church. The pall bearers were Messrs. H. Dick, L. McGaughey, H. Williamson, S. Pogue, J. Preston and M. Moncrief. Interment was made in Emily Presbyterian Cemetery.

Mention should be made of the profusion of beautiful floral tributes which completely surrounded and banked the casket.

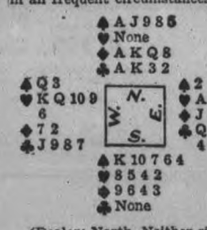
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER
By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

THE CARD LANGUAGE

CERTAIN BIDS in particular situations have come to possess definite meanings to practically all front-rank players. It is getting so that people from opposite ends of the country can do pretty well as partners without having to discuss artificial conventions before beginning the game. The reason for this is that both members of the pair have learned the most useful meaning to attach to each call in all frequent circumstances.



(Dealer: North. Neither side vulnerable.)

This hand was originally dealt during the Coal convention in Lethbridge, Alberts, with four of Canada's sturdy contract enthusiasts in action. They managed to reach six spades on the North-South cards, making seven by ruffing a couple of clubs, and then wondered if there was any sound way to bid the grand slam without using artificial conventions.

Here's the way they reached six: North 2-Spades, South 3-Spades, North 4-Diamonds, South 4-Spades, North 5-Clubs, East double, South and West pass, North 6-Spades, which South passed.

Interested to see just how players of varying grades would bid it, a New York club set up those cards in a duplicate game. At three tables where really fine players were engaged, the bidding went thus: North 2-Spades, South 2-No Trumps, North 3-Diamonds, South 4-Spades (a splendid distributional strength-shower after the 2 No Trumps denial of honors), North 5-Spades and South 6-Spades. It went just the same at the table where the best pair sat, except that after the 5-Spades South bid 6-Clubs on his void. This gave North just enough encouragement, so he bid 7-Spades, reasoning that South would have said 6-Spades instead of cueing Clubs if he had not been grand-slam minded because of the spade K.

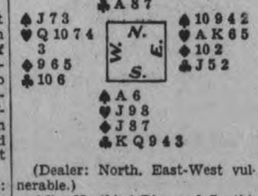
Tomorrow's Problem



(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

After North's 1-Diamond, South's 2-Clubs and North's 2-Spades what should South do?

Floods Threaten To Bar Japs From Hankow

SHANGHAI, Aug. 5 — (AP). — Yangtse river floods threatened today to block the Japanese advance upstream toward Hankow, the provisional Chinese capital.

Broken dikes 30 miles above Kiukiang were said by Chinese to have caused the inundation of large areas on the Yangtse's north bank and five towns the Japanese occupied this week after bitter fighting.

Chinese military sources believed the floods sufficient to force the Japanese to realign their offensive by making a wide sweep through Anhwei province and striking at Hankow from the north or northeast, instead of from the south or south-east. That would make them march through an extremely difficult mountainous region.

Another possibility was that the invaders might have to withdraw to Anking, 90 miles northeast of Kiukiang, in an attempt to retain their hold on vantage points pending the end of the Yangtse flood stage in early October. Kiukiang is 130 miles south-east of Hankow.

Early in June the Japanese were blocked by Yellow river floods just as they seemed ready to capture Chengchow, important railway junction 300 miles north of Hankow and, like Kiukiang, a "key" to Hankow.

The Yellow River floods continued spreading to-day, leaving a vast area still under water. Japanese troops were still stuck in the mud around Changchow.

Loyalists Hammer Rebel Mountain Line

HENDAYE, France, Aug. 5 (AP)— The Spanish government army stabbed at insurgent mountain defences west of Teruel today in an effort to roll up the extreme right flank of General Franco's long eastern front.

Dispatches from Barcelona said General Jose Miaja's veteran fighters captured Villar Del Cobo, a communications centre on the Guadalaviar river linking three columns fighting in the Albarracin Hills about 20 miles west of Teruel.

These reports, however, were disputed by the insurgents, who dismissed the government attacks as feeble and announced they were routed by cavalry.

On the south Catalonia, or Ebro river front, there was no lessening in the fighting which started 10 days ago, marking the start of a government offensive to check the insurgent drive to Valencia.

Left On Road To Die

BRANTFORD, Ont., Aug. 5. — (CP).—Left by the side of the road for some two hours after being struck down by a hit-and-run motorist, Matthias Grant, 73, of the village of Oakland, near here, was in serious condition in Brantford General Hospital to-day. Police were searching for the driver.

Grant left his house last evening to go to a nearby garage for some coal oil. Two hours later he was found clinging to a roadside guard-rail whither he had dragged himself after being knocked down by a motorist who sped away. It is feared he may have a fractured skull.

Father Divine Is Given 50-Room 'Heaven' For Self, 12 Aides, Pick Of 'Angels'

New York, Aug. 5 (AP).

FATHER DIVINE, styled "God" by his followers, had a private 50-room heaven of his own today.

To the astonishment of its former white owner, the negro cult messiah punched the doorbell of the commodious mansion on upper Madison Avenue at East 122nd Street, on the fringe of Harlem, and announced:

"I am the new occupant. Peace!"

The big house, equipped with its own private telephone system, was presented to Father Divine by the mysterious source which is always announced as "a group of his followers." The cult leader himself professes never to have money or need it.

"Father will provide," he says, to income-tax collectors. "Peace."

Last week, the same source presented him with a 500-acre country place at Krum Elbow, across the Hudson River from President Roosevelt's family estate at Hyde Park.

A white agent of Father Divine purchased the house recently from Dr. Elihu Katz, stomach specialist, whose first knowledge that the negro evangelist was the buyer came when Father Divine came to the front door.

"I was astounded," said Dr. Katz. "I showed him through from top to bottom and he kept saying, 'It's wonderful. Peace, I never saw anything like it.'"

The house, purchased for $24,000, will serve as Father Divine's personal retreat, along with his 12 secretaries and a few chosen "angels."

Warns Church

Roberto Farinacci, ABOVE, right-wing extremist of Italy's Fascists, fired the first gun in the battle which looms between the regime of Mussolini and the Roman Catholic church over racist theories when he declared in his newspaper that the problem was a political one over which the church should not attempt to exercise control. Pope Pius, in a pointed speech recently, attacked Italy's new policy of race purism. The breach may have far-reaching effect, threatening the concordat between church and state.

Last Of West's Hereditary Chiefs George Dreaver Dies At 85

LEASK, Sask., Aug. 5—(CP). — George Dreaver, 85-year-old Chief of the Mistawasis Cree Indian reserve and the last of the hereditary chieftains in the west, died yesterday on the reserve where he had spent the greater part of life. H was chief of the tribe for the last 55 years.

Chief Dreaver's grandfather, Chief Mistawasis, was chief of the Cree Indians who in 1876 signed the treaty at Fort Carlton by which a large portion of Cree territory in northern Saskatchewan was handed over to the British. The British in turn promised to care for the Indians "while the grass grew green and the rivers flowed towards the sea."

Chief Dreaver was born in 1853 at the Presbyterian mission at Prince Albert and his knowledge of English and Cree stood him in good stead as he often acted as interpreter between Indians and the government. His father was a white man, a factor, while his mother was the daughter of Chief Mistawasis.

From his early youth he was trained by Chief Mistawasis to take over leadership of the Crees but when Mistawasis died. Dreaver relinquished his claim to an older brave, taking over the chieftainship in 1883, two years before the Riel rebellion when he supported the government.

He had been chieftain a comparatively short time when the federal government ruled that all chieftains must be elected so Dreaver became the last of the hereditary chieftains.

Given Many Medals.

He received several medals from the government but he prized none more than that presented by Lieutenant-Governor Morris of the Northwest Territories to Mistawasis at the signing of the Carlton treaty.

At the time of the King George V. jubilee in 1935, Dreaver requested that the diamond jubilee of the signing of the Carlton treaty should be commemorated the following year and this resulted in the Carlton celebration of August 11 and 12, 1936, when Chief Dreaver played host to Lord Tweedsmuir, Governor-General of Canada.

The celebration attracted 10,000 white persons and more than 3,000 Indians, from every part of Saskatchewan and Alberta and from the Dakotas and Montana. Dreaver received into the Cree tribe as chieftains both Lord Tweedsmuir and Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

54 Knitting Workers Continue Strike

ST. CATHARINES, Ont., Aug. 4 (CP) — No settlement has been reached in the strike of 54 employees in the new fashion department of the Monarch Knitting Company. A number of workers were laid off yesterday and more will be sent home gradually as no materials will be coming through from the idle department.

The company is making no further offer to the strikers, according to J. A. Burns, president of the company in Dunnville. Strikers have the opportunity to return to work on the same basis as when they left.

In the meantime strikers are sitting peacefully at the mill. O. C. Jennette, of the Ontario Department of Labor, was in St. Catharines and Dunnville yesterday to investigate differences.

STRIKERS RETURN TO WORK.

KITCHENER.—After more than a week of idleness and picketing, 10 striking employees of the Ontario Floral Company returned to work here to-day. The men said they have gained the restitution of a former wage scale.

Lad Making Recovery After Mercy Flight

TORONTO. Aug. 5—(CP).—An Ohio youth brought by air from a boys' camp north of Haliburton in Northern Ontario for an emergency appendicitis operation, was reported resting comfortably to-day at Toronto General Hospital Private Patients' Pavilion. When he arrived in Toronto early Tuesday evening, arrangements had been made by telephone and he was operated on immediately.

Robert Blair, 14 of Sharker Heights, Cleveland, O., was flown 200 miles to Toronto, accompanied by a nursing companion, Mrs. Neustetter, by Pilot Tommy Higgins, of Air Trails, Limited, of Huntsville. The youth was bundled immediately into a taxi and rushed to hospital.

A $15,000 seaplane was destroyed by fire late Tuesday while it was being moved away from Toronto air harbor dock to make room there for Pilot Higgins to bring down his patient. The seaplane caught fire as it backfired while being taxied from the dock out into the bay.

Russians Out To Take Changkufeng

Heavy Bombardment Is Renewed On 4-Mile Front

KOGI, Korea (Near the Siberian Frontier) (By Courier to Yuki), Aug. 6 (AP).—Russian troops resumed a steady bombardment of Japanese positions around the disputed Changkufen Hill at dawn to-day and made large-scale preparations apparently to retake that 400-foot frontier hummock.

One Russian battalion moved up to the southeast end of Long Lake, behind Changkufeng, where Soviet-Japanese fighting broke out July 31, while two battalions with 40 tanks nearly had reached the northeast end.

Japanese here emphasized that "no matter how many times the Soviets try to retake Changkufeng (a narrow strip of land which Japanese-supported Manchoukuo and Soviet Russia both claim), our higher positions make flanking us impossible, but if they attempt again there is always the possibility of making the present minor and local incident into a much bigger one."

Changkufeng Hill, once green but now pitted by shell holes, lies in the territory, only a few miles wide, that extends southeast between Siberia and Korea along the right bank of the Tumen River. Kogi is a mountain village overlooking Changkufeng.

Japanese said the Russians were arrayed along a four-mile front.

Russian Guns Silenced?

TOKYO, Aug. 6 (AP).—The Japanese army announced today that general fighting broke out in the vicinity of Changkufeng on the Siberian frontier about 8.30 a.m.

Soviet infantry was said to have retreated under an artillery bombardment.

At 10.30 a.m., a communique said, Japanese and Russian batteries engaged in an artillery duel which ended by the Soviet guns being silenced. A Russian bomber was reported shot down by anti-aircraft guns during the raid on Kogi and Shikai, Korea.

The army said the Japanese had destroyed four Russian tanks and four heavy guns.

The foreign office report of the Litvinoff-Shigemitsu conversations follows:

Shigemitsu: "The Japanese government view the present border incident as a local question and it it their policy to exert every effort for a peaceful rational solution as such. The Japanese government propose immediate cessation of hostilities on the spot and opening diplomatic negotiations for a settlement."

The Russian Stand.

Litvinoff: "If the Japanese stop shelling and other military operations and withdraw completely from Soviet territory, the Soviet authorities will have no reason for continuing their military activities; they will not then oppose the proposals of the Japanese Government. A guarantee by Japan of the inviolability of the border as was established by the Hunchun Treaty (signed by Russia and China June 26, 1886, and establishing Changkufeng as a part of Siberia) and the map attached thereto is the first necessary step."

2,000 Lieutenants, Captains Promoted In Britain

Hore-Belisha's Modern Army Features Send Recruiting Lists Soaring

LONDON, Aug. 6 (AP).—The War Office today announced promotion of more than 2,000 army officers as a result of War Minister Leslie Hore-Belisha's program to make army life more attractive. More than one-third of the army's captains and lieutenants were stepped up in consequence of the War Minister's abolition of the system in use since 1871, whereby promotions were dependent upon vacancies.

The promotions, effective August 1, were listed in a special 20-page supplement of the London Gazette—the largest ever issued.

This was considered a major feature of the War Minister's program, announced July 28. The program also provides for lower retirement ages and higher retirement pay, creation of officers from the ranks and removal of wealth and social position as requirements for admission into Sandhurst.

Efforts have been underway for some time to make the army more attractive for the enlisted man.

His pay has been increased. He is eligible for a pension. If he wishe, he may learn a trade. His barracks are being modernized, giving him hot water to shave, a more comfortable bed, a wardrobe for his clothes and space for his radio set.

His equipment is lighter and his clothes better fitting and more comfortable. He does not even have to make long marches any more. He generally rides in a truck.

Parity the Goal.

All this is a part of Great Britain's drive to place the nation on a parity with any country likely to attack her.

Mr. Hore-Belisha started his program last year by placing younger men in high army posts. He named Viscount Gort as chief of the general staff to succeed Sir Cyril Deverell and placed other young officers in key positions.

Canada Calling Tenders On Searchlights

OTTAWA, Aug. 6.—(CP.)— Defense headquarters are continuing their quest for searchlights wherewith to equip various coastal bases. Some months ago the department adopted the unusual proceeding of publicity advertising for such equipment, and, it is understood, a number of submissions have been made.

This article of military armament has not hitherto been manufactured in Canada, and could have been purchased in the United States. Pursuant to the policy, however, of endeavoring to have all requirements of the department produced in this country, Canadian manufacturers were afforded the opportunity of showing what they could do.

Considerations is stil lbeing given

Consideration is still being given tenders already received. It is likely that one or more contracts may be let in the near future.

The searchlights will be installed on the Pacific and Atlantic coasts chiefly as an anti-aircraft measure. The number to be so emplaced, however, has not yet been determined.

Three-Year Program.

Vancouver, Aug. 5.—(CP.)—Hon. Ian Mackenzie, Minister of National Defense, said here Friday an Order-in-Council had gone through in Ottawa for a searchlight program on the Pacific coast to extend over three years.

This program, involving $2,000,000, is in addition to the $5,00,000 which will be spent on Pacific coast defenses this year.

Installation of the lights will probably start this year.

"It is all part of a modern defense system ensuring co-ordination between air, ministry and naval forces," Mr. Mackenzie said.

Last Minute News Flashes

KOGI, Korea (near the Siberian border, by Courier to Yuki).—Reliable eye-witnesses said today 24 Soviet Russian planes raided Korean territory at 2.30 p.m. (1.30 a.m. EDT) and bombed the Tumen-Rashin railway 15 miles northwest of Yuki.

BELLEVILLE.—Hugh Jones of Rawdon township, rescued from Crowe River yesterday afternoon where he had been trapped to the armpits in soft ooze for the past six days and nights, was still in serious condition today in the Belleville General Hospital.

The victims were officer James Ray Hinkley, 52, and Richard Sandway, 58, whose wife Hinkley was escorting to her home. Relief Deficit May Reach $30,000 For 1938

Recipients of relief will be require to work for it, according to a to a recommendation of the relief committee of the city council last night.

The proposed return to a former policy will not apply to men who are physically unfit, and the regulation will not become effective without the assent of the council. Cutting weeds on boulevards and elsewhere, improvement of the parks and other work that would be a benefit to the city were mentioned as some of the jobs that could be made available. It was stated that in Ottawa every person getting relief and able to work is required to give his labor in return for the maintenance he receives from the city.

A. G. Metheral, relief officer, was instructed to discontinue relief that is enabling a few husbands and wives to live apart. Three cases were mentioned last night, one of them a divided family of which the husband is farming in Northumberland, and the wife is on Peterborough's relief list. The committee agreed that the husband should be able to maintain his wife, and that the city should not encourage her in living separate from him by the assistance she receives from the relief department, Mr. Metheral was told to use his own judgment in cases of domestic divisions.

Only $8,791.52 Left

Of the $47 500 appropriated by the council for relief demands for the twelve months of this year only $8,791.52 remained at the end of July. The total disbursement for seven months was $82,177.19 of which the government refunded $43,468.71, leaving $38,708.48 to be paid out of the city treasury; and the city's contribution of $38,708.48 subtracted from the appropriation for the year, $47,500, left a balance of $8,791.52, most of which will be spent this month.

The bill for July was $7,948.51 as compared with $4,745.99. The committee ruefully recalled the dwindling of the relief roll last summer, followed by a relapse shown in an increase in the number of persons receiving relief from 883 in July, 1937, to 1,541 last month. The number of families on the list was up from 209 to 363, and the only decline was in the per capita payment from $5.37 to $5.15.

The council's only hope of escaping a deficit in the city's relief account at the end of the year that may come close to $30,000, averaging $7,000 a month from the end of August to the end of December, is the possibility of receiving an additional grant from the provincial government. What the council is likely to do is to send a deputation to Toronto to interview the Hon. Eric Cross Minister of Public Welfare, although nothing definite toward that end has yet been discussed.

British Envoy Wounded In Rebel Raid

Buried In Wreckage As Alicante Consulate Bombed

ALICANTE, Spain, Aug. 6 (CP-Havas).—Gabriel Callejon, British Consular agent here, was seriously wounded today during a raid on this government seaport by six insurgent bombing planes.

Callejon, representative here of the British consul at Valencia, was taken to the provincial hospital.

ALICANTE, Spain, Aug. 6 (CP-Havas).—The British consul here was seriously wounded today during an insurgent raid on this government seaport by six insurgent planes.

The consul was buried under a mass of wreckage when a 500-pound bomb fell on the consulate building. He was pulled out by rescue-workers, gravely injured.

The consulate building suffered heavy damage, the bomb leaving a hole six feet deep.

Seventy bombs in all were dropped on Alicante during the raid.

One dead and 12 wounded had been pulled from the debris of ruined buildings by early afternoon.

Bumper Harvest 10 Days Off Cheers Prairies

WINNIPEG, Aug. 6.—(CP)—With general harvesting operations in the West only 10 days away, prairie wheat fields, expected to produce some 300,000,000 bushels, today beckoned armies of workers. Government employment services are enrolling men and railway officials are grooming equipment for the grain rush to the lakehead.

Crop conditions in the west have declined during the past two weeks due to drought, rust, grasshoppers and hail in various areas, but private estimates indicate the 10-year average yield of 311,000,000 bushels is likely to be equalled.

At least 21,000 men will harvest the best Western Canada wheat crop since 1932. The two main railway lines will require a large number of engineers, firemen and other workers to handle the heaviest movement in six years.

Railway officials could not estimate the number of additional men to be summoned, but said it would be large. In Calgary Canadian Pacific Railway division alone it was figured 640 new hands would be needed, including trainmen, enginemen, yard workers, telegraphers, roundhouse and repair men. Men on seniority lists who have been without work for some time will get the call.

Low rail rates will be granted men bound for the harvest lands. Rates on both railroads are 1½ cents a mile to points within each prairie province. But prospective workers must first have certificates from government employment offices attesting they are residents of the province where they seek jobs.

Missing Rawdon Man Found Only Head Showing After 6 Days In Crowe Bog

Moan In Swamp 5 Miles South Of Marmora Leads Police Posse To Spot Where Jones, Speechless, Hangs To Log

MARMORA, Aug. 6.—For six days and nights, Hugh Jones, 44, of Rawden Township, fought for his life in a bog which trapped him last Saturday, and when rescuers stumbled on him Friday only his head was visible above the mud and water near Crowe River, five miles south of Marmora.

Stuck in the bog, unable to move, he kept from slipping to his death by hooking his arm over a log that was submerged two inches when he was found. Day merged into night and into day again for what seemed an eternity to the weakening man. He was unable to speak when rescued by Constable Arthur Dymond of Madoc and Chief Constable Percy Gray of Marmora. In Belleville General Hospital attendants said last night he had an even chance of recovery.

Posse Quits Search.

A posse organized Saturday when he disappeared from the home of his niece, Mrs. William Prest, gave up the search Thursday night. But Constable Dymond, Chief Gray and Charles Jones, brother of the missing man, continued to comb the area for him. While passing a point on the river they heard a moan. Rowing and dragging the boat over the bank they came to a spot where a hat seemingly rested on the water. Constable Dymond forged ahead and found Jones up to his shoulders in the muddy bog.

Seeing the help he had looked for in vain approaching, the trapped man became so excited that he almost lost his grip on the log. In an effort to reach him before he sank, Dymond found himself bogged and only after a desperate struggle was he able to free himself and reach Jones.

Too weak even to speak, the exhausted man, emaciated and only semi-conscious, showed his gratitude with his eyes as he was pulled from his prison and taken to safety. When his brother reached him he recognized him and tried to raise his arms.

Seen by Boy.

On Sunday a boy was supposed to have seen a man in the bog, but thought that he was the Game Warden sitting in a boat. At that time his shoulders would be well above the water and through the rushes it might be thought that he was sitting in a boat. This was not reported to police.

The posse searched the bog on Wednesday, but was unsuccessful. It is thought that during the heavy rainstorm that swept the district the men passed within a few yards of the missing man, but he was too weak to shout to them, or the rain had deadened the sound of his voice.

Dr. G. S. Stobie, attending physician, stated last evening that his condition is serious, but that he had a good chance to live. He is suffering from loss of blood and lack of nourishment.

His hands and legs are badly lacerated by his long stay in the water.

Constable Dymond stated last night that Jones was probably returning home along the river bank Saturday night and stumbled into the bog.

Log Save Him.

"In the dark he probably stumbled into the mudhole and was unable to struggle out. Fortunately, there was a log there for him to grasp," said the constable, who led the search party for five days and continued on Friday, although the remainder of the posse gave up the search.

He is a native of Marmora township, but in the past few years has resided with his aged father, Robert Jones in Marmora village and latterly at the Prest home in Rawdon Township.

Russia Charges Nazis Behind Siberian Case

MOSCOW, Aug. 6 (AP).—Germany was linked with Japan in the Siberian-Manchoukuo border warfare today in an outspoken Russian editorial.

"Gudok," mouthpiece of the Russian railways, declared "the moment chosen for the Japanese attack on Changkufeng confirms the Soviet thesis of indivisibility of peace; one can assume this attack was discussed first through the secret channels of the Tokyo-Berlin axis."

While Soviet circles believed foreign commissar Maxim Litvinoff by diplomatic negotiations had enabled Japan to withdraw gracefully from the border zone where Soviet-Japanese skirmishes and fighting have continued since July 11, Russia kept her eyes on her western border, too.

Developments in Czechoslovakia, where the Sudeten German minority is asking autonomy, were reported in greater detail in Soviet newspapers than developments of the Changfukeng battlefront, a narrow strip of hilly land which both Russia and Manchoukuo claim.

Simultaneous watchfulness in all directions were reflected also in all directions and reflected also in countless patriotic speeches, resolutions and editorials.

Japan seldom is attacked alone in the wrathful comments on the Changfukeng incident.

Germany and Italy as other members of the "Fascist bloc of aggressors" received their share of uncomplimentary epithets.

150 Hunt Boy In Bush Wolf Haunted

All Work Is Halted As Gangs Tramp Wilds Day and Night

STURGEON FALLS, Ont., Aug. 6 (CP).—More searchers were recruited today as a hunt for five-year-old Fernand Tessier, missing since Wednesday when he was out berry-picking, gained impetus. Hope faded, however, of finding the French-Canadian lad alive.

More than 150 men combed the thick underbrush of desolate Bastedo Township, 13 miles north of here, is a bushy wilderness thronged with bears and wolves. Fernand was lost Wednesday, while berry-picking with his father, Valmarre Tessier, about a mile north of their farmstead.

Operations were suspended at the Field Lumber Company at the nearby lumbering settlement of Field, 11 miles north of here, and every employee was enlisted in the hunt. The mill was closed partly yesterday when 50 employees engaged in the search.

At no time since the lad was reported missing has the search been suspended. All night long the countryside has been combed by men carrying lanterns. Mill hands from Field were equipped with lanterns by business firms there.

Rocks Hide Trail.

Field has no commercial telephone connections, but over the bushland telephone wire of the Ontario Forestry Branch, co-operating in the search, came word to Sturgeon Falls that no sign of the youth had been found. Searchers were unable to even pick up the lad's trail as much of the countryside is rocky.

Twelve citizens from Sturgeon Falls left here this morning voluntarily to take up the search. Ontario Department of Highways road construction gangs have joined in. Constable N. Chartrand of the North Bay detachment of the Provincial Police also was sent to aid.

Work on a highway construction project at nearby Desaulniers, halted Thursday by a brief strike, was suspended indefinitely today as crewmen dropped picks, shovels and joined other searchers.

No Halting of Search

"We're going to keep on hunting until we find something, even if it takes a week," said an official of the Forestry Branch.

What has baffled searchers is the fact the area in which the lad vanished is not extensive. The Ferguson highway is 12 miles east of the Tessier homestead. Pine lake is four miles north and Tomiko lake five miles south. It was considered that if the child had walked west he would have been seen by some of the farmers on the fringe of Bastdo township.

In the past three days the posse has searched thoroughly over 2? squares miles.

Father Still Hopes

Red-eyed and weary after two nights and a day with only short snatches of sleep, deputy fire ranger Charles Jackson still headed the hunt today. The Tessier home has been made headquarters by the searchers, numbering only about 28 when Fernand first was reported missing at noon Wednesday. The men report off duty for short naps at the Tessier farm and then take up the search again.

The boy's father, almost overcome with grief during the past two days, still has clung to hope. He has been one of the most persistent of the searchers.

King Starts His 20th Year As Liberal Chief Sunday

OTTAWA, Aug. 6 (CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King will complete his 19th year as leader of the Liberal party tomorrow, a record believed unequalled by any other living political leader.

On August 7, 1919, a national Liberal convention in Ottawa selected Mr. King, then 44 years old, as the successor of Sir Wilfrid Laurier who had headed the party for more than 25 years. In his 19 years of leadership Mr. King has been prime minister for 11 years and leader of the opposition for the other eight. He is now 63 years old.

Other political parties both in Canada and other countries have seen many leaders come and go during this period. No other present leader in the world, it is believed, has headed the same party for such a length of time. Premier J. B. Hertzog of South Africa is Mr. King's only rival in point but the party he heads has been changed by coalition.

In the United Kingdom Rt. Hon. David Lloyd George is still leader of a wing of the Liberal party which he headed when Mr. King was made leader but the British Liberals have split and Mr. Lloyd George has but a few followers in the House of Commons. He is no longer the leader of a national party in the wide sense.

As he enters his 20th year in the leadership Mr. King faces a new opponent, Hon. R. J. Manion, recently chosen leader of the Conservative party. Dr. Manion will be the sixth Conservative chief to oppose Mr. King either as official or acting leader.

Both figures were about 100 tons behind the Lindbergh record. Weight of the paper is determined after it is swept up.

34,000 Ottawa River H.P. To Feed Quebec Mines

QUEBEC, Aug. 6 (CP) — Plans went forward today for development of a 34,000 horsepower project on the Ottawa River to feed electricity into Quebec province's northwestern mining districts.

Announcement of the plan to produce power in Temiskaming county was made yesterday by Premier Maurice Duplessis who said "expert opinion" had disclosed a potential 120,000 horsepower was available in that district with additional development.

The premier made his announcement at the conclusion of a two-day meeting with S. A. Beauline, chairman of the Provincial Electricity Syndicate, James Y. Murdock, director of Noranda Mines, Limited, H. J. Gaby, an electricity expert and consulting engineer, and A. B. Normandin, chief of the electricity service of the lands and forests department.

"After discussing the question yesterday and again today," Premier Duplessis told reporters at a press conference, "we have made so much progress that the government very soon will be in a position to start work on the new water power plan."

Half the projected output already has been contracted for, he added, and "probably by next week, after the formalities have been completed, work will be ready to start."

"Most of all," he said, "the government wants industrial development to result from the production of power. And from the project in Temiskaming we'll have power enough to meet the needs of possible expansion for several years."

Winnipeg Sewer Rats Tangle Police By Cutting Signals

Winnipeg, Aug. 6 (CP)

45 Crews Wait Strike Call On Great Lakes

MONTREAL, Aug. 6—(CP).—An estimated 1,000 sailors on 45 lake vessels stood by to-day awaiting the nontime "zero-hour" set last night by Canadian Seamen's Union officials for a general strike on all ships of the Canada Steamship Lines.

Announcing the move, union heads said they had called the walk-out because of the company's failure to negotiate with them a written labor agreement. They said the union had been operating for some time under a verbal agreement with Canada Steamships, but attempt to secure a written understanding had been unavailing.

An Offer to Parley.

R. R. Enderby, managing director of the company, said an offer had been made for resumption of negotiations shortly before the strike was announced.

Warning his company would not reopen negotiations if the men were on strike Monday, Enderby estimated the walk-out would affect 40 C.S.L. ships, but he believed five passenger ships now operating would not be affected.

Issued by President J. A. (Pat) Sullivan, a union statement said the strike had been "forced on the union by failure on the part of the company to meet the C.S.U. representatives for the purpose of negotiations for a written agreement."

"This agreement was submitted to the C.S.L. on July 2," the statement said, "and intermittent discussions carried on since then have failed to reach a successful conclusion, notwithstanding the consistent efforts on the part of the union leadership to maintain amicable relations with the company.

MORE ABOUT—

2,000 Promoted

"Join the modern army" is the invitation on recruiting posters plastered over the country. The army muster on Jan. 1, 1938, was 448,625 — including the territorial army—but it will be increased sharply this year. An intensive drive for recruits has been under way for months.

In the past few years the whole character of Britain's land fighting forces has been changed. There is practically no more mounted cavalry and there would be still less if Scotland had not raised such a rumpus the war office dared not mechanize the Scots Greys. Practically all artillery unith are mechanized. Infantry battalions either are machine gun units or rifle units, the latter being armed with service rifles, anti-tank rifles, mortars and light machine guns adaptable for anti-aircraft fire. The number of tank battalions has been increased 50 per cent in the last two years. Everywhere there is a stress of coastal defence and anti-aircraft defence in anticipation of a shock attack by air.

Great Britain will spend £106,500,000 ($532,500,000) on the army this year compared with £82,174,000 ($410,870,000) last year and £36,137,000 ($180,685,000) in 1931. The increase reflects Britain's re-armament program which embraces the army, navy and air force, designed to place this country on a military parity with any nation likely to attack her.

500,000 Ready For Field.

Great Britain could place an army of 500,000 men in the field tomorrow if an emergency arose. This is under a voluntary enlistment scheme but there are persistent rumors the Chamberlain government has a conscription bill ready to pass through the House of hostilities break out.

But you cannot determine the strength of a modern army simply by counting heads—that depends on its mobility and what technically is called its fire-power. Judged in that light, Britains army rapidly is reaching a high degree of efficiency with new, devastating weapons and a high ratio of mobility. For instance, two new anti-aircraft guns, a 3-inch and a 4.5 have been developed and, with mechanized mountings, can be rushed across country to repel sky raiders. A new machine gun, the Bren, has been adopted. New designs have been made for tanks and armored cars. Powerful searchlights have been mounted in advantageous spots. Coastal guns have been increased. The anti-aircraft defences have been increased and reorganized, even including a baloon barrage skirting London with lethal cables stretching between the bags, ready to destroy any plane attempting to get through to dump its load of bombs on the city.

'Join the Modern Army' is the invitation on recruiting posters plastered all over the country. The army muster on January 1, 1938 was 448,625 but it will be increased decidedly during the year. That figure includes the territorial army, corresponding to the militia in Canada which has charge of all coasteal and anti-aircraft defence. At present it has two anti-aircraft divisions, comprising 43,000 men but it is planned to increase them to five divisions with a strength of 100,000 under a corps commander this year.

An intensive drive for recruits was started at the outset of the army expansion program, both for the regulars and territorials. Posters, reminiscent of war days, were used. Depots were established, recruiting trucks toured the country. But above all was a determination to make the army attractive as a career. That was the basic reason for pay and allowance increases, better housing, better food and the option of vocational training to equip a man after his term of enlistment. For instance, thousands of pounds are being spent modernizing barracks, some of them dating back to the Crimean War and a few to the days of Waterloo. That is only one feature of a policy to humanize army life, making it attractive for its with educational and cul- backgrounds.

Norwood Farmer Has Barn Burned

(Examiner Correspondence.)

NORWOOD, Aug. 6.—Late Thursday night fire destroyed the barn on the farm of William Buck situated about one mile east of Norwood.

The fire was first noticed by Donald Bedore, who lives on the Belmont Road and, along with Constable Harry Baker, aroused Mr. Buck. By that time the building was partially destroyed and the men were unable to rescue the team of horses and a young bull which were in the stable. A number of neighbors soon arrived on the scene and with their help Mr. Buck was able to save the pigs.

It is believed that spontaneous combustion was the cause of the fire. Mr. Buck's loss is partially covered by insurance.

Jap Warships Within 110 Miles Of Hankow

SHANGHAI, Aug. 6 (AP).—Japanese warships fought their way up the Yangtse river today to within 110 miles of Hankow, China's provisional capital.

They are reported shelling Chinese position on both banks near Lungping, 10 miles downstream from the boom at Wusueh, while Chinese shore batteries replied vigorously.

The Chinese expected the bombardment to be followed by air attacks as a prelude to an attempted landing for an attack on Kwangtsi, 25 miles north of Wusueh. Such a move would aid the advance of Japanese troops, which Chinese said were halted by the Yangtse flood.

Chinese advices said the floods, caused by broken dikes above Kiukiang, were growing worse, with dike breaches widening and the river inundating huge areas on both banks.

Charge Campbell Killed Confederate

OTTAWA, Aug. 6—(CP). — Oscar Campbell of Toronto, held here on a charge of robbing a bank at Richmond, Ont., on July 19, will be taken to Outremont, Que., where he faces a charge of murder today or Sunday, it was learned last night.

Mrs. Adella Rogers and Harold Priaulx both of Toronto are in custody and bail of $500 each has been set for them. Mary Donnelly, also of Toronto, is held on a charge of conspiracy in the robbery.

Police are searching for two other men believed to have taken part in the crime.

Selling Spurt Crashes Wheat

WINNIPEG, Aug. 6. — (CP) — Feature world grain trade this week was the Dominion - Government minimum wheat price announcement which pulled world wheat futures out of month-long lethargic spell. First reaction was a selling outburst crashing Winnipeg futures to near four-year low levels and Chicago to five-year lows.

Nervous longs, interpreting the 80 - cents - a - bushel annoncement bearishly, and in fear of stiff export competition for Canada's wheat during the crop year, knocked futures off 3-2⅜ cents Friday. Even good export buying, estimated at 300,000 bushels, and other overseas support failed to outweigh stop-loss liquidation.

The week's declines at the close yesterday were 3⅜-2½c. October at 73⅞, November 74, December 72⅞—73 and May 75⅛ cents. Premiums for top grades of cash wheat fell as much as six cents, putting No. 1 northern at 83⅞ and No. 2 at 80⅞ cents.

Predominating the trade today was speculation on the amount of Western Canada's current crop might be handled through the Canadian wheat board, which is the government's agent in guaranteeing farmers 80-cents-a-bushel for No. 1 northern delivered to Fort William or Pacific coast terminals.

Arabs Fire Jewish Homes In Haifa

Terrorism against the Jews in Palestine is particularly violent in Haifa, which is farthest in the territory in which Arabs predominate. After Jews had evacuated their homes in a suburb of Haifa, the structures were set afire by the more irresponsible Arab youths, while a huge crowd stood by to watch. This is another indication of the crisis which now exists between Jew and Arab in British controlled Palestine.

Toronto Inspector Named York Chief

TORONTO, Aug. 6.—Inspector Robert Alexander of the Toronto Police Force yesterday was appointed Chief of Police of York Township. The position was left vacant following the dismissal of Chief John Faulds, who has been ill for several months.

Appointment of a Police Chief from a force other than those embodied in York Township brought heated protests from several members of the Township Council. It was reported that nearly twenty applications for the position had been filed before the decision was made. The Councillors were of the opinion the new Chief should be appointed from the ranks of the police force in the township.

Inspector Robert Alexander, who has been on the Toronto Police Force since 1912, will take over his new duties Sept. 1. Until then, Acting-Chief Gray will continue in the position.

Thistledown Golf Club Is Burned

WESTON, Ont., Aug. 6 (CP) — The Thistledown Golf and Country Club clubhouse was destroyed early today by fire at an estimated loss of $35,000. Only a minor part of equipment belonging to members was saved from the building.

It was not immediately known what had caused the fire. An adjoining caddy house was also destroyed.

Bert Beakin, owner and manager of the club, was unable to state where or how the fire had started. He said nearly 300 members had lost equipment in the fire, first noticed by a greensman.

The greensman had to travel a mile to the nearest place where he could turn in a fire alarm. Firemen had to lay 1,200 feet of hose from the Humber River to fight the blaze.

A 19-year-old boy named Curtis suffered slight head cuts when he fell while saving some furniture from the clubhouse.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, August 6 — (CP), — Winnipeg wheat futures dipped sharply yesterday after a firm opening when brokers interpreted the Canadian Wheat Board's 80-cent-a-bushel price as bearish. Final quotations were 3 to 2¾ cents lower, October 73⅞c, November 74c. December, 72⅞ to 73c, and May 75½c.

Despite a good export business, estimated up to 350,000 bushels, nervous speculative selling by discouraged longs drove prices down after they had climbed a cent at the start.

Brokers, it was said, looked upon the Dominion Government announcement last night as indicating stiff competitive export business in the next few months. As Canada's export business would remain on a competitive basis, Chicago wheat futures also dipped a cent or more.

The tree, which has two main stems each an inch and a half thick, bore fruit this year. It is thought a bird dropped a cherry seed into half-decayed wood at the top of the post, and that the stone sprouted.

WABASH, Ind. Aug. 6.—(AP). — A mysterious false alarm forced firemen here to begin a methodic check of the town's 26 fire alarm boxes. They found the trouble—in the 25th box. Ants had crowled up through the ground pipe and packed three inches of damp sawdust into it causing a short circuit that sounded the alarm.

Missing Masterpiece May Be Found In States Scotland Yard Believes

"Lady Clarges", one of the Stolen Paintings, Since Recovered.

By HOWARD BERRY
Central Press Canadian Correspondent.

LONDON, Aug. 6—A possibility was seen today that the three missing masterpieces which figured in one of the most daring art robberies in English history may turn up in America.

Although two of the five pictures, which were stolen in April from Chilham castle, near Canterbury, Kent, the home of Sir Edmund Davis, an eminent English art collector and director of many mining companies, have been recovered, Scotland Yard's famed detectives were baffled as to the identity of the thieves and the whereabouts of the other pictures.

The five paintings, valued at some $250,000, were "Lady Clarges," by Gainsborough; "William Pitt," by Gainsborough; "Saskia at Her Mirror," a Rembrandt; "Man with White Dog," by Reynolds, and a Van Dyck, "The Earl of Suffolk."

Art Dealer Arrested.

The two Gainsboroughs were recovered when George Owen, described as an art dealer, was arrested and committed for trial at Ashford, Kent, on a charge of receiving in connection with the theft at Chilham castle.

Owen, whose arrest followed the offer of a reward of $40,000 for the recovery of the paintings by Messrs. Tyler and Company, London, assessors, pleaded not guilty. He was further charged with being concerned with others—not in custody—of breaking into Chilham castle, and was remanded without bail while further inquiries are being carried out.

Evidence given when Owen was brought up for trial revealed that he informed a representative of the assessors that he came indirectly from the persons who held the two paintings and that he could return them for $15,000.

Owen left the two paintings for examination with the assessors, who in the meantime had informed the police, and he was arrested when he came to collect the money.

In spite of this initial success, however, intensive investigation and inquiries by Scotland Yard detectives in London, all parts of the country and on the continent have yielded no further results to date.

With hardly any clues to go on the British detectives have rounded up and questioned every known art thief and suspect in the country. Every possible art collector has been applied to by the detectives for advice and assistance.

The art experts agree on the theory that America is the most likely market for the disposal of the paintings by the thieves, and the British sleuths, whose latest information leads them to believe that about six me were involved in the robbery, and that the paintings were probably smuggled out of the country by airplane to either France or Belgium, are swinging around to that opinion.

Nevertheless, both Scotland Yard and the British art experts opine that even if the three masterpieces have arrived or eventually arrive in America, the thieves will have great difficulty in disposing of them. They point out that the pictures could only be "placed" through hidden channels at a fraction of their real value.

British art connoisseurs brand the theft of such well-known masterpieces, easily identifiable by countless photographs, as an "idiotic" and profitless business. Similar cases have occurred in the past and the thief or thieves, unable to find a market for the stolen pictures, have had to return them anonymously after having them in their possession for many years.

Practically the only possibility art thieves have of making a good profit on such masterpisces, it was pointed out by experts here, is if they are able to find an art crank who would be willing to pay a fabulous price for the treasures so that he alone could gaze at them.

As one British art dealer said: "Perhaps, somewhere, there sits an old multi-millionaire with so great a passion for art treasures that he would be willing to pay a king's ransom for such pictures as those which were stolen.

"He will lock them away from the world and enjoy them alone until the end of his days."

Fasted 55 Days

For 55 days—almost eight weeks—43-year-old Mrs. Mae Zimmerman, of Los Angeles, had been fasting when this picture was taken, and she gave no indication of weakness or a desire to end her fast. She limited herself to four glasses of water daily in the belief that the diet would cure her arthritis and she says she will not alter her schedule until the disease is cured. She has dropped from a weight of 134 pounds to 104 pounds during the interval.

Cathedral Musings

We spoke last week of man's spiritual journey being a progress through infinite duration towards infinte perfection. It is also a progress of return from differentiation to unity, the completion of the circle. There are though, two orders of this progression. First, there is the slow, at times almost imperceptible, evolution of humanity as a whole. Then there is the comparatively rapid of those who have come to the stage where they deliberately enter upon the Way, seeking thereby to so hasten their own evolution that they may the sooner be able to help their brethren. What is this way, of which the Master and Great Teachers have spoken? It is really, that path of inner growth which brings us to the conscious realization of the Eternal Spirit of God which is within us, so that we lose our sense of separateness and enter into the self-conscious unity with the Great Whole. To put it in another way, in the ancient temples there was the outer court, the inner court and the inner veiled chamber, the Holy of Holies, where dwelt God. So also in man, with his outer self, his inner or psychic self and in the innermost depths, the Divine spark of the word, veiled from his consciousness by the illusion of self. Separate self cannot exist in the Infinity of God, for the Infinite within us cannot, it is obvious, be divided in Itself in any way. Hence, in the consummation of man, the veil of the Temple is rent in twain, for the outer man being crucified we enter the Holy of Holies. The way, then, is the path of progression towards spiritual consciousness, of becoming other to what we now are. It is the shifting of our centre from the animal and psychic to the psychic and Divine, so that we are no longer brute plus man, but man plus God. In Biblical terms, we died to Adam and live in Christ. The Way is infinitely long, infinitely shot and he who finds it becomes in himself the way, just as in merging himself with the Truth and the Eternal Life he becomes one with that Truth and Life. While we walk in darkness we need faith for our darkness cannot comprehend the Light, but when we walk in the Light we become identified with that Light. We have reached the third step, we know, we do, we become. It is this actual "becoming" which is the goal, for we at length have reached the truth of image and likeness of God.

"Tourmalet" Author Denies Plagiarism

CARDIFF, Wales, Aug. 5—(CP) Cable).—D. P. Williams, a native of Aberdare and a graduate of the University of Wales, was revealed today as the author of the brilliant short story which was awarded first prize in the Eisteddfod Literary Competitions yesterday but was later disqualified for lack of proof of originality.

Mr. Williams declared his story, entitled "Tourmalet," was genuine and the result of his own ideas and work. He explained he did not reply to letters addressed to him by the Eisteddfod secretary because they had never reached him.

The author said he had been unable to meet the challenge of the adjudicator at the prize-giving ceremonies yesterday because an important engagement had prevented his being in Cardiff. He maintained it was not the duty of a competitor to prove the authenticity of his work but rather the responsibility of the adjudicator to prove any point of alleged plagiarism.

The adjudicators, however, declined to change the award. The prize was given to the runner-up. Tom Parry, chief adjudicator of the Welsh cultural festival, had said "Tourmalet" had gripped him so profoundly it would remain long in his memory and that, pending proof of originality, he had awarded it first prize without hesitation.

Biblical Thoughts For the Shut-Ins

WHAT DO I KNOW OF THE BIBLE?

HOSEA'S PRODIGAL WIFE

"I drew them with the cords of a man, with the bands of love."—Hosea 11:4.

You have heard of the Prodigal Son. Are you surprised to hear of the Prodigal Wife? Such was the wife of Hosea the prophet, whose book opens that portion of the Scriptures called the "Minor Prophets." Lesser only because their writings were shorter, yet very important in their teachings

Gomer, the wife of Hosea went into the far country and spent herself in riotious living. Hosea was a farmer in northern Israel, living about twenty-five years after Amos. He also has a message to his generation and ours. One day he saw a young woman, perhaps at a threshing bee. He looked into her eyes and his fate was sealed. He married her. Like many a man in every age he found that his true love was despised and trodden under foot by a selfish pleasure-loving woman. He gave his youngest child the awful name of Loammi, which in the Hebrew means "not mine own." Yet he loved her.

She could not abide that quiet home, the routine of farm life and perhaps, hearing her husband call the lad Loammi with its fearful rebuke. He brings her back time and again. Why? Because he loved her. There was a bitter pain in his heart, anguish and horror. Then slowly, gradually, probably in the still night watches as he cared for his sheep came the new revelation of Jehovah. How gloriously democratic God is. He reveals the greatest truth of His character to a plain, everyday man of the fields, a husbandman. It is through the common life and everyday problems that God deals with you and me.

Hosea looks out upon his people and sees their hideous sins if idolatory, which he calls spiritual infidelity to Jehovah. Their selfishness, their green and yet professing to worship Jehovah. Suddenly there sweeps upon him the revelation from God through his own tragedy and horror. God loves His people Israel even as He loves Gomer. Just as he time and again brought her back so God has sent His prophets to bring back His people, if they will. "I drew them with the cords of a man, with the bands of love," exclaims Jehovah. Slowly it dawns upon Hosea's human conscience that just as he loves Gomer and grieves for her sins so Jehovah loves Israel and His heart also is full of pain and sorrow. The wonderful discovery that God suffers. Then comes the still greater fact that God faces failure even as Hosea faces failure. Israel will not repent and return; Gomer will not be faithful.

Thus we learn that Hosea's unhappy marriage was the means, the channel through which he learns the deepest and profoundest truth of the character of God as revealed in the Old Testament Scriptures. God is love. This is the key word of this book, written more than seven hundred years before the birth of Christ.

This book is hard to read and understand because of the corrputness of the original Hebrew text. Translators have found it hard because of the ommissions and additions to the texts by copiers. Yet the main truth stands out that Jehovah loves His people Israel. "When Israel was a child I loved him and from Egypt I called him to be My son." 11:10.

The opening chapter shocks us. We read: "Go, love a woman of whoredom." It is the opinion of the great Latin and Greek Fathers, Augustine, Athanasius and others, the most learned of Puritans and modern scholars that these words mut not be taken literally. Hosea looks back upon his love and sees that Gomer, though pure when he married her, was at heart impure, faithless. Many a man has made a similar discovery. Hosea sees God's guidance in this, and that his own pain and horror should be the means of revealing to him that God is love. Hosea's love must have been pure otherwise he could not have stood the strain and faced the horror.

Was his marriage a failure? No, a thousand times no. He learnt that God is loving him all the time and desires to reveal Himself to him through the school of pain and horro. His calvary.

"WE LOVE HIM BECAUSE HE FIRST LOVED US."

(The International Uniform Lesson on the above topic for August 7 is the Book of Ruth, especially Ruth 1:6-18, the Golden Text being 1:16, "Thy people shall be my people and thy God my God.")

By DR. ALVIN E. BELL

THE BEAUTIFUL character who is the heroine of the Book of Ruth has not only named this book, but countless thousands of sweet girl babies through the ages. This is one of the choicest idyls of all literature; a true love story that has fascinated millions and lost none of its charm through the centuries.

A Classic Love Story

This story is a classic among stories of lovers because it contains the elements of profound sorrow turned into great joy; of love overcomisg prejudice; of noble self-sacrifice richly rewarded in both hero and heroine; of true love sanctified by religion; of marriage and a life happy ever afterward; and just as the story closes we catch a glimpse of a baby's crib, and hear the sweet music of a babe's cooing, in whose veins is running the blood of Israel's greatest king, and of David's greater Son, the Saviour of both Jew and Moabite. The widowed Naomi and Ruth and the noble Boaz stand out in sharp contrast against the black background of the days of the Judges, those bloody, immoral, idolatrous days, in which these noble souls lived in faith and faithfulness to God, and in love and purity before an evil generation. So the story is a blow at pessimism, for even bad. God always has His "thousands who have not bowed to the knee of Baal." He has never been left without witnesses, even though these be put as "a remnant."

Ruth's Loyalty

For the expression of loyalty and devotion no human words have ever excelled these words of Ruth, the Moabitess to Naomi, the Jewess: "Intreat me not to leave thee, or to return from following after thee: for whither thou goest I will go; and where thou lodgest I will lodge; thy people shall be my people, and thy God my God." This is supreme devotion, love to the uttermost. But its secret is kinship in the things of the soul— "Thy God shall be my God."

The Book's Purpose

The purpose of the book is evident in its closing note about Obed, the son born to Boaz and Ruth, from whom sprang Jesse, the father of David. Thus the Gentile Ruth becomes one of the forbears, as to flesh of Lord Jesus Christ, who obliterates all race and class distinctions. How strange it is that among the four women mentioned in the genealogy of Christ in the first chapter of Matthew, are included Rahab, the harlot; Bathsheba, the adulteress, and Ruth, the Gentile.

Truly He is the Saviour of all. "Though your sins be as scarlet, they shall be as white as snow; though they be red like crimson, they shall be as wool."

Successful Social Held At Fairview

FAIRVIEW, Aug. 6—Tuesday evening was the scene of a very delightful evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Cockburn, when they opened their home for an ice cream social which was catered to by the second group of the Fairview Women's Association. Delicious home-made ice cream, pie and cake was served to about one hundred people.

In the early evening a baseball game was much enjoyed between the Wesley team and Fairview, with Fairview as the winners.

Rev. Harry Wilkinson was chairman for the following program, which opened with community singing:

Two selections from the Fairview orchestra: Anne Franks, Greta Reynolds, Lorne Reynolds and Keith Harrison; guitar and violin selections by Althea Trude; solo by John Lewis; readings by Keith and Burritt Harrison; duet by Olive Bell and Mrs. Harold Lewis, and a guitar selection by Greta Reynolds.

Miss Mary Brown of St. Catharines is visiting her cousin, Eleanor Rosborough.

Mrs. A. Franks and daughter, Miss Anne Franks, are spending a few days this week with friends at Trenton.

Mrs. Richard Harrison is visiting at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Harrison.

A National Message

Contrast between Israel and the Jews.

Israel wre to have a change of name. (Isa. LXV 15).

The Jews were to be known by a change in physiognomy (Isa. III 9).

Israel were to be called by a new name. (Isa. LXII 2).

The Jews retained their old name unchanged.

Israel were to be called after Isaac. i.e., called Saxon. (Gen. XXI 12.)

The Jews name was to be a curse to them. (Isa. LXV 15).

Israel were to be blind to their identity. (Rom. XI 25.)

The Jews still claim to be the chosen people.

Isreal were to be a multitudinous people. (Hosea 1:10.)

The Jews were to be bereft of children. (Jer. XV 7.)

Israel were to become known as the righteous nation, that keepeth the truth (Isa. XXVI, 2.)

The Jews were to be a reproach and a proverb, a taunt and a curse. (Jer. XXIV 9.)

Israel were to become a Nation, and a Company of Nations. (Gen. XXXV 11.)

The Jews were to be scattered in all "the kingdoms of the earth for their hurt." (Jer. XXIV 9.)

Israel were to make a new home in the appointed place—the isles of the sea. (II Sam. VII. 10-Isa. XXIV 15. Isa. XLIX 1. Jer. XXXI 10, etc.)

The Jews have been strangers in all lands (Jer. XV 4.)

Israel were to be a Nation forever. (Jer. XXXI 36.)

The Jewish nation was broken beyond repair in AD. 70. (Dan. IX 24. Jr. XIX 11.)

The Jews have no king on earth.

Israel were to come under a new covenant. (Jer. XXXI 33.)

The Jews have remained under the old law.

Israel were to be called the sons of God, i.e. accept Christianity. (Hos. 1:10.)

The Jews do not accept Jesus Christ as the Messiah.

Israel were taken captive in Assyria, circa 721 B.C. (II Kings XVIII 11, etc.)

The Jews taken captive to Babylon circa 603 B.C. (II Kings XXIV 1-14, etc and XXV 20, etc.)

Israel were to be immune from defeat in war. (Isa. LIX 17, Lev. XXVI 6-7-8.)

The Jews have suffered endless persecution.

Israel had nothing to do with the crucifixion, being at that time away beyond the Euphrates, beginning their migrations through Europe.

The Jews cried "crucify Him, crucify Him."

Park St. Church Is Redecorated

After worshipping in the basement Sunday School quarters for the last month, the congregation of Park Street Baptist Church will resume regular services in the church on Sunday. Rev. C. C. Boyter has returned from his vacation and will preach in the morning and evening, and the choir has prepared special music for the occasion. The church has been completely redecorated, presenting an attractive appearance in harmony with its religious atmosphere, and a large attendance is expected Sunday.

Ruth: Adventurous Faith

Scripture—The Book of Ruth.

By the Rev. Alvin E. Bell And Alfred J. Buescher

Naomi and her husband and sons fled Bethlehem because of famine and came to Moab where her husband and sons died. One of her daughters-in-law, Ruth, returned with her to Bethlehem.

Being very poor, Ruth supported herself and mother-in-law by gathering grain the reapers had missed in the harvest fields belonging to Boaz, a rich relative of her husband.

Boaz loved Ruth but a closer relative must have first choice at marrying her. This right he refused, removing his shoe and giving it to Boaz in the city's gate before the elders.

Thus Boaz took Ruth as his wife and to them was born a son, Obed, from whom King David was descended. So Ruth became an ancestress of Christ. (GOLDEN TEXT—Ruth 1:16.)

No Reception Here

In the Brockville Recorder and Times we notice an invitation from Mayor Johnston, on behalf of the town officers, the police force and the provincial police to visit the Victoria Building and inspect the "clean and sanitary conditions of the different departments of the town offices, police offices, cell room, transient room, court room and provincial police office," all of which suggests that Brockville has provided proper accommodation for its law enforcement officials and is proud of the fact.

Although there has been some redecorating done at local police headquarters recently it is not likely there will be any public reception to inspect the place for the simple reason, that there is little about the accommodation provided for the police department to arouse any desire to display it to the public.

As a matter of cold fact the whole layout under which the police have to work is cramped and the acme of inconvenience. There is no store room, the traffic officers' office is outside the door of the women's cell in full view of it, the chief's office has to serve also for the magistrate, the lawyers and the press, the only place for witnesses who are waiting to be called is in a small corridor at the top of the stairs, the office of the justice of the peace is so situated that every visitor has to pass through the court room to get to it and there is no separate room for transients who seek a night's lodging; they have to get what sleep they can amidst the drunks and other prisoners collected during the night.

The whole arrangement is at best a makeshift for modern police headquarters and the local force will probably hear about Brockville's good fortune in having a place fit to be shown to the public with a strong sense of envy.

There is no likelihood of a public reception here but of course certain citizens will continue to get special invitations to visit the place and in many cases automobile transport and special escorts will be provided to see that they reach the proper destination.

On The Way Out

The street car, already almost forgotten in a number of smaller Ontario cities, including Peterborough, where once it was an important agency of transportation, seems doomed to disappear from all but the larger centres.

At the present time both Kitchener and Brantford are considering the scrapping of their street railway systems in favor of motor buses and undoubtedly it will not be long before the rattle of street cars and the clang of the motorman's gong will be heard no more on the streets of these Western Ontario cities.

The expense of operation, the fact that street cars are tied down to the thoroughfares upon which the tracks are laid, while buses can operate anywhere, and that the cars and tracks help to slow up and block motor traffic, a factor not even dreamt of when the street railways systems were first organized, all combine to make the disappearance of street cars from the smaller centres inevitable.

Peterborough's experience has proved that quieter, faster and more satisfactory transportation service can be provided by a fleet of motor buses and the latter have the additional advantage that they can be routed anywhere. The passing of the street railway may have caused a few temporary pangs of regret, especially among old-timers who remembered the thrill of civic pride with which the advent of the electric cars had been greeted, but there is today not the slightest wish to have them come back. The more modern system is accepted as the most convenient and the best for cities of this size and it will not be long before the buses have triumphed everywhere except in the largest centres of population.

A Remarkable Record

Residents of this district are accustomed to congratulate themselves upon the fact that Peterborough is peopled by very law-abiding folk and on the whole there is good reason for holding that opinion. The percentage of major crime committed here is decidedly small, and from that we are entitled to derive a proper amount of gratification.

At the same time, however, we should not let pride in our own district make us think that we are the only good people living in the Dominion; if we harbor that idea we are, as a matter of fact, leaving ourselves open to a decided shock.

For example there is a county in Prince Edward Island, known as King's County, that has been setting up a record that in comparison makes our showing here look, if not black, at least a very dark gray.

Recently Mr. Justice Arsenault opened the Supreme Court Assizes in King's County but found that there were no criminal cases on the docket, with the result he was presented with the white gloves that tradition has made essential upon such an occasion.

There was nothing particularly novel about that situation—it has happened here several times—but there was something decidedly remarkable about the fact that the Judge was able to state that he had presided over the Assize court in that county for seventeen years and that never in all that time had a criminal case been listed. Judge Arsenault in an address to the court said that he doubted whether that record had ever been equalled anywhere in Canada and we are inclined to believe that he was right.

Certainly Peterborough County, much as it rightly prides itself upon the good behaviour of its residents, could not hope to challenge this Prince Edward Island record with any expectation of success.

This Is Unusual

If there is not a special award for newspapers which distinguish themselves in unusual ways there should be and we hasten to mention the St. Thomas Times Journal as one publication that might be considered as eligible for the first holder of such a distinction.

We nominate the Times Journal because, so far as we know, it is about the first newspaper that has been known to voice any emphatic protest against government money being spent in its territory.

It is proposed by the Federal government to spend $5,000 in adding a clock tower to the St. Thomas post office building and at once the editor of the Times Journal sat him down at his battered typewriter and started his two index fingers to work pounding out a stronge objection to any such frittering away of public money for such a useless purpose.

"With the city hall clock tower only two blocks away," he wrote, "and the clock there giving good service we aren't a bit hesitant in saying there are many things we need in St. Thomas more than a second clock along Talbot Street. We haven't the slightest idea who is asking for or suggesting this clock tower but whoever he or she is might pass the word to the department that $50 or so spent on revamping the main entrance so that people won't get jammed between the double doors or be in danger of breaking their necks on the steps would be more appreciated."

We repeat this attitude on the part of a community newspaper in calmly tossing back to the government $4,950, out of a proposed $5,000 gift, is refreshingly novel. If it were more generally adopted it might be possible for governments to ease up appreciably on their spending programs.

That Building Bylaw

We believe that a special award of merit should be made to the members of the property committee upon the strong sense of duty it has displayed in tackling amendments to the building by-law bang in the middle of the heat wave.

The building bylaw is the black sheep among municipal ordinances; it always has been and it would only be a chronic optimist who would venture to predict that the future will show much improvement.

In the first place there is so much about its provisions that are technical that aldermen tire of trying to grasp some of the more intricate details, especially if they happen to be lawyers, or merchants, or follow some other profession or occupation not closely allied to the building trade.

Then there is the second objection to building bylaws and that is they seem to have a fiendish art of stepping on the corns of folk who have friends in council and who believe that it is the duty of friends to rally around when assistance is indicated.

In other words the aldermen find themselves continually in the position of having to authorize infractions of some of the building regulations or lose the regard of citizens whose respect they have hitherto enjoyed. The bylaw says that the walls of a building within a certain area shall be of a specified thickness and along comes one of these friends of some member of council with an earnest plea that the rules be waived in his case, because of special circumstances, and sometimes these pleas succeed.

Then, of course, up bobs another fellow, who wants to use a kind of roofing that the bylaw prohibits and he, pointing to the leniency that has been accorded the first citizen, intimates there is no reason why the regulations cannot be similarly relaxed in his case.

And so it goes on until the aldermen must sometimes wish there were no such thing as a building bylaw and as for amending it in midsummer, they would very much prefer to throw the whole measure into the Otonabee.

Should Be Finished

The district should be grateful that Alex. Elliott, M.L.A., and Rork Ferguson, M.P., have succeeded in securing a promise from Hon. T. B. McQuesten, minister of highways, to inspect the Apsley-Bancroft road in the near future, especially as there is some reason to hope that his visit may lead to a speeding up of the work along this route.

The completion of the road would mean a great deal to Peterborough and to the whole district.

It would have a distinct effect upon tourist traffic into this part of the province, opening out new territory in the north and bringing in many visitors who would see this distinct for the first time.

It would widen the recreational opportunities of local citizens, who would be able to see more of the north country and to visit fishing areas that up to a short time ago were considered almost too remote to be thought about.

It would give the the residents of the Bancroft district easy access to Peterborough, to their advantage in the matter of disposing of their products and also to the advantage of Peterborough merchants and others here selling goods or services.

At the same time the completion of the Apsley-Bancroft link would practically round out a new trunk line between Peterborough and Pembroke, facilitating travel through northern districts aad helping to ease traffic upon some of the other highways, now heavily congested at the peak of the tourist season.

The road has been long mooted and we believe that the whole district favors its early completion. The delay that has occurred has been disappointing, especially to the folk in the territory served by the Apsley-Bancroft road, and the Minister could make no more pleasing announcement, after he has inspected the situation for himself, than one to the effect that the Ontario government has decided to push this important project through to an early conclusion.

The efforts of Mr. Elliott and Mr. Ferguson in impressing upon Mr. McQuesten the desirability of finishing this road undertaking as speedily as possible should have the support of municipal councils, the Chamber of Commerce, and other organizations and individuals.

NOTE AND COMMENT

Premier Duplessis says that Fascism in Quebec is a myth. Just what the Fascists there think about that statement has not yet been announced.

They have been cooking eggs in the sun at London. Here, however, it has been too hot to stay out in the sun long enough to cook an egg.

Premier Hepburn is expected back in Ontario shortly. Meanwhile affairs of state seem to have been going along all right in his absence.

Conditions may not be too good in the United States but 32,000 people attended a night game at Brooklyn, and that seems a lot of folk to pay to see the Dodgers play.

Man arrested in London admits being a spy for three nations. That is one thing wrong with this world, there are too many people filling more than one job.

Toronto has set a new record in the payment of income tax. Still we do not imagine that those who helped set up the new mark are happy about the whole affair.

Port Hope is boasting that its tax rate has been reduced to 46 mills. It will have to drop lower than that, however, before the taxpayers will feel like lighting bonfires on the street corners.

It is one of the sad things of this life that just about the time a heat wave hits with full force, the health authorities discover that the water in the old swimming hole is polluted.

New York's police guard for Mayor LaGuardia wear summer uniforms of white with white caps. Just how the public can tell them from orchestra leaders is not clear.

Canada's export of arms to the United States last month totalled $47. We have an idea American arms manufacturers will not make representations to Washington protesting against the competition they have to face.

A French-Canadian newspaper complains that Canada is to be converted into the aerial arsenal of the Empire. Men who are looking for work on airplane construction are not likely to do much worrying over that aspect of the situation.

THE SUM OF LIFE

When harvest gold is gleaming
O'er sunny slope and plain,
And summer winds are wooing
The heart to roam again,
Then dreams long since forgotten,
And hopes that stirred the soul,
Come in a throng of memories
And o'er my being roll.

The leaves that sing of summer,
The fields of golden wheat,
The waves that lave the shore-line
All bring a message sweet;
And all the old-time ecstasy
That reigned within my heart,
Comes back in gladsome memory
And forms of life a part.

For oh! the dreams and visions
That filled each summer day
Were parcel of my being
And ne'er have passed away;
The outward life is seeming—
The labor, care and strife—
But thoughts, ideals and visions
Make up the sum of life.

The Simple Life Still With Us

(From the St. Mary's Journal-Argus)

AT THIS family reunion season we hark back a good deal to life in pioneer days through the medium of the few remaining old-timers who can recall the stories told them by their fathers who settled in the woods. And we envy somewhat, in these days of high-pressure living, certain features of the life which our grandfathers, in spite of harsh vicissitudes, were able to enjoy.

During the past week or so the editor of the Journal-Argus has enjoyed holidaying in a community where the self-contained life is not merely a memory but is still to a large degree an actuality. This pleasant fishing village, up in the Bruce Peninsula has had to live by itself because of its geographical location. It is over fifty miles through the woods to the nearest town and up until recent years the winding road was impassable during the winter months.

The necessity of having to do for themselves has been with these people all through their lives. So if a man needs a boat he just up and builds it. There are thirty fishing craft in the village and twenty-nine of them have been built here. A staunch lot of boats they are. When a villager's family increases, he takes out his hammer and saw and adds another lean-to to his modest home. There is no out-and-out garage service here, except for summer visitors, because every self-respecting citizen knows how to fix his own car. Several good stores cluster around the snug harbor but they deal in goods, not in services. There is a barber shop to be sure, but the barber works only in the evening when he is free from his work as fisherman and guide. If there is some kind of a job that you cannot handle, you can be sure that some obliging neighbor will help you out, for the old-fashioned virtues of kindness and neighborliness flourish in this community. Folks up here not only know how to do things but they are generally well-informed. In the winter time especially, they find plenty of time for reading and patronize generously the village library. One of the best posted men on current problems and political history that we know is a retired fisherman up here whom we enjoy chatting with by the hour.

The vigorous outdoor life keeps the people in robust health. There used to be a doctor for a few years. Last winter they had a public health nurse. But for the summer the municipality has arranged with a medical man in the next town to answer the few calls necessary. In sickness or trouble, the village sobn knows about it, and kind-hearted neighbors, skilled in home remedies, are ready to help.

SOMEWHAT UNUSUAL.

(Kitchener Record)

FORTY MILES from Detroit in a quiet ceremony Daniel G. Dodge, 21-year-old millionaire son of a millionaire automobile family, married a Gore Bay, Ont., telephone operator.

The lad, who has slightly less than $10,000,000 coming to him from the estate of his father and who is connected with a family that has been more or less in the news in a spectacular way, seems to be a little different from the rest of the family in that he prefers quietness to the limelight. Certainly he showed that he is not bound by the upper 400 when he married an ordinary girl whom he met while on a north woods vacation three years ago. Unlike others in the family he and his bride had no brass band wedding and the honeymoon plans were kept discreetly quiet.

Young Dodge likes to tinker with aeroplane and motorboat engines and his wife in her early life on Manitoulin Island became a good athlete.

There is a freshness and pleasantness about this wedding that makes one hope with all their heart that it may be as lasting and refreshing as it has been up to this point. At any rate many Canadians, especially those of Manitoulin Island, will watch the career of the two young folks with unconcealed interest.

BRITISH CITIES.

(Christian Science Monitor)

BIRMINGHAM, third in size among the cities of the United Kingdom, recently held a great pageant to celebrate the centenary of its Charter of Incorporation. Eight thousand citizens took part in the pageant, it was repeated every day for a week, and involved a stupendous amount of organization and labor—facts that form no small tribute to the pride and affection with which the inhabitants regard their city.

This tradition of civic loyalty is wide-spread in Britain today. It has survived with a strength that is perhaps a shade remarkable; for the cities no longer extend, as corporate bodies, the same protective influence over the life of the individual. They are not forced to be the watch towers of freedom, and the bulwarks against aggression, that they were in feudal times! and the liberty of the citizen, and the privileges of guilds and companies, are no longer largely preserved by the power of the city community. It is heartening to note, therefore, how much voluntary and unselfish service they receive, and how high is their prestige that renders "the freedom of the city" an honor of the first rank.

HUGE SUMMER TRAFFIC

(Oshawa Times)

The summer holidays are on in real earnest right now, judging by the large number of United States and Quebec automobiles one can see rolling through the city these days.

DEPRESSION AND RELIEF

Editor of the Examiner:

Sir,—The law of success means going forward. Not to go forward is to go backward. There is no standing still. You surely do not want to retrograde. You must move onward and upward if you would be somebody and accomplish something. Your watchword must be progress.

This is a strenuous age. The prize is to the alert. Up-to-date people are recognized.

Modern enterprises command capital. Go-ahead people find positions awaiting for them. Advance ways of doing things; attract attention.

This year should find you ahead of the place you occupied last year. You should have a clear idea of the better ways of doing business.

Your work should show to all who behold it that it is of a higher grade than heretofore.

The successful businesses are the product of much thought. They evidence efforts to improve. Corners are cut; time is recognized as money; expenditures are curtailed. No detail too small to be the object of personal superintendence.

The person who would become a power in society, in affairs of men, in any particular persuit must progress. No detail should be overlooked that will bring about advancement. You must take cognizance of your surroundings. There are unwritten laws to be observed and obeyed by all who are depending upon the patronage of the public.

NOT DOING TOO BADLY

Editor of The Examiner:

Sir,—A good deal of criticism of the "Weather Man" has been getting the spotlight in recent days. Your contemporary The Star (Toronto) recently commented editorially and rather wistfully: "He is unfair to organized labor—and unorganized too."

Now I'm not so sure, Mr. Editor. To begin with, the "Weather Man" is faced with an impossible job, that is, of pleasing all of us. It simply can't be done.

An interesting example of this is found in the wheat situation on the Prairies. The railways would prefer a 400-million bushel crop to a 300-million bushel outturn—nothwithstanding the fact that the latter yield will bring as many dollars to the farmer as the former. How could the poor "Weather Man" please both sides? He might have given us a 500-million bushel crop in 1938 (which, by the way, would have been worth less money to the growers than today's estimated 315 million bushels) so he did his best for us, took the middle ground and kept the balance fairly true.

Another credit to be marked up for the "Weather Man" was his decision to "clip" 40 million bushels from the Italian wheat yield in 1938. It is, of course, proposed to adulterate the domestic flour-mix in that country to partially make up the deficiency. This is simply a "treat" on the vitality of the home folks, and, to that extent, I am sorry. At the same time it cannot be denied that the "Weaher Man" has tipped the Roman scales in the direction of peace, by taking a goodly amount of starch out of the "will to war" of the militarists.

Furthermore, if the "Weather Man" was kinder to the folks in the vast cities of the United States, what would happen to the ever-widening stream of tourists flowing to our woods and waters?

• The Little Red School House

(From the Bowmanville Statesman)

AT SOLINA last week-end a surprisingly large number of former residents of that prosperous and well behaved hamlet, and graduates of its "little red school house" returned to the scenes of their boyhood and girlhood to renew acquaintances and revive friendships at a reunion. It was an extremely happy affair, well attended, well arranged and well carried out.

There was one thing however that struck us particularly. Several of the old timers and prominent citizens made brief reminiscent addresses, and it was noticeable to us that in every instance these speakers referred with grateful appreciation to the important part that the school teacher had played in their lives. It was a tribute well deserved, and it was a splendid gesture on the part of the speakers to publicly remind the gathering of the important part that the school teacher plays in the development of the young life of a community.

Solina has turned out many prominent citizens. We would say that on the ratio of population, places of Solin's size turn out a larger percentage of successfull people than do towns and cities. There are three influences that may lay claim to the credit they are, the home, the school and the church. The reason we particularly mention the school is because during the formative stages of life the teacher has charge of the children for many hours each day. Too often, unfortunately, in these days the teacher is not well paid, and yet despite this handicap the teacher carries on mouldering the lives of young people into worthwhile citizens.

What is true of Solina is true of other rural centres. The teacher not only educates the children, but very often is actively connected with the church, young people's society and with other worthwhile community organizations. In most instances too, the teacher will be found to be the leading light in these groups, unostentatiously carrying the load and letting others take the credit.

• Each One Of Us Owes $650

(From the Montreal Star)

DO YOU OWE anybody $650? If you think not, you're wrong. Whether you're under a year or over a hundred, male or female, married or single, as long as you are a Canadian you owe that much money.

You owe it to other people in Canada, to people in the United States and in Great Britain. You owe it because your government borrowed the money. When they borrowed it they did so in the name of the Canadian people, or the people of a province or town of Canada. It is the Canadian people who have to pay back the loans eventually and have to keep paying the interest on them year by year.

The public debt of the Canadian people on March 31, 1937, is estimated as $7,162,163,113 in a report just published by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics. That amount includes the total net direct debt of the Dominion of Canada, the guaranteed or indirect debt of the Dominion, the direct and indirect debts of the nine provinces, and the direct debts of the 4,300 municipalities.

That huge total of over seven billion dollars is a straight financial obligation on the people of Canada. From each person in Canada must be exacted tribute to help meet that obligation. It is not a problem affecting a little body of men known as the "government" or the "city hall." It is a load that has to be carried by every person in Canada, and of which every man, woman and child feels the weight.

We owe the biggest slice through our Dominion Government. The direct debts contracted through it amount to just over three billion dollars alone. On top of that, there is nearly another billion and a quarter in loans, particularly railway bonds, that have been guaranteed by the Federal Government. The provinces are responsible for well over a billion, and the municipalities for an amount going on to a billion and a half.

Those amounts are all owed by the Canadian people. So far, we have scraped along with only a few of the obligations being defaulted under particular circumstances. But the burden, so big that its size is hard to conceive, cannot be escaped. We must strain every sinew to lighten it if we do not want its weight to crush the economic and social machinery of Canada.

• Many Are Refusing Farm Jobs

(From the Woodstock Sentinel-Review)

THE PROBLEM of inducing jobless men in the cities to accept farm employment is again acute because the province some time ago ordered all single men cut off the relief rolls. Some municipalities showed compassion in cases where single men were willing to work on farms or elsewhere, but were unable to get placed. Sometimes there are circumstances wherein even the best-intentioned individual is unable to get a job or to fill it if it is offered.

Evidently the provincial relief authorities assume that there is sufficient work on farms or elsewhere to offer a job to every ablebodied single man. But there are many who will not accept work on farms. They assert that the pay is low, the work unendurable for the average city-bred individual, the sleeping and other accommodation inferior and the food frequently of a poor standard. Most of all, they complain of the long hours on the farm, from before sunrise until after sunset. Those raised on farms usually do not complain of that condition, realizing that the economic situation in agriculture is such as to demand long hours at low pay for the worker.

Many farmers will resent the slurs on their business by reliefers. They claim that life on the farm will compare favorably with that in other industry, that the wages offered are the standard for such work and that the average city man requires a great deal of training before he becomes sufficiently useful, if ever, to merit higher pay.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

AND THERE assembled at Jerusalem much people to keep the feast of unleavened bread in the second month, a very great congregation. And they arose and took away the altars that were in Jerusalem, and all the altars for incense took they away, and cast them into the brook Kidron. Then they killed the passover on the fourteenth day of the second month: and the priests and the Levites were ashamed, and sanctified themselves, and brought in the burnt offering into the house of the Lord....For there were many in the congregation that were not sanctified; therefore the Levites had the charge of the killing of the passovers for every one that was not clean, to sanctify them unto the Lord. For a multitude of the people, even many of Ephraim, and Manasseh, Issachar, and Zebulun, had not cleansed themselves, yet did they eat the passover otherwise than it was written. But Hezekiah prayed for them, saying, The good Lord pardon every one that prepareth his heart to seek God, the Lord God of his fathers, though he be not cleansed according to the purification of the sanctuary. And the Lord hearkened to Hezekiah and healed the people.—II Chron. xxx: 13-15, 17-20.

Come and hear, all ye that fear God, and I will declare what he hath done for my soul. I cried unto him with my mouth, and he was extolled with my tongue. If I regard iniquity in my heart, the Lord will not hear me: but verily God hath heard me; he hath attended to the voice of my prayer. Blessed be God, which had not turned away my prayer, nor his mercy from me.—Ps. lxvi: 16-20.

A GLOOMY VIEW.

(Toronto Saturday Night)

EDUCATION, warnings and precautions may keep motor-car accidents down to a reasonable number, but it is doubtful if they will ever reduce them to a satisfying minimum. The truth is that the motor car, unimagined by nature, has become a natural hazard to human life. Man has made it such by making it universal as he has the bathtub, a stationary, unassuming menace to the careless-stepping bather.

This is a discomforting thought, if we forget that life is entirely a hazardous occupation. When men left the jungle for the city, they escaped old dangers, but they found new ones, largely of their own contrivance. For death must come, if not in one way, then in another. All the engineering and scientific ingenuity cannot protect man finally from his own mortality or steel his soft and puny body against the larger blow.

WINS WITHOUT LIPSTICK

(Niagara Falls Review)

We don't know whether drawing attention to this news item will have any effect. We doubt it, but, it may be noted that one of the beauty contest winners at the Toronto Police field day was a young miss of eighteen, who uses practically no cosmetics or lipstick and was attired in a dress made by herself. Maybe there is a hint in the incident for somebody or other.

There is an impression that there are too many men in the larger cities who are evading work because they have found an easier way to make a living without working at all. The various phases of panhandling or begging are more attractive to them than any legitimate job. Of course many of that type are virtually unfitted to work because of protracted indolence or dissipation. The cities have been lax to some extent in failing to deal firmly with the case of wasters who refuse to work. They are being imposed upon by hordes of men who are actually criminals or on the borderline who persist in making nuisances of themselves by begging on the streets, or from door to door, when they could readily perform some sort of work that would earn money, no matter how little, and at the same time be making a struggle to regain their self-respect.

PETES DEFEAT BROOKLIN 13-6 IN A WILD LACROSSE BATTLE

Red Creighton Gives Stellar Performance In Local Net; Petes Retain Early Advantage

Magee And Worthy Among The Stars In Lively Contest

In 80 minutes of the wildest lacrosse seen here this year Peterborough downed the fast travelling Brooklin squad 13 to 6 last night. The game produced brilliant lacrosse and along with it the fans were treated to a near riot which involved seven Brooklin players and five spectators and two minutes before the final gong, a melee developed on the playing field that resembled a baby Donnybrook and all players on both teams were involved either as battlers or peacemakers. The largest crowd of the year turned out for the game and were generously entertained.

Brilliant individual playing and deadly shooting by the locals earned them the verdict and Red Creighton gave a standout performance in the nets. The locals took the lead in the first period and were never headed, they dominated the play almost throughout the entire game with both lines being equally effective. Mick Magee, Norm Worthy and Ira Dundas with Crowe and Reid were the stars. The first two each scored three goals unassisted and both drew thunderous applause as they raced the entire length of the box to beat the opposing goalie on solo efforts. Grice, the Vipond brothers and Cook stood out on the Brooklin line-up.

Dallin was covering S. Bovin of the Brooklin squad during the game and near the end of the second period in a flurry of sticks he cut the latter's nose and drew a five minute penalty. A few seconds after entering the penalty box, McDonald made a flying tackle at him and spectators nearby attempted to separate them. As the crowd surged in the relieving Brooklin players stood up on the bench with sticks aloft and the tangle was finally broken up by Constable Leo Murphy and club officials. Dundas and Ormiston started the other battle when they started the fists flying just before the game ended and the resultant jumble involved all the players on the field. Referee Bruce Leighton with a few of the cooler heads straightened out this affair, and the two principals were banished.

Referee Leighton ruled the game with an iron hand and did a splendid job under very trying circumstances.

Lawn Bowling

By HERB MARTIN

The other day one of our wide awake bowlers walked into the shop and handed us a little clipping on lawn bowling entitled "Tone and Warmth."

It reads: The following appears in the Provincial Lawn Bowling Association of Ontario year book—"No bowler should appear in a match unless clad in cream or white trousers, shirt and hat. Such adornments as blazers, hat bands, club ties and belts to match add tone and warmth to the picture."

We don't know who wrote this article but he criticises the above paragraph with a good deal of satire when he says that this particular rub "should be printed in large heavy type and right up in the front of the book—and then again he says "How could a bowler expect to bowl his best and be a gentleman and a sportsman if he appeared at a match clad in anything but cream or white trousers, shirt and hat."—maybe we will stretch one point. The book doesn't mention socks.

And his concluding paragraph reads—"The rule does not specify male bowlers but probably it will be necessary to allow the ladies some latitude in interpreting the order of female dress."

We might say that we agree with the writer in his criticism on the above rule and would add, God forbid that the time will ever come when any board of directors of our club will set the playing fee at, " Apair of white trousers, a high silk hat and a gold headed cane."

Lowly Orioles Defeated 5-4 By Torontos

TORONTO, Aug. 6.—For a club that's down in last place, 32 games behind the league leading Newark Bears, Baltimore Orioles have been doing all right for themselves.

One of the few "independent" minor league teams in baseball, the Orioles, who have been in the International League basement practically all season, have turned to the trading marts to bring in the profits.

So far this season, the Orioles have made deals that has sent four players up to the big leagues, with another sold for delivery next season. Bill Cissell and Johnny Wittig were sold to New York Giants, Phil Weintraub to the Phillies, and Nolen Richardson to Cincinnati Reds with Dick West, now with Chattanooga of the Southern Association, slated to go to the Reds at the end of the current campaign.

While their luck in the markets continues to hold, the breaks on the playing field still are going against them. They dropped a 12-inning battle to the onsurging Toronto Maple Leafs, 5-4, last night to extend their current losing streak to five games.

Trailing 4-0 at the end of the first inning, the Leafs came back to tie the score in the ninth inning on Manager Jack Burns two-run homer and then won out in the 12th on a circuit smash by little Frank Reiber.

The triumph enabled the Leafs to gain on the fourth place Syracuse Chiefs who split a double header with Buffalo Bisons. The Chiefs won the opener 4-0 but the Bisons came back to win the nightcap 8-2 and break their nine-game losing streak.

Rochester Red Wings boosted their second place lead over the Bisons by stopping Newark Bears 6-4. Jack Sturdy's homer with a mate aboard in the eighth inning broke a 4-all deadlock and handed the Bears their first defeat in nine games.

100 Ace Swimmers In Canadian Meet

DOMAINE D'ESTEREL, Que. Aug. 6 (CP).—Cool, clear waters of this Laurentian Mountain resort were churned to foam today by thrashing limbs of nearly 100 ace swimmers competing in the Dominion swimming championship meet.

Busloads of spectators came up from Montreal, 50 miles to the south, and carloads of vacationists from hotels and cottages on a score of mountain lakes joined to watch the aquatic speedsters and the graceful springboard diving stars.

Star member of the swimming team Canada sent to the Olympic games in 1928, Walter Spence came from his home in British Guiana to get into the Canadian swim again. He entered in free style and breast stroke sprints.

Unless an injured ankle responds to treatment Winnipeg Blue Bombers, last year's western Canada rugby champions, may lose the services of Fritz Hanson, ABOVE, sensational halfback, in the coming campaign. The ankle was injured in spring practices and thus far has failed to show improvement, although Hanson is confident he will be in shape by the fall.

Winnipeggers Return To Defend Title

KINGSTON, Ont., Aug. 6. — (CP).—The east gets a chance today to make up for the licking it took in the Canadian Canoe Association championships last year from a half-dozen bronzed giants of the west.

It was an unheard-of affair when Vice-Commodore Harold Harriman of the Winnipeg Canoe Club led his six giants into camp at Montreal and, after a few days' practice, they won the Association's aggregate championship for the first time. For more years than most people can remember the Winnipegers had never before been more than a minor threat.

But the odds the east can do anything about it on Cataraqui Canoe Club's course this afternoon are none too bright for all six of Winnipeg's 1937 crew are back, accompanied by 1 other western stalwarts whose home waters are those of the Red river. Seventeen such paddlers should be able to defned what only six won.

The east, nevertheless, has massed nearly 300 of its finest bladewielders and will send a full list into each of the 14 events. The westerners have entered 12 but easterners remember they won the aggregate last year in fewer events.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

AND SO the big series begins, the four out of seven games to settle the C.O.B.L. championship for 1938. Winnah hits into Ontario semi-finals, and loser calls it a season. The Petes are off today for Oshawa for the first fray, next chapter in this serial being presented at Riverside Park the following week-end. And so it goeth till out around Labor Day. Managers Eddie Murphy and Art Legge expect to toss in their southpaw artists, Frank McNally and Jake Biddle, for today's tussle. Quite a few fans from here will motor down the highway in the hopes of seeing a real baseball playoff, and a twirlers' duel. It would be pretty swelegant if the Petes started it off on the right foot and copped this initial number from the '37 champs. But we'll know late this afternoon.

* * * * * *

YOUNG PETES stayed in the semi-finals of the Lakeshore Junior Ball Loop last night here with a 9-6 nod over Cobourg. That evens up the serial, deciding game being in Cobourg on Monday, winner to meet Oshawa in loop finals. The first semi-final game went to Cobourg by a 10-3 count and it was protested on the grounds the grounds were not the right grounds, if ya follow us. However, the protest was tossed out on the grounds that the grounds used were the right grounds, if ya still follow us! To simplify it, Ralph claimed Horse Show Park was named for playoffs but Cobourg made him play at Victoria Park. Loop officials checked up and claim that the Horse show Park ruling was several years ago and does not apply this year. And so it goeth.

Young Petes Comb Cobourg

HOWEVER, last p.m. at Riverside the local junior ballsters tied the series up with some hard clouting behind Todd's neat twirling. Smith didn't bother the boys much and they got their runs in bunches. But so did Cobourg and it was a rather tight tussle till the last man was put out in the darkness that comes when you start games too late. Collins and Clark had three hits each for the winners as McNabb and Castle got two apiece, and Berwick a double. Girard hurt his leg and was robbed of a hit when he collapsed enroute to first in the initial inning. Stolen bases? Why, there were a million—anyway, over a dozen, by golly! Still 'twas an interesting fray and Monday's melee will be a hot one, we'll betcha.

OVER AT THE BOWL yesterday in the gloaming, C.G.E. damsels dumped Keene right out of the second-half playoffs with a 13-6 convincer. Which put C.G.E. and Westclox into this playoff series, starting this aft at four in the Bowl. But Keene, of course, won the first half so Ivan Fletcher's femmes will be around to play the C.G.E.-Westclox winnah in about a week. The Electrics earned the decision last night, playing good softball with A. Clarke pitching a fine game and getting aid at bat and in the field from her teammates. The fun really starts now with the playoffs underway. Yep, August is trail's end for many and many a team.

Aw, Draw Us Up a Map

MAPLE LEAFS of the Southend Softball Loop took an 11-3 win over Cogs at Brinton Field yester night, the Leafs and Quakers both assuring themselves of playoff spots with double wins the past week. Nats and Hawks again missed out in this half, which leaves Cogs, DeLaval, Keene and Little Harlem to fight it out for the third playoff place. If the three now tied lose their one remaining joust each and Keene loses to Leafs and defeat Little Harlem, a four-way tie will be created. Or have you a headache, too? Anyway, if playoffs to bust ties are needed they will be run off Thursday and Friday. If not, regular playoffs commence Friday. All managers should attend an executive meeting Wednesday at 8.30 to make final arrangements. Standing is in tonight.

ABOUT a thousand frantic fanatics at the George St. lacrosse arena saw a pip of a battle last night as the Petes copped a 13-6 O.L.A. senior "B" victory over Brooklin. And held their own in fist fights. It was as exciting a battle as predicted (see us for weather reports when planning picnics) in this pillar de piffle all week. A dandy scrap all the way. One semi-riot, a genuine fist fight, plenty of roughing it up and yet withal some swell lacrosse. Especially by the Petes who can really play when they want to do so. They flashed fine stickwork, covered their men like a tent and had the rival goalie bewildered at times. Worthy, Magee and Dundas starred, whilst Creighton in goal kicked out a bunch of tough ones. And the rest were about as good. Yep, they deserved the win.

Red Dimmed Shine Bovin

RED DALLIN was delegated to cover Shine Bovin and keep him from doing too much damage. Red did that little thing in a big way, sticking to Shine like a burr to a collie. It was getting Bovin's goat and, when Red accidentally clipped him on the beak through too close covering, the local got the gate. And Armour jumped him and several players and some fans got into it. Police broke it up finally. Dundas and Ormiston tossed fists once, too, with abandon. But Leighton turned in a peach of a refereeing chore, just the same. A game the fans won't forget in a hurry.

* * * * * *

AVERAGES for their C.O.B.L. schedule games have been published in the Oshawa paper, and probably the Petes' season marks will be run in this fambly journal during the coming week. Doc Rowden had a terrific season with the willow, belting the ball for a .556 average in five games. Lefty Wallace in seven games at first fielded 1.000 and hit .393 for a big year. Foley hit .357. Hurst didn't hit too well but fielded perfectly in the garden. Jake Biddle topped his buddy, Turner, on the mound. The GM-men hit .256 and fielded .993 as a club, these being quite respectable figures. Red Jubenville led the way in runs batted in, which is a most important task. Oshawa had six gents who batted .300 or better, Rowden, Miller, Wallace, Foley, Biddle and Bennett—though Miller was in only two tilts.

Aged Maxie Rosenbloom Thrills Crowd With His Game Stand Against Pastor

HOLLYWOOD, Calif., Aug. 6.—(AP)—If that old ring master really meant it when he promised to turn his back on the long fistic trial for the primrose path of flicker fame, then Maxie Rosenbloom has sufficient salve today for a battered and bruised mid-section.

For 30,000 persons who packed Gilmore Stadium last night wildly cheered the semi-bald veteran of 15 fight-laden years when Referee Abe Roth gave him a sentimental draw with youthful, yet clever, Bos Pastor.

Pastor punished old Maxie severely around the body. As early as the sixth round Rosenbloom's handlers were applying soothing ice to his body hurts, but the fickle film folk had no room in their hearts for youth last night.

They were to worship the art of a fellow thespian—to cheer as Maxie stroked his open glove across Pastor's face and to ridicule the audacious youth when he lashed out an opponent who had faded from range.

There were times when it seemed Maxie could not possibly stand the attack, yet he called on those tired legs and arms to stage a strong enough 10th round rally to catch the fancy of the crowd and the referee..

Chicago's 'King of Swing' In Golfdom Wins $30,000 Plantation In Bet

CHICAGO, Aug. 6 — (AP) — J. Smith Ferebee quietly slipped back into his role of successful young businessman today, but to the rest of the city he was golf's newly-crowned "Kink of Swing."

The 31-year-old investment broker swung it over Olympia Fields' four courses yesterday—playing 144 holes of golf in 15 hours and seven minutes to win complete ownership of a $30,000 Virginia plantation and $2,500 in side bets

In his amazing display of stamina, Ferebee played all eight, 18 hole rounds in 90 strokes and under, easily fulfilling the terms of a wager made with another Chicago businessman, Fred Tuerk, who bet his half interest in the Virginia property that Ferebee could not play all eight rounds, without slipping over 95 strokes on at least one of them.

The blond golfer had rounds of 90, 82, 82, 82, 87, 87, 88 and 89. His stroke total was 687, 119 strokes over par.

Wildness Costs Bobby Feller 6 to 1 Decision

NEW YORK, Aug. 6 (AP).—The jury is still out in the Feller case.

For a while it looked as though a verdict had finally been reached overwhelmingly in young Bobby's favor. But recent developments indicate the jurors just came back at that time for further instructions and another quick look.

Certainly young Bobby's work in recent weeks, say since about end of June, leaves him somewhat short of being all the Mathewsons and Johnsons rolled into one, as you were led to believe by the ballyhoo boys during the freshman and early sophomore days of Cleveland's cannon-baller.

In fact, his record of two victories (both against the lowly Athletics), four defeats and just three complete nine inning jobs in his nine starts since June 30, haven't made him even close to a howling success.

On top of that, he has the same weaknesses, the same tendencies to throw hog-wild at the plate and to fall asleep with runners on the bases behind him, as he had when they brought him out of the Iowa cornfields.

Falls to Yanks 6-1

That was what was wrong with him yesterday when he dropped a crucial 6-1 decision to the Yankees, which sent Gehrig and company 3½ games out in front of the American League race, certain of returning from their western trip leading the parade. Master Robert gave up just three hits in the seven innings he worked, but he walked 11 batters, twice passing three in a row, and he was the victim of five stolen bases.

There you have Bobby's trouble, and there you have the hopes of the tribe in the pennant chase. For, if Bobby continues off form, the tribe, with only Johnny Allen as a dependable hope (despite Mel Harder's comeback), isn't going places. Feller has given up an average of only nine hits per game since the end of June, but his earned-run average is somewhere between five and six—and that won't win an awful lot of ball games. True, he leads the league in strikeouts—but he is also far out in front in bases on balls.

Seeds Helps Giants

While the Yanks were stretching their lead behind Bump Hadley's five-hit flinging, the Giants pulled up a game closer to the National League pace by knocking off the 5-3, Bob Seeds' homer with a mate league-leading Pittsburgh Pirates aboard in the seventh finished that one off.

Paul Derringer became the National league's first 14-game winner as he hurled Cincinnati Reds to a 4-1 decision over the Dodgers, boosting the Rhinelanders into a tie for third place in the loop. Lon Warneke tossed a six-hitter and the Cardinals whitewashed the Phillies 3-0.

Joe Cronin's homer with the bases loaded featured Boston Red Sox Johnson, a rookie of 41 years, hurl-comeback to nip the Tigers 9-8. Fred ed St. Louis Browns to a 9-2 win over the Athletics.

The rest of the outfits in both leagues were idle.

Rotary-Kiwanis In 2-All Draw

Rotary and Kiwanis fought it out to a 2-2 tie last night in their midget lacrosse struggle at the George St. arena, before the senior tilt. Kiwanis got two in the first quarter. Carter scoring on Berardi's pass and Dyer tallying on an assist by Carter. Gillespie drew a penalty. There was no count in the second stanza and Hallihan drew the only penalty handed out. In the third, Hudson got a goal for Rotary and, after Roberts and doughty had been gated, O'Donnell tied up the score on Forsythe's pass. Neither team could break in the fourth and Murphy drew the only penalty. It was a good game for the kids with play being quite even all through. The teams:

Rotary: Goal, Shea defence, Roberts, Forsythe; centre, Hudson; wings, O'Connell, Horton rover, Batley; subs, Weaver, McBain, Cox, Foster.

Referee, H. Pammett.

Brampton Here On Monday Eve

Brampton and the Petes tangle here this Monday evening at nine o'clock in the George St. arena in an O.L.A. senior "B" fixture. It will be the first local fixture staged at home early in the week in a long time, and should draw a good crowd of fans. After seeing the highly interesting and exciting battle put on by the Petes and Brooklin here last night, the followers of the gutted-stick sport will be anxious to see another round of such keen action, with fights probably thrown in.

Both Brampton and the Petes are settling down to playing the game in earnest now with the schedule over half over, and both clubs will be fighting for a win. While the locals are favored to cop the nod, the Bramptonites have a good lineup and may surprise them. At anyrate, it will be an entertaining early-in-the-week melee. The senior struggle will probably be again preceded by a midget fixture.

Inside Sportin' Dope

BY A. WISE CRACKER

Mister Sporting Editor:

Well, Mac, although they aint been much league activity in these parts recently our sr. ball club has been providing us with a nice amount of entertainment what with the House of Davids playing here twice and Mister Knotty Lee's hired help dropping in for a friendly visit Wed. We succeeded in pinning the ears of the wihskered bozoes twice in a row playing under the lights and while we didn't take the Canadian-Amrican leaguers we give them a nice battle and wasn't outclassed by the gang what don't do nothing else but play ball for a living. We got just as many blows as they did but our well-known weakness of not sticking the lams in where they would do the most good kinda spoiled our chances. However the lads done some smart fielding and our pitching wasn't no setup for the slugging visitors what didn't fatten their averages much at the expense of our throwers.

Mister Lee has a coupla ball players which seem on their way up. There's a tall Pole on the 1st sack by the Irish monicker, Hurley, what certainly is a ball player and out in right field is a lad named Gradiastis which I wish was in our cleanup position for the serious with Oshawa. He takes a cut at a ball like he was going to break up a game everytime he connects and I believe we could make room for him on our lineup.

Pulled 2 Crowds

The games with the House of David pulled 2 big crowds what sat till midnight watching the home talent win them both The Sat. nite fixture was a queer affair with them getting 8 runs in the 2nd to kinda put the game in the bag and us coming back with 8 in the 8th to pull it out again. Our Mister McNally went good outside the 1 frame, and we finally win 11 and 10.

Monday night she was something else again. The boys had found their bearings by that time and they played smart afield while Mister Kitchen was smoking a fast ball under the visitors 'whiskers or loping a curve around the end of their bats and the result was the Murphyites was in front all the way through, although they only won 6 and 5 when the travelling outfit staged a 9th frame rally and pushed in 3 runs.

Playoffs Is Next

Now it is the playoffs with Oshawa and it oughta be a great serious between 2 well-balanced outfits. The Petes is playing better ball right now than at any time this season, getting good fielding and smart pitching and if they can only put the desired punch into their attack they aint no reason I can see why they can't take the GM-men nicely. The 2nd game of the serious will be here next Saturday and it should oughta be a lulu.

Not much doing in the big show this week, Mac. The Yanks is still holding their lead in the American loop and that ½ of the Wisecracker prediction looks O.K. I can't say so much for the National loop where the Giants has been doing a tail spin but I still think they is going to snap out of it in time.

Meanwhile they aint nothing I kin do about it.

Sportfully yours,
A. WISE CRACKER.

Allison-Parker In Final Set For Net Title

TORONTO, Aug. 5—(CP). — Ten years ago, Wilmer Allison, a rising young Texas star at the age of 24, came to the Canadian tennis championships and won the men's singles title.

Four years later, Frankie Parker, a 16-year-old Polish boy from the public courts of Milwaukee, stepped into Ottawa to steal the spotlight from established players as he captured the same title.

A lot of tennis has been played in the intervening years. The Perrys, the Vines and the Budges have been around. The fates have been kind and not so kind to the tall, laughing Texan and the lithe, dark-skinned Milwaukee youngster.

For two years Allison was top-ranking player in the United States; then he hit the skids and almost gave up the game. Parker continued his sensational rise, then stopped at a level just below the summit.

Allison Vs. Parker.

To-day Allison and Parker meet in the Canadian singles final at what each hopes will be a turning point in his career. Allison wants to get back into the big-tournament picture. Parker thinks Don Budge will turn professional within a year and he would like to replace Budge as the United States' ranking player.

There wasn't a doubt yesterday but that both had progressed toward thei rambitions. They won their semi-final matches at the Canadian championships over the Dominion's two best players in breath-taking fashion.

Allison stepped into Bobby Murray's fine, all-around game with the terrific volleying that made him great, defeating the player ranked No. 1 in Canada last year 6-0, 6-1, 0-6, 6-1. Parker, changing from retriever to aggressor, hammered down the aggressive style of Ross Wilson, No. 2 in Canada last year, 6-1 6-1, 6-1.

Afterward Alison and Parker stepped to the court together to reach the men's doubles final together through a 6-2, 6-3, 8-6 victory over Carl Fischer and Bob Madden of Detroit. Allison and his wife entered the mixed doubles final by defeating Mrs. W. R. Walton, Jr., and Bruce Hall of Toronto 6-3, 6-1.

Allison and Parker will face Laird Watt of Montreal and Murray, who eliminated the brilliant young Vancouver pair of Bill Pedlar and Phil Pearson, 7-5, 6-2, 2-6, 6-3.

Beat Cobourg With Rally In Seventh

Young Petes evened up the semi-final playoff series in the Lakeshore Junior Baseball League last night here with a 9-6 win over Cobourg before a few hundred fans at Riverside Park. Cobourg had won the first game (a local protest being thrown out) and the homesters' win last night forces a third game in Cobourg on Monday.

It was a hammer-and-tongs tilt last evening with both sides getting their runs in bunches and the issue in doubt till the last out as dusk settled. Cobourg got three runs in the first, with the locals getting three in their half. The Young Petes took a lead with two in the second and one in the third, but Cobourg sewed it up with two markers in the fifth and one in the sixth. However, Herb Ralph's gang had enough punch this time to drive in three tallies in the seventh to gain the nod.

Smith on the visitors' slab was no mystery to the Petes, who reached him for 14 safeties and a walk as he fanned five. Todd twirled good ball most of the way for the locals, though nicked for a few hits in bunches. He gave up 11 bingles and three walks, while striking out nine. The fielding was mostly good, though a few costly bobbles were tossed in on each side. Catches by the three home outfielders were features.

Leading Hitters

Zealand, Woods and Blastorah led the losers at bat with two safe raps each, Woods and Wilkins hitting two-baggers. For the winners, Collins had three for three, while Clark got three in four times, and McNabb and Castle collected two hits each. Berwick bingled out a double. There were a flock of stolen bases on each side.

Two walks and three singles, with an error and two steals gave Cobourg their trio in the first. Hits by Clark, McNabb and Stanley with a miscue, passed ball, balk and an out figured in the second on hits by Castle, Clark in the Petes' first three. They got two and McNabb with two pilfered sacks. Girard scored in the third on an error, sacrifice, steal and hit by Collins. Girard left the game then with a sore leg, which robbed him of a hit in the first when he fell down running.

Cobourg collected two runs in the fifth on a single, error and double by Woods. One more counted in the sixth when Wilkins doubled and raced in on a hit by Zealand. The locals won with three in the seventh on singles by Kelly, Collins and Castle with a double by Berwick and a double steal.

Police Use Gas To Rout Doukhobors

NELSON, B.C., Aug. 5—(CP).—British Columbia police hurled tear gas bombs yesterday to disperse a group of Doukhobors at nearby Brilliant, B.C., who were milling around the office of the Christian Community of Universal Brotherhood Limited. Inspector C. G. Barber said the tear gas was used to prevent a clash between the Doukhobors and police.

A disturbance climaxed several days of unrest in which two Doukhobor buildings were burned. It was understood the demonstrating Doukhobors demanded the discharge of officers of the Christian Community of Universal Bortherhood, which manages the affairs of the religious sect.

Police were called to the scene when between 400 and 500 Doukhobors, including some members of the Sons of Freedom, an independent group, held a meeting in the apple shed of the Brilliant jam factory and later massed outside the office.

They refused to leave at the request of officials of the National Trust Company, receivers under foreclosure proceedings against the Community Company, and adopted "passive resistance" when ordered to move on by police. The crowd scattered when tear gas bombs were thrown.

Want Directors Ousted.

Those attending the meeting demanded the dismissal of Community Company directors. Wednesday night a group told members of the staff at the Brilliant office to leave and later padlocked the store and office.

Guards were set around the factory buildings last night to prevent possible sabotage. Last Monday a Doukhobor school at nearby Pass Creek was destroyed by fire and 24 hours later a Doukhobor church at nearby Thrums was burned.

Police said they believed the fire to be of incendiary origin.

Several meetings were held recently at Brilliant following the return from Saskatchewan of Peter Verigin, spiritual leader of the Russian sect.

It was understood the majority of the demonstrators were not connected with the Christian Community. The dispute was described as the result of internal troubles among the independent Doukhobors, who number several thousands.

Their residence in British Columbia has been marked by bombings, fires, nudist demonstrations and other disorders.

Charge New York Jurists Involved In Racket-Busting Trial

New York foresees a major political scandal with the naming by District Attorney Thomas Dewey of his predecessor in office and of two city magistrates, one deceased, as allegedly having been bribed, intimidated or influenced by metropolitan racketeers. The names were published in an indictment in the case of James J. Hines, Tammany leader, accused of participation in a huge policy racket. Justice Ferdinand Pecora, new dealer, brushing aside arguments of Hines' defence counsel, Lloyd Paul Stryker, ordered a special "blue ribbon" jury for Hines' trial, August 15. Meanwhile, J. Richard (Dixie) Davis, one-time lawyer for the late Dutch Schultz and accused with Hines and two others in the policy racket case, has turned state's evidence in the prosecution of Hines. William C. Dodge was the former district attorney named, and Magistrate Hugh Capshaw, a jurist from the social register, has been suspended from his duties pending investigation of the charges. The trial is the latest of Dewey's racket-busting efforts.

Gold Shares End Slightly Up On Week's Deals

TORONTO, Aug. 6.—(CP)—Canadian stock markets finally subsided into normal mid-summer lassitude in the last week, to stir only spasmodically in response to the play of international forces on currencies and gold. The Toronto gold share index came through with a net gain of 1.41 in the exchange index and industrial shares posted a minor advance while base metals and western oils took light net losses.

McIntyre and Dome advanced to new high prices for the year and one of the newer group, Pickle Crow, also advanced to a new high for the year, adding 40 cents in the week. Dome held a gain of 75 cents and McIntyre was up $1 for the period.

A profit-taking wave affected the penny issues and many that looked promising a week or more ago wilted on the hands of those who had bought on the "street" news that certain pools were ready to give them a run. Preston East Dome continued to trade in substantial volume and the price settled down around 1.70 to 1.75 against a recent high of $1.90. Yesterday's closing price of 1.72 showed a gain of 12 cents for the week.

Waite-Amulet, the July feature gainer, added to the grief of its followers by plunging down 80 cents more during the week, closing yesterday at $6.80 compared with a recent high price of $8.50.

While the small turnover in the industrial section suggested absence of buyers, partly accounted for by the call of the summer resorts, the stability of prices suggested an equal absence of sellers. Some of the steels, notably National Steel Car, continued to draw support from the contemplation of more business from the British war department and some of the paper, building and food stocks ventured into higher ground. Building products came through with a gain of $4.50 to close yesterday at $60.

CAVAN, August 5.—On Tuesday afternoon the postponed picnic under the auspices of Cavan Women's Institute was held. The first date set, Thursday afternoon, had to be given up on account of the severe rainstorm.

The sport program commenced in William Pritchard's woods at 3 p.m., where the young people enjoyed the water, while the older members of the group enjoyed the shade of the trees. A contest to see who could drop the most clothes' pegs, out of six, into a container smaller at the top than the bottom, and placed on the ground was won by Gwenyth Staples.

An egg race (carrying an egg a certain distance on a spoon) was won by John Tinney. An egg race for the seniors was won by Ruth Braithwaite. A time race was won by Frazer Carr. A backwards race by Ronald Moncrief, and a relay race for the ladies by Norma Gillis' team. The last sport item was a game for all, "Passing the ball."

Baby Dead One Hour—Lives Again

Mrs. Margaret Didier, Chicago mother, has reason to smile as she clasps her three-month-old son, Robert. A few hours before the baby apparently had suffocated as the parents were driving to Chicago from a nearby lake. Miraculously artificial respiration and adrenalin brought the child back into the land of the living. Baby Didier was apparently dead for over an hour after stifling in his blankets on the back seat of the Didier family automobile.

Czechs To Fight Before Giving Nazis Autonomy

(Copyright of the Havas News Agency)

PRAHA, Aug. 6—(CP-Havas).—Determination that any concessions made to the Sudeten German minority shall not imperil Czecho-Slothe Czechoslovak people's Catholic to the Havas correspondent today by leaders of five of the six government coalition parties asked to give their opinions of the unofficial mediatory mission of Viscount Runciman.

While the sixth coalition group the Cbeshoslovak people's Catholic party, failed to reply to the question, its executive committee had expressed dissatisfaction with the present situation, for which it blamed "responsible leaders."

Lord Runciman, a former president of the British Board of Trade, who arrived here Wednesday, last night conferred for an hour and a half with Sudeten German party leaders, who handed him a written memorandum listing their demands.

"The national union party will not hesitate to risk a conflict rather than agree to disorganize the state by giving territorial autonomy to the Sudetens," said M. Hodac, president of this party, which represents the banks and large industries and has 14 members in the lower house of parliament.

Germany Needs Materials

He said Germany has great need for raw materials and cannot develop naturally if Central Europe is closed to her, Hodac declared.

"We are ready to collaborate with the Reich within the framework of a greater Central Europe—with Poland, Italy and the other Danubian countries," he added. "But Czechoslovakia must remain politically independent and strong, and must collaborate with the western powers.

"Carrying out of the proposals of Konrad Henlein would weaken Czechoslovakia politically and lead to dismemberment of the state, making it impossible for the central authorities to function normally," he said.

Hodac expressed the belief that with the collaboration of the western powers it will be possible to work out a compromise reaffirming a balance of power.

Corrigan Welcomed

NEW YORK.—Even Corrigan-minded readers of the New York Post, glancing at the eight-column headline on the front page, blinked hard and wondered if their eyes had gone wrong. Then they grimmed. "!nagirroc yaw gnorw ot liah," it said.

Grounds Are Improved For Exhibition

Peterborough is becoming aware of the near approach of its own Industrial Exhibition, and to the people of the city and county and neighboring district a new challenge is held out in the opportunity to co-operate with the directors and exhibitors in raising this year's Exhibition to a higher level of all round success than ever.

The directors have held monthly meetings since last September, attending all through the winter, preparing the program for the first Exhibition in their new status as actual owners of the grounds they had so long leased.

The gift of Harold A. Morrow of the Valuable property with the long frontage on Lansdowne street had only one attaching condition. The Park is the possession of the Exhibition as long as it continues to be used for agricultural purposes. And the chief purpose of the Exhibition, in fact the only one, is the promotion of agriculture in all its branches, together with allied industry, in this county and district.

The Exhibition of last year in its satisfactory financial returns enabled the directors to reduce their personal financial liability for its maintenance. The directors have endeavored this year to show their appreciation of Mr. Morrow's gift by improvements to the grounds and buildings within the limits of their present means.

Hope For Record Attendance

It remains now for the public generally to give their personal support in a larger measure than ever during the middle week of August in demonstrating on their part that Harold A. Morrow's interest and confidence in the Exhibition and the county and district as a whole was well founded. That can be done chiefly by an aggregate attendance during the four days from the 17th to the 20th that will set a new record. That is the most practical manner in which the public can show their goodwill to the directors and to the donor of the Exhibition Park.

In the meantime, don't forget that four automobiles are going to be given to four persons holding lucky tickets which are going to be handed out by merchants to purchasers of goods on the same basis as last year. All you have to do is ask for tickets at the stores which are distributing them.

And another reminder is that the advance sale of tickets is a bargain, and a comparatively cheap way of obtaining admission to the Exhibition that is essential to be on hand when President Tom Brown draws out on lucky ticket on each of the four nights.

Lightning Caused Heavy Fire Loss

Lightning caused nearly all the loss to buildings, contents and livestock for which settlement exceeded $8,000 for the month of July, the heaviest month's loss in the history of the Farmers' Union Mutual Insurance Company.

Directors of this mutual company at a meeting Friday reviewed their July experience, approving payments to policy-holders who had suffered property losses during the month. The Examiner was informed to-day that electrical storms accounted for nearly the total of $8,000.

Canadian Legion Notes

It is again our sad duty to report another death in the ranks of ex-service men. Comrade W. Brady passed on on Tuesday last and was interred in Little Lake Cemetery on Thursday. Comrades P. King, C. Stewart, G. Moore and A. Carpenter represented the Post Office as bearers and Comrades H. Wilford and W. Gracie representing the Canadian Legion. The sympathy of the Canadian Legion is extended to the bereaved family. The Canadian Corps Reunion has again become a thing of the past, and if all accounts are true many of our comrades had a most hilarious time, but not after Tuesday morning when a fat head and a bad taste were the common ailments.

Will the members of the entertainment and recreation committees please take notice that a meeting of the joint committee will be held on Wednesday next August 10th at 7.30 p.m. and it is hoped that all members will make it a point to attend.

Owing to the sickness of one of the judges in the garden competition the judging of the gardens will not take place till the early part of the coming week.

Won At Belleville

COMPOSED PRIORY MUSIC

Frederick G. Mann, organist of St. John's Church, composed the dignified harmonies for the ritual of the Sovereign Great Priory of Canada of the United Order of the Temple and Malta whose fifty-fifth annual assembly was held in St. John, N.B., this week. Mr. Mann is Eminent Grand Organist of the Grand Priory.

ANOTHER BIG MUSKIE.

F. Imming and Harry Luck paraded down Water street this morning carrying a beautiful maskinonge that weighed exactly twenty pounds. It was positively amusing to see the expression of surprise that was registered by an Ohio tourist who stopped the pair of fishermen enquiring as to where such fish could be caught. Imming, who landed the fighter, was casting with a Rainbow plug made by Williams Bait Co. of this city and he was fishing from a canoe below the Waterworks dam in the Otonabee river. It is his third lunge this week and all were caught between the city and Nassau in the river.

FOUR U.S. VISITORS.

The Kiwanis Club's luncheon on Friday took on an international atmosphere with the attendance of four Kiwanians from the United States as well as several U.S. officials of General Motors, accompanying the Previews of Progress show, who were guests of the club. Club members sang the National Anthem, followed it was the U.S. National Anthem, which they sang through with never a bit of hesitation. The U.S. Kiwanians were H. J. Johnston of New Kensington, Penna., president of that city's Kiwanis club; George Whittaker of Youngstown, Ohio, R. B. Adams of Cleveland, Ohio, and Howard Hawkins of East Cleveland. All are holidaying in this district.

DISCHARGED AS A MINOR

A recent item in the Examiner regarding the enlistment of Harry Holbrook in the Canadian Expeditionary Force at the age of 13 years and 8 months, as reported by a friend of his, is verified by official records seen by a reporter today. Mr. Holbrook is now living on Townsend street. His birth certificate shows that he was born at Apsley on June 23, 1902, son of James Holbrook and his wife Hannah Shouldice, (nee Wilson). He enlisted in the 93rd battalion on December 21, 1915 and after reaching England and France was sent back to Canada and discharged at Kingston March 5, 1918, because he was still a minor. He was discharged with a notation of good conduct after more than two years and two months in the army.

NO DEEP DIVING.

Children who use the newly erected wading pool at Jackson Park are warned not to dive from atop the bridge overlooking the pool. Water in the pool is only three feet deep and Kiwanians warn parents to see that their children refrain from diving into it.

NEVER MISSED IN 10 YEARS

When Kiwanian R. B. Adams of Cleveland, who attended the Peterborough Kiwanis club's luncheon on Friday, related that he had an almost unbeatable record, he reckoned without Kiwanian Al Sharpe of the Peterborough Club. Mr. Adams said he had not missed a Kiwanis luncheon in eight years. Al Sharpe has not missed one in ten years.

Restaurant Man Is Fined $23.05

Use of a maple syrup substitute without publishing the fact on a printed menu cost a well-known proprietor of a George street restaurant $23.05 in police court.

Magistrate Langley, in announcing a fine of $10 and $13.05 costs, stated that the Maple Syrup Industry Act was devised to protect an important natural industry in this country. It requires that if the word maple is used as, for instance, in the product name "maple walnut sundae," and the maple element is not pure, in that case the fact that a maple compound or substitute is used must be printed on the menu in relation to the word "maple."

W. B. Gordon for the defendant asked that a nominal fine be imposed because "it was a matter of ignorance on the part of the proprietor." The penalty under the act goes up to a maximum of $300.

Magistrate Langley said a fine of $10 would probably serve the purpose of this case, but he also said the Federal Government had sent out notices to business men who use maple products, and apparently they paid little attention to the official circulars issued as part of the campaign to protect the maple syrup industry.

Jacob Lowe represented Federal Department of Agriculture.

DIES EVE OF 100TH BIRTHDAY

MORRISBURG.—Mrs. Elen Margaret Phifer, who would have been 100 years old to-day, died at the home of her daughter here yesterday. She was Morrisburg's oldest citizen.

Spanish Youth Broken By War Visiting City

Describing himself as a Spanish refugee, a discharged pilot of the Government's air force, a young man of 24 who said his name was Rudolf Alfonso sat for a while in the Examiner office Friday afternon, and related sketchily some of the experiences from which he emerged with scars of multiple machine gun wounds and the permanent stripes of floggings from the time he was shot down and taken prisoner in the Toledo sector on August 1, 1937, until he an dten others escaped from a dungeon by killing seven of their guards.

A long ugly wound in his left thigh that seemed only recently healed has left him lamed for life. There were others on the ankle, on both arms, and along the waist line on the front of his body. On his arms, too, were thin almost white lines that stood out against his dark, olive skin, indelible marks of the lash, he briefly explained. On his back he made a gesture to pull his shirt, but a girl stood nearby glancing over some of the exchange newspapers, and he left to the imagination the welts that leather and wire had raised. But, a glance over clippings from some of the places he had recently visited, Lindsay among the latest, told sufficiently of the cruel pains his back had borne at the hands of some vicions flogger certainly far remote from pesceful Peterborough and Lindsay.

Alfonso told a cursory story of having been in Barcelona when the Spanish war broke out, of his two years as a medical student in the University of Madrid, of the deaths of his father and mother and some of the other members of his family by a bomb in an air raid over Barcelona where he was born.

And as he spoke, in fairly good English which he said he learned at the University, and the noisy motor traffic flowed along on Hunter Street, and a girl of the Examiner staff stood casually reading nearby some of the other newspapers of Ontario, of Thursday's publication, he seemed somehow as remote as the inconceivable barbarism that is the war in Spain and that has left him maimed and marked for the rest of his days. His scars are not only of his body but also of his spirit, for he said that with his parents gone he had nothing left to live for.

There were gaps which might have been filled in by enquiry, why, after reaching Marseilles he had come to America. He was through the southern States, addressed various audiences, made his way north into Ontario, and is now heading to Vancouver because this country is too cold, even our midsummer. And from Vancouver he hopes to get a boat to Panama where it is more like the weather of Spain, and from there probably turn his steps back to his native land.

Grant the truth of the recital of his recent odyasey, and the veracity of the evidence of his wounds as he accounted for them, all he said and the more he could have related seemed to make but little impression as of an old tale as strangely incredible as seems all the inhumanity, the savagery of two years civil strife and slaughter in Spain.

Two years and more of cabled press reports had told the same unbelievable story day after day, unbelievable but still authentic, if lacking the personal emphasis of Alfonsos scars and stripes. After reading the late Professor Unanmuno's declaration to the world, a long time ago it seems, although probably not much more than a year ago, in which hesaid that civilization was being destroyed in Spain and that his country was full of madmen, phrases to that effect, Unamuno one of the radicals who had fostered the "leftism" that broke up into anadchism, syndicalism and the other shades of red doctrine, after that, what more could a broken youth like Alfonso add to the Spanish horror, even if every word he said was true?

As a credential he showed a letter of introduction dated Ottawa July 16, 1938, and signed by Lionel Scheffer, O.M.I., presumably a priest of the parish of the Sacred Heart. Probably he had others, and certainly his body shows the signatures of war and of brutal scourgings. And two hatred he carries with him, one of Hitler, and the other of Alfonso, the former king of whom he said "If I could kill him with a knife I would gladly do so; but his wife the Queen, she is a fine woman."

So this young stranger in a strange land and city, went on his way, first to Port Hope where he hoped to visit a doctor who, he said, had studied medicine some years ago in Madrid, and eventually back to Spain? If the Government wins the war he feels certain of an assured future, something to look forward to; if not, oh well, that may be still far away. One thing he said, "the Spanish people will always hate Hitler. They can never forgive the Germans." Apparently Franco's Italian's allies were secondary in his hymn of hate.

William Toole was mayor of Peterborough from 1875 to 1878 and today his grand-daughter, Margaret Toole, Winnipeg school teacher and a visitor at the home of Gus White on King street, is one of Peterborough's greatest boosters as a holiday centre.

"The Westerners have an idea that all the Easterners are reserved in their manner," Miss Toole remarked, "but this does not hold true in Peterborough. I have never visited any place where the people are so genuinely friendly. Naturally I have a personal interest in the city because my grandfather was mayor and because my dad lived the first 17 years of his life here, but even aside from this, I enjoy every minute spent here and of all the places where I have spent my holidays, I like this city the best."

The late William Toole operated a planing mill on Murray street near Aylmer and after holding office as chief magistrate of the city for four years, left in 1883 to go west, after the mill burned down.

His son, also named William Toole, was successful as a heating and plumbing contractor. He came to Peterborough again during old home week in 1929 with his daughter Margaret. Since that time Margaret has returned four times. Her father passed away two years ago.

Mr. and Mrs. Gus White were for many years close friends of Miss Toole's father and now the daughter is a welcome guest whenever she chooses to visit the King street residence.

Hard Boiled Eggs Interfere With Program Of Preview of Progress

THREE hard boiled eggs interferred with the smooth working program of Previews of Progress in its second showing in the Exhibition Grounds last night.

The veteran commentator Foss conducting the usual experiment of frying an egg in a cold pan suspected something was amiss when he reached into a bag for an egg, attempted to break it on the edge of the frying pan, only to find it as hard as rubber. With a smile and a bow to his audience he set the egg aside, took another but again the shiny white egg resisted all efforts to break it open. Andy Rutter standing on the sidelines with a happy smile on his face was amazed when Foss turned a fierce look in his direction, the latter suspecting that Andy knew the mystery of the eggs and was grinning about it. Even the third egg resisted the scientist's efforts to crack it open, and he took one more chance, being successful when the fourth egg, cracked easily and flowed into the pan like any well behaved egg should.

At the conclusion of the program Foss called his assistants together and started to enquire as to where the eggs had come from. At this moment a south end grocer arrived and stepping up to one of the crew asked if he were the one who had bought six eggs earlier that night. When the answer was yes, the grocer remarked, "I'm very sorry but I took three hard boiled eggs out of the refrigerator by mistake and gave you the three to complete the half dozen. I brought six more over to make it right." And thus the mystery of the three eggs was promptly solved while Andy and the crew roared with laughter.

Insurance adjustors are busy in the area visited by the disastrous storm last week looking over the damage done to the buildings which were in the storm's path. None of these buildings were struck by lightning, and only one farmer in the district, it is understood, carried insurance against wind and hurricane.

Albert Meehan, a former Emily boy, who suffered the loss of his left arm recently when he was hit by a Chrysler truck in the city of Detroit has been awarded $50,000 by a Detroit Federal Court, presided over by Judge O'Brien. Mr. Meehan was represented by his uncle, Joseph D. Ryan, attorney, of Chicago, who is also a former resident of Emily township.

At a session of the police court Friday a boy and a girl, Duncan Scott, of Toronto, and Mary Chewter, of St. Boniface, Man., were charged with vagrancy. They were found wandering on the road near Manilla by the police. The youth was sentenced to ten days in the county jail and the girl allowed to go on suspended sentence. The purpose of the sentence was to separate the pair, Magistrate Gee stated.

New Mauretania Is Launched

A mighty successor to the famed ocean liner S.S. Mauretania, slides down the ways at Birkenhead, England, as the second ocean giant of that name is launched by the Cunard-White Star Line. A crowd of 10,000, including high government officials, witnessed christening of the new ship at the Camell Laird shipyards at Birkenhead. The 33,000-ton ship is here seen slipping toward the ocean while the crowd roars its approval.

Huckleberries Are Going To Waste On Bushes In Local Townships

The huckleberry bushes in the northern and eastern townships of Peterborough County are loaded with big fruit going to waste, Bill Saltern of Dummer Township told The Examiner this morning.

"You can pick them by the handfull," Mr. Saltern said, explaining the abundance of the fruit on today's market selling at 11 quarts for one dollar. "I never saw a bigger crop, and the fruit is big, full and clean, and at that price there is certainly no money in it for the picker. You walk four or five miles over rocks and in the heat, and then you have got to have the fruit in good appearance to sell. We certainly earn that bit of money, and I don't think there is any better fruit grown. It ripens in the sun and it must be chuck full of them there vitamines. Put that in if you are saying anything about it, and it ought to be true, because everything comes from the sun. And if there's these vitamines in oranges from California and so on, they must be in the huckleberries of Belmont and Burleigh and Methuen."

Mr. Saltern was only one of about a score of pickers who loaded this morning's market with the berries, and from all appearance of the supply they were going to be lucky if they sold it all without having to fall back on the door to door peddling.

FICTION AND FEATURES

TWO WORLDS

BY MAUD McCURDY WELCH

READ THIS FIRST:

Determined to show Dr. Julian Paige, the man she is in love with, that she can make her own way in the world, Noel Shayne, wealthy society girl, burns her bridges behind her, moves to a rooming house and, for lack of anything better, obtains a job as a taxi dancer which she feels will be only temporary. She is living with a girl named Laurie Evans whom she met in the park. Noel feels she has a dangerous rival in Ruth Chester, Julian's pretty nurse, who has been antagonistic. Noel is alarmed when one of the men with whom she dances at the Peacock seems to recognize her and almost discloses her identity to Nick Luigi, the proprietor.

CHAPTER 9

AFTER SEEING Julian and Ruth Chester walking gaily down Madison street, Noel didn't feel hungry any more. She managed to swallow some coffee but hardly touched the sandwich she had ordered.

When she started home, a dismal rain was falling. So Noel had to run most of the way. When she reached the room, her clothes were dampened as well as her spirits.

"Noel, why didn't you wait until the rain was over?" Laurie scolded her tenderly.

Right away Laurie began taking off Noel's coat, shaking it, and placing it on a hanger. Then she made her slip into a bath robe, while she made her a cup of tea into which she placed a slice of lemon.

"You think of everything, don't you?" Noel said, already feeling some of the tightness in her throat beginning to dissolve. The tea was hot and very good. When Noel had finished it, she looked about her from the hard wooden rocker in which Laurie had placed a pillow. "What have you been doing?"

Laurie had the curtains down and had them soaking in the bathroom. The windows had been washed, the one facing Court street, and the other one on the side which faced a tall brick building, which cut off all the light from that direction.

And actually Laurie had been down on her knees and had scrubbed the floor and the woodwork around the faded rug. "I'll get to the rug the next day the sun shines," she said.

"What will you do to it?" Noel said looking at the faded Axminster with distate.

"I'll get a brush and some hot soap suds. You'll be surprised how it'll look. It probably hasn't been cleaned, or even dusted since—since King Tut wore short pants."

Noel laughed. Then her expression grew serious. "You didn't get a job, and neither did I. I don't believe there are any in the whole world."

"Of course there are jobs. We'll run one down before long," Laurie assured her in a hopeful voice.

But the next day came and passed exactly as the one before. Both girls came home in the late afternoon discouraged. Laurie's brown eyes were not only discouraged, but they looked sad. Noel had noticed several times before that often, when Laurie was of-guard, an expression of sadness would creep into her face. Noel somehow didn't believe it was altogether because they needed to find work so very much. There was some other reason why Laurie often felt sad. But she couldn't ask her about it. Too much like prying.

A little past 6 Noel was called to the telephone. She hadn't given Julian her street address, but he had insisted on having her telephone number. He was calling her now, wanted her to meet him at the De Luxe for dinner.

Noel's feet fairly had wings as she walked to the cafe. Julian was already there, sitting at a table, glancing over a paper when she arrived.

He explained as soon as she was seated at the table that he had been called to a New Orleans hospital on a case, and didn't know how long he'd be gone. "And so I wanted to see you before leaving," he finished.

"You won't be gone too long, will you?" Noel asked in a voice that was not quite steady.

"Not a minute longer than I can help," he told her with a smile. Then he said, "I hate leaving you, Noel, because I've still got you on my conscience. You're a very stubborn little girl not to go back where you belong."

"I wish you'd stop worrying about me," she said throatily. "I assure you that I'm—I'm perfectly all right. And I'll keep on being that way."

"But will you? How can I feel assured of that?" Julian asked, his dark eyes troubled.

Noel tried to meet his eyes with a smile. Then she said, hating herself for the deception. "You see, I—have a—the job."

Julian's expression lightened. "Well, that is better." He took it for granted that she meant the governess place she had mentioned before. "At least I can be sure you are where you'll be protected, and kept out of mischief," he finished with a smile. Then he began questioning her rather closely. "Is the work hard? The child easy to manage? The hours—not too long?"

"Pul-lease, one at a time," Noel evaded. Then she murmured something about the hours being very pleasant, and the work easy enough. Then she changed the subject. "Is Ruth going with you to New Orleans?" She simply had to know, though of course she should not have asked.

Julian shook his head. "If I need her, I may send for her later. She's invaluable to me in certain cases."

"Yes, I know," Noel murmured. She was thinking to herself half-angrily and half-laughingly, "She has no earthly right to be so pretty and so darned efficient, too."

It was almost as if Julian read her thoughts for he said, with his nice whimsical smile, "She's really the most capable and dependable nurse in town. It's just purely accidental that she happens to be pretty too."

"Oh, you've noticed that, have you?" Noel derided.

Julian gave a boyish laugh. "Ruth Chester looks upon me just as impersonally as I do her. You may be sure of that."

Noel lifted her brows ironically. Did Julian actually believe that?

Then Julian smiled and said something that made her heart quicken. "You need never worry about another woman's beauty, my dear. None can compare with yours."

"Yes, yes, go on," she teased, her voice a little shaky. Then she said in a low voice. "But I happen to know that mere beauty is the cheapest commodity on the market today. So that—puts us right back where we started, doesn't it?"

Julian smiled enigmatically at that. A few minutes later they said goodby.

Two hours later Noel was dancing at the Peacock.

Several days passed and nothing had changed. But Noel could see that she herself was changing. Studying her face one morning in the mirror of the cheap dresser with its drawers which were forever getting stuck and refusing to be opened, Noel saw that her face was thinner which made her blue eyes look larger, even a little hollow. It was necessary for her to use a great deal more rouge at night now when she dressed for dancing at the Peacock.

But the work wasn't so hard there as it had been, for Noel had become accustomed to dancing with all kinds of different partners. There were not any more scenes like the one with the strangely determined red-haired young man, but Noel was still conscious of Luigi's ever watchful eyes. And every night it seemed as if the place grew more hateful to her.

She and Laurie were having their troubles also at the rooming house. For the rent was overdue, and Mrs. Blarsom had reminded them of it in curt, demanding tones.

Noel had looked at her in stricken silence. As usual, it was Laurie who took charge of the matter. "We haven't the money today, Mrs. Blarsom," she said placatingly, "but we —hope to have it soon."

"Do you think I can pay MY rent with hopes?" the woman exclaimed angrily.

"But we'll pay you honestly we will," Laurie insisted.

"Promises don't pay bills, either," the woman returned. But she left saying that she would give them until the day after tomorrow to get the money.

Noel looked at Laurie, who said with a slow emphasis, "We'll simply have to duck out, I guess, if we can't get the money."

Noel didn't understand what that meant. So Laurie explained. "We'll have to pack our things and slip out in the middle of the night, so we won't be caught."

Noel grew a little sick at the thought. Laurie looked at her and said, "Listen, honey, if we can't pay her, she'll take our clothes and put us on the street. How'd you like to be walking around with nothing but the clothes on your back?"

"I'd hate it," Noel said with a sudder.

The trouble was Mrs. Blarsom had served notice on the two girls that the rent would be raised to $7 a week, since there were two of them now occupying the room. It was an outrageous price, and that was why they hadn't been able to manage to pay it. Food for two people and incidentals soon exhausted Noel's $2 a day, and, of course, on Sunday nights there was nothing coming in.

DOROTHY DIX

DEAR MISS DIX—Funny thing about all of this fuss over what love is and holding husbands. All of us men know how simple it is, but women have been having headaches over it for centuries because they have been trying to make a mystery out of a very natural relationship and turn a mere man into a god. That is where the trouble starts. The women are just drunk with the false belief that love will end all of their troubles forever, and that when they possess it, life will be a never-ending petting party. A girl with this deluded idea gets married. All too soon the honeymoon ends. Familiarity begins its process of numbing some the great thrills. Her Prince Charming runs true to type and turns out to be just a common, everyday man. Then comes the great disillusionment for the girl, which is the penalty of worshipping a false god. The young bride falls hard because she has climbed to a high perch. The romance sours, and she sets out to avenge her wrong at the expense of her innocent husband. With nagging and slouchiness drives him away from her. Next she is telling the court of her husband's unfaithfulness and hijacking him for every cent of alimony she can get. As for holding husbands, the method is too simple to be interesting. All a woman has to do to keep her husband is to use the same wiles she used in catching him. Isn't it so, men?

MARRIED OBSERVER.

ANSWER:

It is so, brother. You've put wives right on the spot ,and to be perfectly fair you should stand their husbands up beside them, for the great trouble with matrimony is that both men and women go into it an a false basis, and then they refuse to go on with their act.

It is perfectly true that the average woman simply dopes herself up with sentiment until she believes that love can work miracles; that just because she happens to feel "that way" toward some boy all that she asks of life is just to be with him; that she will never care whether or not she has anything to eat or a new dress or to go to a place of amusement or have a decent place to live. Also it is true that she wraps around him the cloak of her imagination and sees him not as he is but as she wants him to be, a romantic hero. She expects him to keep up after marriage the high-pressure loving of his courting days.

It is likewise true that 90 per cent. of the disappointment in marriage that women talk so much about and that sends them to the divorce court, is nothing but the man coming down to normalcy, being himself, saying it with beefsteaks instead of violets and expecting her to have enough sense to take his affection for granted.

Also it is true that virtually every wife could hold her husband if she would continue to cut bait after marriage and try as hard to please her husband as she did her sweetheart, and if she would doll herself up after marriage as she did before, and use as much jollying and soft soap in getting along with him. Most men marry for a home and not many of them would roam if their wives didn't fall down on their jobs of making home the most attractive spot in the world to them.

But do not men make exactly the same mistake in marriage that women do? Doesn't a man marry because some girl has happened to hit his fancy, without ever considering whether she is what he wants in a wife or not?

And don't men expect love to work some sort of a miracle that will not only turn a pretty little Dumb Dora into an intelligent companion, or a nervous, high-tempered, shrewdish girl into a placid, good-natural wife, but that will somehow work so on their own systems that they won't get tired of a bore or mind being nagged?

• • • • • •

DEAR MISS DIX—My wife and I have been married thirty years and I am still crazy about her. She was a slender little thing when I married her, but during the last few years she is inclined to get a little rolypoly and she has been bitten by the reducing mania. She has tried dieting and all sorts of exercises. She has been baked and stewed and pummelled in the beauty shops, but it doesn't do her any good; just makes her tired to death from the exercises and weak when she goes without food. She is getting desperate and I am afraid she will try some of these advertised nostrums for weight reduction and ruin her health. As she is, she suits me and I think she is prettier and sweeter than she was when she was a girl. Why she isn't content to stay as she is, I can't imagine. Can you tell me any way to stop her from starving herself to death?

WORRIED HUSBAND.

ANSWER:

I am afraid not. Once a middle-aged woman gets obsessed with the idea of attaining a boyish figure nothing on earth will hold her, not even the pangs of hunger, nor the vision that she beholds in the mirror of the ravages that dieting is making in her countenance. For what a middle-aged woman takes off of her waistline she adds in lines on her face.

Why the living skeleton should be the ideal of feminine pulchritude toward which all women strain, nobody can explain. Nor can anybody explain why women think that bones ravish the masculine fancy. But they do, and the more vertebra they can display and the more knee joints they can exhibit in public, the more beautiful they esteem themselves. It is just one of the vagaries of feminine psychology that nobody can explain, but it is a costly one, for it has claimed the lives and wrecked the health of thousands of women.

The sanatoriums of the country are filled with young girls who have starved themselves into T.B. trying to keep thin. A multitude of middle-aged women have wrecked their stomachs and given themselves chronic dyspepsia by following diets that took off their fat but left them invalided and with stringy necks and pendulous cheeks and complexions like saddle leather. No woman should diet except under the care of a physician, and no reputable physician will advise her to do it unless she is afflicted with some disease.

• • • • • •

DEAR MISS DIX—I am engaged to be married to a man who is divorced. He wants me to wear the same engagement ring that his first wife had. Do you think this is fair to me?

TROUBLED.

ANSWER:

It is an insult, and if the man had the slightest delicacy of feeling he wouldn't ask you to do such a thing. Better pass him up, I think.

DOROTHY DIX.

GOODNIGHT STORY

By MAX TRELL

OF COURSE, Boo,Hoo, the clown didn't think that Knarf was going to be able to do the second and hardest trick of all. This was to climb up the side of the wall and sit in a corner of the ceiling. He was sure that no boy could do that. And to tell the truth, Boo-Hoo was quite right. No boy could.

Only Boo-Hoo forgot one thing. Knarf wasn't a boy at all; he was the shadow of a boy. And for a shadow to climb up the side of a wall and sit in a corner of the ceiling is one of the easiest tric's in the world.

Knarf slid up the wall

"Just watch me," Knarf said merrily.

"I'll watch you all right," Boo-Hoo answered, winking over at Hanid. "I'll watch you go up. And I'll watch you come down," he added in a whisper to Hanid. "Well, now—up you go!"

The next moment Boo-Hoo's eyes opened wide. For Knarf slid right up the side of the wall and sat down in the corner of the ceiling as cozy as a bug in a rug. "My goodness! He really did it!"

Lots of Tricks

Then Knarf came sliding down again. But first he slid across the ceiling once or twice, just to show Boo-Hoo how good he was at those kind of tricks.

"And now give me a harder t[rick] clown when he stood before h[im] to do," he said to the astonished again. But Boo-Hoo shook his head. "There aren't any more tricks I can give you. You can do more than I can."

Just then Bong-Bong, the owner of the circus, came running up and said: "The show is about to begin. I want you to see it. Come with me." And he took Knarf and Hanid by the hand and put them in the very front row of seats, right next to their good friend, Ting-a-Ling. Ting-a-Ling bought peanuts and a glass of pink lemonade for himself.

Then the circus began. It was wonderful. There were so many things going on at one time that Ting-a-Ling, who tried to see all of them at once, turned his head around and round so much that all at once he fell off his seat. But he enjoyed himself just the same and so did Knarf and so did Hanid.

And I hope you do, too, the n[ext] time you go to the circus.

Sweet Potato Goes Sweeter

MELBOURNE, Aug. 6 —(CP)— Talking of sweet potatoes, Australians are past masters at cooking and eating them, and Canadian housewives will be interested in some of the ways they do it here. For variety try the following.

1.—To two cups of mashed potato add three tablespoons of butter, pepper and salt, a little milk and one beaten egg. Pile lightly in a buttered dish and bake for 12 minutes in a hot oven.

2.—Add ½ cup of crushed or shredded pineapple to the creamed potatoes, instead of the egg. Put into a buttered baking dish, put a layer of marshmallows over the top and put in hot oven to melt and brown the marshmallows.

3.—Put the creamed potatoes into a buttered baking dish, dot top with butter, pour over two tablespoons of golden syrup and bake in a hot oven till delicately brown.

All theatres in cities and larger towns of Poland are now wired for sound pictures.

JUST BETWEEN US WOMEN

"Of all the thoughts of God that are
Borne inward into souls afar,
Along the Psalmist's music deep,
Now tell me if that any is
For gift or grace, surpassing this—
He giveth His beloved sleep."
—Mrs. Browning.

Dear Friends:

I have been telling you of my vacation with my sisters. Before I went away I was weary weary, tired of the everyday things, of too much work and too little play, of the daily grind with no fun, and none to look forward to.

So, I determined when we set out to leave all my troubles behind me, no letters to be forwarded, no sad things to be sent to me. And that is exactly what we did. We enjoyed every minute, we crowded everything we could into the days, we laughed and were like little children again.

And with all this, I never went to bed the same day I got up. It was always the wee sma' oors before we went upstairs, and good and early we got up again, so that we would not miss anything, that we would not lose an hour with one another, for who knows if we shall be able to meet again. Yet we can hope.

And of course, doing all these things we used up most of our money, so that when we started home there was very little. Then of course we had to ruin an inner tube, and it was so badly torn we had to buy a new one.

Doing the trip all in one day when we went there took too much out of us, so we said we would do it in two days coming home. But the price of the tube made us be careful, so, believe it or not we slept? in the car. Note the question mark beside slept.

We pulled into the yard of a service station which had closed for the day, and stretched out as best we could beside the suitcases etc. Then I began to hear things, voices where voices should not be at that time of night (Midnight).

So, at last I bobbed up like a rubber ball and said "I hear voices." My daughter said calm yourself, it is only a few young men talking. So I stretched my weary limbs again, and a light flashed into my eyes, and up I bobbed again, but it was just a car turning a bend in the road.

The cars and trucks went tearing by, we heard something like a siren, something chirped in the long grass. I thought of gangsters, of animals, yet sleep would cloud my eyes and I would relax for a minute or two, to awake with a jerk.

Then I got to the stage where I did not care for noises or lights, and so like that we had an hour or two, until one of us started giggling to fancy what my sisters would say if they saw us there. At three a.m. we roused as it was so cold, and wished for a cup of coffee, then started out again and about a hundred yards further on we found a wayside stand open and had some of the worst coffee I ever tasted.

Off we went again, and arrived in Watertown about five a.m. and had some nice coffee and toast, then strolled around to get the kink out of our limbs and it was nice at that time in the morning.

At long last we got home and right on the main part of town we tried to start the car, but found we were out of gas, and had to be towed home, but I laughed and said we were like Hughes in his parade, but without the bands playing, so we even got fun out of that.

So here I am with a lot of sleep to make up, and it is hard to drag myself out of bed to write you. But I have enough to think of for a year to come. Your Friend,

ROBERTA.

Problems Of Summer Traveller

How to arrive at her destination clean and neat, clear-skinned and bright-eyed, with clothes unwrinkled and hair in presentable order are problems that the summer traveller ought to consider seriously before she starts off on her summer vacation. It's no more trouble to choose and take items which simplify grooming en route than it is to pack a hodge-podge of clothes that wrinkle easily and beauty items suitable for home use but not for travel.

If you travel by train or automobile where bathtubs are scarce, a huge bottle of cologne and a small sponge are about the handiest gadgets you can have in your luggage. Given a dressing room (be it ever so small), or even the rest room at a gasoline station, any woman can take a sponge bath with cologne and emerge fresh as a daisy. If she has a liquid cleanser (for the back of her neck and elbows) and a jar of cleansing cream in a kit or box with the cologne and sponge, there's no reason why she can't be exquisitely turned out as well as absolutely clean.

Cleansing tissues are a "must" on any trip, of course. And this is true whether you are going on a de luxe steamship, a new, streamlined train, in the family sedan or a day coach. Instead of taking them out of the box and stuffing them into the pocket of the suitcase—there to get pretty wrinkled and slightly dusty—why not invest in one of the new satin or taffeta tissue bags, made especially to hold tissues? Equipped with handles, one of these can be hung in the compartment or kept in the pocket of the car door.

You'll find a large compact that holds about two weeks' supply of your regular face powder also pretty handy on a trip. Take a box of powder if you like, but have it wrapped up except when the compact needs refilling. Be sure to have a supply of clean puffs or else a roll of absorbent cotton.

Keep Hair Neat

Don't put fresh makeup on over stale. If you keep plenty of tissues and a small jar of cleansing cream or a cleansing lotion within easy reach, there's no reason why you can't clean your face and neck and do a pretty good job of making up your face even though your husband does insist upon driving at sixty.

Also, it's possible to keep your hair looking neat without resorting to a handkerchief headdress that will make keepers of the better roadside restaurants want to put you at a table in the rear. Wear a headkerchief if you must, but do learn to tie it on farily smartly. However, before you decide definitely, please look at neat little sports hats that are light in weight and which stay on even when the top of the car is down.

Brush your hair every day, wiping the brush frequently between strokes. Don't forget to put a short nail file and dark glasses in your purse. And do take a jar of suntan lotion and one of rich night cream. No matter how carefully you groom your face during daytime hours, a trip in an automobile is bound to have a drying effect on your skin.

Diamond Wedding

(Examiner Correspondence.)

COTTESLOE, Aug. 6.—Mr. and Mrs. George Rutherford, of Douro, were married 60 years ago Wednesday. Mr. Rutherford was the son of James Rutherford and Mary Ann Stinson, who came from Western Ontario, when George was eight years old and settled in the present neighborhood, Lot 6, Concession 1, Douro. With the exception of a few years spent in Dummer and fifteen years spent in Peterborough, Mr. Rutherford has resided on the same farm.

Mrs. Rutherford was formerly Isabel Moore, daughter of Wm. Moore and Eliza Davis. She was born in Warsaw and lived there until her marriage. They have seven children all living: Mrs. James Robinson of Warsaw, Mrs. Percy Bell of Dummer, Mrs. William Clysdale of Wilkie, Sask., Percy and Joseph of Peterborough, George and Lucy at home. Mr. Rutherford was 80 years old in February of this year and has done all the cutting with the binder on his well cultivated farm. He walks as smart as a boy and no weeds are allowed to remain long on his farm. He is a great reader and a good conversationalist, remembering well the things of the past.

Fiction Wilts But for Women

BOSTON, Aug. 6.—(CP)—"Certainly the time is past when men could write disparagingly of 'our lady novelists,' a sneer that was never justified. For various reason, partly economic, partly social, the woman novelist has ceased to be an amateur," says "Colophin" in the Book Collectors' Magazine.

In a survey of 20th-century literature, appearing in the new edition of "Chambers' Encylopaedia of English Literature," Dr. J. C. Smith says that "fiction would have wilted but for the genius of women.

"In Edwardian days it would have been impossible to name six women novelists to compare with De Morgan, Conrad, Kipling, Bennett, Galsworthy and H. G. Wells," adds Dr. Smith. "To-day one could name a dozen whom the men would find had to match."

Although this is thought by some critics (particularly males) to be overstating the situation, Dr. Smith makes a strong plea for the preeminence of such novelists as Virginia Woolf, Dorothy Richardson (who was experimenting with the now popular stream-of-consciousness style nearly 15 years ago), and Dorothy Sayers, who is compared to Dickens in her formula of "a love story with detective interruptions."

Canadian Youth Awheel or Afoot Besieges Europe

LONDON, Aug. 6 — (C P) — Summer visitors from Canada are arriving in London by shiploads and inside Canada House in Trafalgar Square the hustle and bustle of holiday time is at its peak.

Most excited travellers to date are undoubtedly the school boys' contingent under the auspices of the Overseas Education League, who visited the Sokol Festival at Praha and then embarked on British warships for two weeks observational cruise.

Decked out in grey flannels and red blazer coats with "Canada embroidered on the breast pockets, they are wearing the uniform so admired when worn by the Canadian school boys at the Coronation. More than 30 boys are divided among seven ships. Boys from every Canadian province are taking part in this naval adventure.

Invitations to attend the Sokol Festival, Europes oldest physical fitness movement, were extended to the young Canadian visitors through Major F. Ney of the Overseas Education League, by the Czechoslovakian government. B. C. Newton, the British minister in Praha, gave a special evening garden party for the guests from the Dominion.

In Paris, too, the Canadians were well entertained, for the Canadian Minister to France, Hon. Phillipe Roy, dined with them on Dominion Day and Mr. Roy gave a short speech on the friendly relations between the two countries.

Storming Highways.

Already more than 200 Canadian university students are touring England and the Continent, walking, cycling and in second-hand cars. Practically every large city from Halifax to Vancouver is represented. The number already far exceeds that of previous years. It is expected that by September more than 1,000 Canadian students will have toured the United Kingdom and the Continent this year.

Opening of Canadian youth hostels in Canada has made a great difference to the budgets of Canadian students visiting here. Membership in similar organizations here is extended to those belonging to the new group in the Dominion.

Influence Felt.

The influx of younger visitors from overseas into London during the past year has had amazing effects in unexpected places. Candidates at civil service examinations within the past few weeks have had to answer all sorts of questions on general knowledge of overseas.

At one examination 413 girls, not over 19, from the girls public schools competed for executive posts, carrying salaries which may rise to $5.000 a year. Here are a few of the Empire questions which they had to answer:

"Describe the causes which have led to the development of hydro-electric power in New Zealand and Eastern Canada. For what purposes is the power used?

"Describe the precise position of Canberra, Delhi, Khartoun, Ottawa and discuss the factors which have contributed to their choice as capitals.

"Describe the geographical factors which have affected the growth of manufacturing in the St. Lawrence Lowlands including the triangle between Lakes Huron, Erie and Ontario.

"The monarchy is now the only link between the Dominions and the Mother Country. Discuss this statement.

"Describe the territories and settlement of Canada, 1763-1815. Why did Canada remain loyal? And how did that loyalty show itself?"

Women Who Marry.

With such examinations underway, there has been a return of the storm over the government Civil Service ban on women continuing in their jobs after marriage.

A woman clerk in the Ministry of Labor—most generous in its attitude toward women employees—has made a claim to be allowed to continue in her post after marriage and she has the support of the Civil Service Clerical Association.

Under new regulations, the authorities agree to consider making use of their prerogative for her retention. Hitherto the few cases in which women have succeeded in overcoming the ban have been confined to the higher grades of employees.

Called To Testify

A few hours before he was scheduled to sail from New York for a tour of England, Germany and Italy, George Sylvester Viereck, ABOVE, well-known author and friend of former Kaiser Wilhelm of Germany, was served with a subpoena to appear before the House of Representatives committee investigating un-American activities. Viereck cancelled his liner reservation to "put the service to my country above every other consideration."

Gladiolus Plants Tower Seven Feet

Growth of good gladiolus, always considered a difficult task, is comparatively easy with good bulbs to start with, careful treating and storing in winter, and repeated spraying during their growing period, according to T. H. Aiken, 88 St. James street. He should be an authority for he has some 20,000 gladioli plants, some of which tower seven and a half feet in the air.

Chief enemy of the gladiolus is the "thrip", a small insect that destroys the plant if precautions are not taken Careful and constant watching bring satisfying results to flower fanciers if they have obeyed the first essential and obtained good bulbs. Mr. Aiken has been growing them for three years, considers this year's crop his best. It is also necessary to feed the bulbs after the plant has been cut, he said.

Included among the varieties of gladiolus in his garden are the Albatross, Picardy, Dr. T. H. Bailey, Royal Scarlet, Early Snowflakes, Red Emperor, Scarlet Princeps, Ave Maria.

Tanners Gain Second Place

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, Aug. 6.—The Tanners climbed into a second place tie with the Outlaws when they defeated them 12 to 10 last night in a tow softball league game. The game was featured by four home runs, D. Bonds, McKee and Stickles all clouting four-base hits for the losers while Hahn poled one out for the Tanners.

McCoy pitched for the Tanners and allowed seven hits. He struck out four and walked six but seven errors by his team mates was the cause of most of the Outlaws ten runs. Hahn pitched to and retired the last batter. McKee gave the Tanners nine hits but a streak of wildness in the first innings when he walked five and the Tanners scored seven runs proved his downfall. He had only one strikeout.

Sargent of the Tanners topped the batters with two doubles and a single in three times at bat. Stickles was the best for the Outlaws with a homer and a single in four times up. Petticrew, Outlaws' rightfielder, made the fielding feature of the game when he took McCoy's line drive to deep right with one hand.

The teams:

Outlaws: G. Bonds, 2b; Radford, cf; McKee, p; Stickles, 3b; Clapper, 1b; I. Bonds, c; Scriver, lf; Tunbridge, ss; Petticrew, rf; Walsh, 2b.

Tanners: C. Scriver, rf; Thompson, 2b; Ibey, c; Hahn, 3b, p; G. Scriver, ss; McCoy, p, lf; Kelley, cf; M. Scriver, 1b, Sargent, lf, 3b.

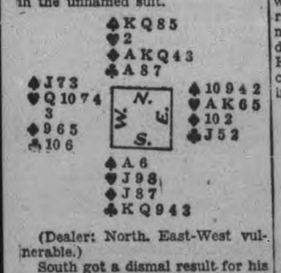
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER
By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

ASKING FOR NO TRUMP

IF YOUR partner bids a suit, you respond with another suit and he then calls still another one, he is very likely to be asking you to bid no trump if you can. But only if you can. He does not want you to do it, probably, unless you have the one remaining suit in good enough shape to stop it if the opponents lead it. In this situation, your call of no trump would not be a denial of additional strength in the usual sense, but a positive showing of some kind of strength in the unnamed suit.



(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

South got a dismal result for his side on this deal by thinking that a minimum number of no trump bid at any time is a discouraging bid. North started the action with the correct bid of 1-Diamond, which South answered with 2-Clubs. Since they were playing a one-over-one style of bidding, North "reversed" with two spades.

Now comes South's chance to go right or wrong. He did the latter by calling 2-No Trumps, which North carried to three. After the defenders ran five heart tricks, North explained that one of the principal purposes of the spade bid was to let South know the side had three suits in shape, and that if South could stop the hearts he could bid no trump. South explained that he was merely trying by his no trump call to show his lack of adequate support for either of North's suits.

Of course the best way to do that was by a rebid of 3-Clubs, which would have been safer than raising the diamonds, since that might have been one of those over-done short-suit calls as an opener. Had South rebid clubs, the side could not have missed reaching six in one minor or the other.

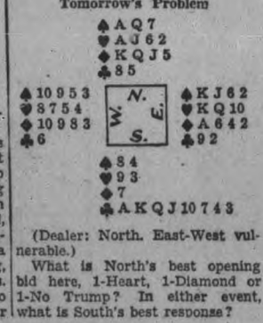
Tomorrow's Problem



(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

What is North's best opening bid here, 1-Heart, 1-Diamond or 1-No Trump? In either event, what is South's best response?

All In Rumania Are Given Equal Rights

LONDON, Aug. 6 (CP-Havas).—Rumania's new minority decrees, according equal rights to all citizens, were hailed by the News-Chronicle (Liberal) today as offering material assurance that for the moment the European refugee problem will not be aggravated from that source.

The decrees give every Rumanian citizen equal rights as to language, religion and race, and provide that teaching will be permitted in schools in the mother tongue of the various nationalities and that government jobs will be open to all citizens.

"The surprisingly Liberal concessions to minorities made in the Rumanian decree published today are a ray of light in a very dark spot," said the News-Chronicle. "It encourages the hope that at least there will be no addition now from Rumania to the flood of helpless fugitives whose plight is becoming a positive menace to civilization.

"Twenty-five thousand people in this country—more than the total number of refugees here—are stated to have found employment in new undertakings started by exiles from Germany and other countries.

"Such facts should encourage this country to follow the fine example set by France in this matter. Then, if Germany can be persuaded to relax even a little her intolerably harsh regulations, the problem will be in a fair way to being solved"

The Daily Mail (Independent) said that Rumania, in granting to her minorities rights which "should never have been withheld," has taken a "wise step towards repairing some of the blunders of the peace treaties and has shown that spirit of concession which the world hopes to see exercised in other countries in regard to other minorities."

A Different Case

The Manchester Guardian (Liberal) said it was erroneous to compare the Czechoslovak problem to that of Austria.

"Austria was as good as written off by the western powers before she was invaded," said the Guardian. "Czechoslovakia has not been written off. That the Czechs will fight, and fight well, against invaders is regarded as certain here.

"This alone makes 'peaceful" absorption of the Czechs by Germany impossible. It may be that the Czechs will have to make further concession to the Sudeten Germans. The full terms of the new 'minorities statute' are stil unknown. But one thing is realised clearly here—that the Czechoslovak government cannot be and will not be, expected to make concessions that will directly or indirectly threaten the independence of Czechoslovakia or will weaken her as a military power.

"If Germany presses for concessions beyond this limit she will no longer be regarded as endeavoring to secure justice for the Sudeten Germans, but as resolved on reducing Czechoslovakia to vassalage.

"It is difficult to believe that this point, which is fully understood here can be wholly misunderstood in Berlin. The demonstrative nature of Germany's military preparations along the Czechoslovak-French frontiers and the publicity given to the 'prohibiting areas', and the order that the harvest must be brought in by Aug. 15—have begun to create an impression that Germany wants to exercise the greatest possible influence on negotiations at Praha by the greatest possible display of military power."

OBITUARY

IRWIN BLAKELY.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MADOC, Aug. 6.—The funera of the late Irwin Blakely took place from the residence of his mother, Mrs. William Blakely, to Lakeview cemetery, on Monday afternoon.

Irwin Blakely, eighteen year old student of Madoc High school, died suddenly on Saturday last after an illness of only three days, at his home, two miles south of Madoc, from inflamation of the brain lining.

He was the younger son of Mrs. William Blakely and the late Mr. Blakely, and besides his mother leaves two brothers, Leslie and Lawrence, and one sister, Marjory to mourn his loss.

He was a member of White Lake United church and will be sadly missed in the community.

$1,500,000 Fire Sweeps Waterfront

Vancouver's waterfront was turned into a raging inferno by a fire which wiped out one pier, injured five firemen and did $1,500,000 damage. All available fire-fighting eqipment was pressed into service before the fire was brought under control. The fire tug Nanoose is shown here vainly attempting to stem the flames with its firelines.

CAMPBELLFORD

Charge Withdrawn In Domestic Rift

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 6.—A charge of non-support against Charles McCoy was withdrawn by his wife when he agreed to pay her $2.50 a week. McCoy a laborer 58 years of age told the court he had not been living with his wife since May 10th while his wife testified that he had contributed nothing towards the support of herself and one child during that time. She consented to the withdrawal of the charge on his agreement to pay her the $2.50 each week.

Charles Seaborne, 38, father of nine children, told the court he would prefer to serve the time in jail when asked by Magistrate Langley what he intended to do about paying his dog license. Claiming that he had but two days work in the past week Seaborne pleaded guilty to the charge but stated he was unable to pay the fine. In view of the circumstances the case was adjourned for another week.

Shigemitsu: "It is clear . . . according to evidence in Japanese hands that Changkufeng and the other hills are possessions of Manchoukuo (formerly Chinese Manchuria, which Japan supports). Therefore I can see no grounds for your proposal that Japanese forces be withdraw from Soviet territory. As a practical procedure the first step to be taken is to stop hostile operations on both sides and open at once negotiations on definite subjects."

Ready To Negotiate.

Litvinoff: "The border line is a thing established by an international treaty concluded between the powers concerned and the map annexed thereto, as fo ra solution of the incident, I am myself ready to enter discussions upon a concrete basis. I also welcome your proposal for a cessation of hostilities. Nevertheless, we cannot tolerate occupation for foreign forces of even an inc hof territory which we believe belongs to Soviet Russia. If the Japanese government will promise to withdraw troops outside the line shown on our map and cause the Japanese forces to cease shelling Soviet territory, the Soviet government will be prepared to promise cessation of similar armed operations."

Shigemitsu: "The absolute insistence of the Soviet government upon deciding the boundary only on the basis of a map in their hands is completely opposed to the principle of a proposed joint commission to deliberate the question by taking into consideration data in possession of both sides. I do not believe you agreed upon the appointment of that commission on any such basis.

Police Arrest Escaped Youth

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HASTINGS, Aug. 6.—A sixteen-year-old boy, who had attempted to steal some clothing from William Leslie's tent on the waterfront late Thursday night, was arrested here yesterday. The boy, it was learned, had escaped from St. John's Industrial school and Toronto police had been looking for him for ten days.

Leslie caught the youth in the act of stealing and is said to have landed a couple of blows but he escaped, only to be picked up Friday noon one half mile south of the village by Constable Wellman. Local police had been furnished with his description.

Two brothers returned the boy to Toronto last night. He gave his name as Bernard Holland and said he had escaped with Albert Parnell, 16, of Windsor. Parnell was apprehended last Wednesday.

Japs Advance Now Only Yards Daily

SHANGHAI, Aug. 6—(AP).—After 355 days' fighting in which Japanese advanced up the Yangtse river at an average of a mile and a quarter daily, the invaders' offensive seems to have slowed to a yardage basis.

Japanese warships concentrated their efforts to-day on trying to sweep mines from the river about Kiukiang, Yangtse port 135 miles below Hankow. They also shelled Chinese defences on the Yangtse's south bank, above Kiukiang. The bombardments were preludes to Japanese infantry attacks which, it was reported, were repulsed at the foot of Shamaoshan, or Simmer Hat, mountain.

The Chinese maintained they had thwarted an attempted Japanese landing at Wucheng, on Lake Poyang, 50 miles south of Kiukiang.

Japanese units on the north bank of the Yangtse were reported mired by Yangtse floods. Japanese and foreign police established precautionary patrols and barricaded Shanghai against possible outbreaks Aug. 13, anniversary of the start of major Chinese-Japanese hostilities in Shanghai.

Flies Branded Real Cause Of Dysentery

TORONTO, Aug. 6 (CP).—Authorities of the Hospital for Sick Children said today they feared the unusual hot weather may cause an outbreak of "summer dysentery" to reach "epidemic proportions within the next few weeks. There are eight cases in the hospital now compared with two or three in other years at this time.

Most victims of the disease, which annually affects 150 to 200 in Toronto with a death rate of 14 per cent, are from poorer districts infested with houseflies. The fatality rate formerly was 40 per cent but in the past eight years the hospital has spent more than $50,000 to bring the disease definitely into the zone of preventive and curative methods.

The common housefly causes the disease, technically known as acute intestinal intoxication. It has three distinct stages. First the baby has diorrhoea, then three to five days later it starts vomiting, then—with terrifying suddenness—the baby becomes drowsy, the skin turns gray, the eyes become sunken, and it is in a generally weak condition.

Much in Mothers Hands

"We can cure the disease if the babies are brought to us soon enough," Joseph Bower, superintendent of the hospital said. "The rest is distinctly up to the mothers. They man prevent the disease if they do what is necessary.

"Keep food and feeding apparatus sterilized and covered. Then the flies cannot do their deadly work. Keep flies out of the house at all times. they are carriers of all kinds of filth.

"The moment a baby shows any signs of diarrhoea, send for the doctor. It is a serious matter and must not be treated casually. While waiting for the doctor stop all feeding for the baby. Give it half orange juice and water—well sweetened—about two teaspoons at a time every 10 or 15 minutes. If the child vomits, keep on giving the orange juice and water, it probably will stop in an hour or so. If you cannot get a doctor, bring the child to hospital. Early treatment is the most important thing."

Mr. Bowers explained the sweetened orange juice and water not only clears the infection from the intestinal tract, but is absorbed so quickly germs cannot feed on it.

The germ which causes acute intestinal intoxication is one of the dysentery group, similar to typhoid or paratyphoid. Flies alighting on filth of all kinds, pick it up and then fly to a nipple or a feeding-bottle. It is noted that the disease is one of bottle-fed and not of breast-fed children. Tests have shown the germs are not found on fruit.

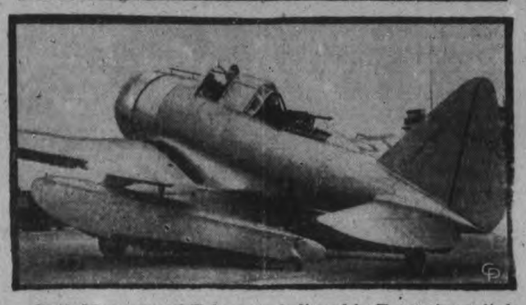
Russia Bears Fangs Over Border



Both Moscow and Tokyo are believed in Europe's capitals to be ready to arbitrate their Siberian-Manchoukuan border conflict and avert another major war in the East, though clashes in the disputed territory, shown by the maps, may intensify the crisis and make peaceful settlement impossible. Conflict centres on the Changkufeng hills which dominate Possiet Bay, a strategically important naval base site. Demarcation of the boundary is in dispute. Russia is reported moving up heavy artillery, like that shown at TOP, during manoeuvres in the same area, and to be using airplanes in her campaign. The powerful amphibian fighter shown BELOW, is a type recently manufactured in considerable numbers in United States for the Soviet air force. It has a 3,000-mile cruising range with full load, is heavily armed with a movable machine gun in the rear cockpit.

For Sunday, August 7

Sunday's horoscope holds testimony of a rather doubtful day, except for mystical or occult work, in which there may be much interest.

Those whose birthday it is may have a fairly prosperous year, particularly in mystical things. There may be behind-the-scenes matters to deal with, attended by upheaval and disapprobation of superiors.

A child born on this day may be fairly efficient and ambitious, possibly in singular lines. It may be able to write mystery stories.

For Monday, August 8

Monday's astrological forecast shows a particularly lively and devastating day, with possible radical change in environment and contacts. But be prepared for some setbacks or postponements. All pertaining to writings, publications and promotions may be favorable and should flourish. There may be a rather subtle or intriguing situation, but if cautiously handled it should result in singular benefit.

Those whose birthday it is are on the eve of a rather spectacular year, with upheavals, travel and a possible disappointment. It is a day of subtle atmosphere.

A child born this day may be brilliant, versatile and intellectual, as well as fond of romance, adventure and travel.

Hint Murder In Indian's Floating Body

Five Children Drown As Weekend Toll Takes 14 In Ontario

TORONTO, August 8 — (CP). — Science was called upon to-day to aid police in investigation of the death of Henry Riley, Jr. The death of the 25-year-old Walpole Island Reserve Indian was the only one of 14 that occurred violently during the week-end in Ontario that presented a mystery to authorities.

Rileys body was found folating upright in marshland water on the reserve Saturday, the posture one of defence, as though the Indian had died while warding off a blow. It was known he had not been drowned, as were three other persons in various parts of the province. Eight people died in automobile accidents, while two met death in other forms.

Vital organs in Riley's body were sent for scientific examination to Dr. E. R. Frankish, medico-legal adviser of the provincial attorney-general's department, who has been prominently identified with many homicides. "He definitely did not die of drowning, Coroner Dr. L. R. Aiken said yesterday after an autopsy. "I never saw a case like this before, and certainly Riley did not drown."

The reserve is located near Wallaceburg. Two men gathering fishing nets in the Chematoygen River found the body. Marks on an arm and on the chest, as if made by the lighted end of a cigarette, puzzled police. Two reserve Indians, Llewellyn Greenbird, 37, and Charles Isaac, 43, were taken into custody as material witnesses.

Alderman Breaks Six Sunday Laws To Have 1845 Acts Ditched

Toronto, Aug. 8 (CP)

IN PROTEST against the Upper Canada Lord's Day Act of 1845, still in force in Ontario, Alderman Percy Quinn broke the law six times yesterday and made certain police would have evidence for court action by having a newspaper photographer snap him doing it.

He caught a fish, swam, bought a stamp and a package of cigarets, swore and ran a foot race with a friend, all offences under the act. He was a leader in attempts to have the act abolished and was instrumental in having the city council urge the Dominion Government to wipe it off the statute books.

Small Tot Is Killed By Automobile

In the city's first traffic fatality of the year, a little boy of 21 months toddled out into the speed lane of Chamberlain street about 8 o'clock Saturday evening, was struck by an automobile and died before friends reached the Standard Clinic with him.

The little boy was Barry Dawson Moffat, twenty-one months old, son of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Arthur Moffat, and the driver of the car was Donald White, a bread salesman. A report of the accident indicated that the father had just arrived home with his little son and went to the back of the house to open the rear door. The boy was left alone only two minutes or thereabouts, it was said. He saw his brothers and sister and several other children playing across an the south side of the street and started toward them passing a parked car.

According to police information a truck had stopped a few minutes prior to the accident, and the driver called to the sister to take the boy from the roadway. She led him back to the north sidewalk and then returned to a sand pile on the south side. The baby brother apparently started to follow her and walked out from behind his father's car into the street.

It was said White did not know he had hit the boy until he heard the shouts and cries of the other children and other persons nearby. Multiple injuries were the cause of death.

The funeral was held this afternoon from the family residence at 526 Chamberlain street to the Little Lake Cemetery, Rev. Canon Paterson officiating. The boy is survived by his parents and two brothers, Robert and Donald, one sister Isabelle and a baby of three weeks. A pathetic aspect of the death of Barry Moffat is the fact that all summer long he has played day after day on the lawn at the rear of his home with his brothers and sister, and then in a moments straying from his accustomed paths his life was crushed out by a passing car. The entire neighborhood of the south end was deeply affected by the fatal accident, and sympathy was general for the bereaved parents. An inquest will be held on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock.

Love-Sick Youth Is Held For Murder Of The Girl's Mother

Ashbury Park, N.J., Aug. 8.

A LOVE-SICK YOUTH was held for grand jury action today on a first degree murder charge in the fatal shooting of the mother of the girl he sought in vain to marry.

The mother, Mrs. Elizabeth Hetman, 39, died in an effort to shield her daughter, Ann Clark, 20, Prosecutor Raymond Bazley said, when Frank Cheeseman, 21, of nearby Neptune, attempted with an ancient revolver to persuade the girl to elope with him Saturday night.

ARAB IS KILLED

JERUSALEM.—An Arab was killed and eight persons wounded today by a bomb which exploded in a vegetable market in Tiberias, on the shores of the Sea of Galilee.

LONDON, Aug. 8.—(CP).—Thousands of workmen in Great Britain's shipbuilding yards are engaged today in the biggest naval construction program in world history.

The Admiralty is building or has ordered 118 ships, ranging from mighty battleships to tiny torpedo boats, submarines and mine sweepers. In addition, 21 other ships are projected for this year, enough to increase the tonnage of the British navy by one-third.

Every rivet driven into a hull, every gun mounted, represents another step forward in Britain's rearmament program, designed to make this country invincible to attack and restore the navy to a paramount position on the seven seas.

The list of vessels already on the dockyard stocks or on order, would make a formidable fleet in themselves: Five battleships, five aircraft carriers, 17 cruisers, 40 destroyers of different sizes, 18 submarines, five escort vessels, seven mine sweepers, four patrol ships, two surveying ships, two depot ships, nine torpedo ships, three river gunboats and many small craft—550,000 tons of sea strength.

The 1938 program, which hasn't reached the shipbuilding yards, is as follows: Two battleships, seven cruisers, one aircraft carrier, three submarines, two mine-layers, two river gunboats, two depot ships, one repair ship and many small craft such as tugs, torpedo boats and boom defence vessels.

Before next March, delivery is expected of one aircraft carrier, five

Japs Lose 200 But Beat Russians Off

Brand Soviet Heads Crazy To Try Taking Changkufeng

TOKYO, Aug. 8.—(CP-Havas)—The Japanese lost 200 killed and wounded in fighting against Russia during the last 24 hours at Changkufeng, the war office announced today.

Soviet casualties in the eight days of hostilities in the disputed Siberian border zone amounted to 1,500 killed and wounded, the war office estimated.

Japanese forces have destroyed 100 Soviet tanks and shot down six Soviet airplanes since the border fighting began, it was claimed.

RUSSIANS IN RETREAT

TOKYO, Aug. 8.—(AP)—The foreign office today said Soviet forces had been repulsed in a "heavy engagement" on the slopes of Changkufeng Hill, disputed point on the Manchoukuoan-Siberian border, and were in a general retreat to the north.

The clash, beginning about 6.30 a.m., followed a Russian artillery bombardment which had lasted all night.

Russian and Japanese forces were said to have come to grips when the former rushed Japanese positions 200 yards from the summit of the mile-wide, four-mile-long almond-shaped heights.

"Casualties on both sides are expected to be heavy," the foreign office said.

Dispatches from Yuki, Korea, near the Siberian frontier, quoted Japanese army officials as conceding Soviet forces had driven a wedge to the banks of the Tumen River north of Changkufeng, isolating an undetermined number of Japanese troops.

The Japanese said they still held hills north in Manchoukuo and west and southwest in Korea, all commanding Soviet positions on Changkufeng Hill, and declared the Russian military position was untenable.

A Crazy Attempt

"It is crazy for the Russians to attempt to retake Changkufeng, using a whole division of infantry, 200 tanks and 100 planes," army officers said.

Army headquarters here said Japanese newspapers were not being permitted to publish freely news of the border situation because the authorities did not wish to arouse the people.

"The people may interpret this to mean Japan fears to fight but our whole military and diplomatic policy indicates only a desire for peaceful settlement," it was explained.

Bolt Strikes Crowded Bathing Beach Kills Three and Stuns Fifteen

New York, Aug. 8 (AP)

FIVE BATHERS, injured by a freak lightning bolt that killed three other persons and stunned 15 in a crowd of 80,000 at Jacob Riis Park Beach, remained in a hospital today for treatment.

The condition of two was serious.

The bolt struck yesterday and raced 300 yards along the thronged beach front, throwing thousands of bathers into a panic.

"There was a blinding flash and smell of electrified air," said Ruth Meilun, 20, one of the injured. "People all around me began toppling over like ten-pins and I felt myself falling too."

The dead, all from Brooklyn, were Cesare Ceto, 36, Peter Cava, 28, and his wife, Mary, 24.

Russia Dictates Her Terms For Border Truce, Demands "Incidents" End

Threatens To Use Drastic Measures At Next Clash With Japs, Claim Capture Of Changkufeng

MOSCOW, Aug. 8 (AP).—Russia has warned Japan of more determined military action to repel attack, advised her to weigh carefully the dangers of a real war, and laid down the terms upon which Russia is prepared to accept a truce in the Siberian frontier "incident."

"The time has come to terminate these endless 'incidents'," Foreign Minister Maxim Litvinoff told the Japanese Ambassador, Mamoru Shigemitsu.

Litvinoff said a new border clash had occurred near Suifenho, to add to the seriousness of the crisis provoked by fighting since July 29 at Changkufeng Hill, near the Korean border on the Russian-Manchoukuo frontier. Suifenho is 250 miles north of Changkufeng.

Indicating Moscow's impatience with new diplomatic protests for each new incident, Litvinoff stated: "It would be useless to limit one's self to a new protest...It (Russia) is determined in similar cases in the future to resort to most drastic measures, including the use of artillery and aviation."

The foreign minister rejected the thesis that Japanese military action on July 29 to capture Changfukeng Hill, claimed by each nation as its territory, could be spoken of as a "frontier incident, which presupposes encounters between frontier guards"

"Frontier guards usually have no artillery, while in this case the first Japanese offensive was undertaken with assistance of artillery," he said.

"Apparently there was an attempt to seize Soviet territory in peace time, or even to draw Japan into a

Pirate Treasure Hunters Drill Up Gold

HALIFAX, Aug. 8 — (CP) — A treasure hunt on Storied Plum Island, 20 miles from here, has resulted in the discovery of free gold gushing from a 64-foot shaft, James Nolan, leader of the expedition that for two years has searched for pirate gold said to have been hidden Captain Edward Swede, 17th Century Buccaneer, declared today.

Whether the gold coming up through the pumps was deposited there by pirates or was a "dome" of rich gold bearing ore was not known yet, Nolan declared but he was inclined to believe the latter theory.

The expedition has been searching for treasure hidden by Captain Swede more than 200 years ago. Returning from the West Indies, the pirate was believed to have hidden the gold he plundered from Sapinsh towns on the Shag Bay Island to prevent it from falling into the hands of the British. Swede was captured and hanged for piracy when he was returned to England.

Ground Full of Gold

The drills were believed to have encountered the precious metal last week, but it was not until a periodical routine examination of soil in the discharge gully by Nolan that the ground around the shaft was found to be full of fine and coarse gold.

Nolan decclared that while gold was not often found in granite, he had noticed for some time the character of the rock appeared to be changing from granite towards quartz.

Nolan declared that while gold in which he places great faith, and the machine indicated in 1936 that there was gold in the shaft. He is pleased to have found some support for it.

Find Boy Safe After Five Days In Wilds

Scared Of Rescuers Youngster Has To Be Caught

STURGEON FALLS, Ont., Aug. 8. (CP).—Five-year-old Fernand Tessier pedalled joyfully on a brand-new tricycle about his father's rock-strewn homstead today, "sound as a whistle" and unharmed after five incredible days in as wild and desolate bush country as Northern Ontario can produce.

The tricycle wasn't the toy wagon Fernand's Aunt Yvonne had promised him, but that mattered little to the brown-eyed boy whose disappearance in the wilderness prompted one of the mst extensive searches ever understaken in this Lake Nipissing district 25 miles northwest of North Bay. Fernand, dodging the rocks and boulders, got more fun out of the tricycle.

Lost last Wednesday on a berry-picking expedition with his French-Canadian father near the Tessier homestead 13 miles north of Sturgeon Falls, Fernand was found late yesterday and brought back to parents who had given him up for dead. Neither hungry nor thirsty, the boy apparently was none the worse for his experience.

Dr. R. F. Malo, physician in the lumbering settlement of Field, three miles from the Tessier home, said he was "amazed" after examining the boy to find him in good health. Only the youngster's legs were scratched and his legs and feet were sore.

"There's nothing wrong with this boy," Dr. Malo said. "He's as sound as a whistle."

Nearly Four Miles From Home.

End of a search that brought industry and far mwork in the district virtually to a standstill came at 5 p.m. (EDT) when George Morrison, lumberman, bushman and mill worker, and a farmer, Rene Veillette, stumbled across the boy 3½ miles southwest of the Tessier farm. His safe return is to be observed as a modern mirale in thanksgiving masses in Field today.

Four-hundred men and an Ontario Forestry Branch Airplane were engaged in the search Sunday. The number of searchers—bush workers, mill hands, merchants and farmers—grew to that figure from the first party of 28 that started out, lanterns in hand, Wednesday night when the boy's disappearance became known.

The district is one of the wildest in Ontario. Bears and wolves abound. So dense is the bush Veillette was forced to cut a path along which Morrison carried the rescued bay. Marshes are the breeding grounds of myriads of insects. But berries are plentiful at this season and the marsh water slaked Fernand's thirst.

The boy declined a drink of water when he was found. At his home, he said he had eaten berries and drank water from a hole he had found in a swamp close to the spot where he was picked up. At night, Fernand said as he told his story in French, "I slept in the grass in my little bed."

Morrison said later the only thing the lad was interested in when he and Veillette came upon him was a wagon his aunt had promised to bring him. No wagon was available but when the mill hands and townspeople of Field heard of it they promptly opened a hardware store and bought him a tricycle.

Think Jones In Bog Only 24 Hours

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Aug. 8.—(CP.—Hugh Jones, 44-year-old Rawdon township farmer rescued Friday afternoon from a bog which buried him up to the neck, continued today to show disinterest in food, although suffering from lack of nourishment. He is in serious condition in hospital here.

Jones has been unable to tell of his experiences while lost in the swamp bush for six days, but Dr. George H. Stobie doubted after a careful physical examination that the farmer had been immersed more than 24 hours in the swamp where rescuers found him tenaciously clutching a piece of log to keep his head above the oozey mud in a bog. Even under normal conditions Jones often is unable to answer questions, his family told Dr. Stobie.

Jones is conscious and recognizes his friends and relatives who visited him in hospital. Dr. Stobie said to-day the patient has a good chance of fully recovering from his privations in the swamp 30 miles north of here if he developed an interest in taking nourishment. So far he has been fed by spoon.

Blood Reddens Canton Cathedral As Jap Bombs Kill 39 In Yard

Homesick For Mother Boy Of 12 Years Planned Stowaway

New York, Aug. 8.

HOMESICK for his mother in Italy, Joseph Lanzetta, 12, decided to stow away on the liner Conte di Savoia with his dog and go to Italy to see her.

Joseph took a sack from his father's candy store and stuffed it with two loaves of bread, some chewing gum, a few cans of dog food, and a carton of cigarettes—the last item as a gift for his grandmother.

Then he took his black dog, into a cab and rode to the pier. There Joseph learned of his only miscalculation—the ship had sailed Saturday.

A policeman took the disconsolate boy to the children's court.

CANTON, China, Aug. 8 (AP).—Japanese aerial bombs, falling with with 20 yards of the Catholic Cathedral today killed 38 persons and wounded 50.

The bombs burst among tightly packed men, women and children who had taken shelter in what they regarded as a haven in the cathedral grounds when nine Japanese bombers roared over the city.

The area is clearly marked by a large French flag flying from the cathedral roof.

The front of the cathedral was spattered with blood. Inside, not one pane of its invaluable stained glass windows remained intact.

The floor was littered with glass, broken crucifixes, flowers and candles. Chapels on all sides were ruined by the blast and the Grotto was struck by bomb fragments. The only parts untouched were the high altar and a chapel dedicated to the Virgin Mary.

It was the first air raid on Canton in two weeks.

Queen Mary Clips An Hour Off Atlantic Record

NEW YORK, Aug. 8—(AP).—Her powerful engines churned the British liner Queen Mary to a new westbound trans-Atlantic speed record of three days, 21 hours and 48 minutes.

Commodore Robert B. Irving announced the big ship had covered the 2,907 miles from Bishop's Rock to Ambrose Lightship at an average speed of 30.990 knots. The boat reached Ambrose Lightship at 1.32 a.m. (EDT) to-day.

The Queen Mary, regaining the record it lost a year ago to the Normandie, clipped one hour and 14 minutes from its French Line rival's mark of three days, 23 hours and seven minutes, set in August, 1937.

Commodore Irving said the Queen Mary also established a new record for the fastest day's westbound run, covering 790 miles at an average speed of 36.10 knots from Friday noon to Saturday noon. The Normandie's record was 781 miles.

The Queen Mary and the Normandie have been matched closely for the blue pennant of Atlantic speed supremacy throughout the two years the British ship has been in service. Once before—two years ago this month—the Queen Mary took the record from the French liner, which in turn regained it a year ago.

Before the entrance of the two new speed queens on the scene, the Rex held the record with a crossing of 3,182 miles from Gibraltar to Ambrose in four days, 13 hours, 58 minutes, an average of 28.92 knots. She had captured the supremacy from the North German Lloyd liner Bremen, which did 3,092 miles in four days, 14 hours, 27 minutes, an average of 28 knots.

Youth Live Too Fast Meaford Man Of 97 Is Convinced

Meaford, Aug. 8.

JAMES DAVIDSON, who came to Canada in 1879 and took up farming south of Meaford, celebrated his 97th birthday Sunday at his home with a few friends and neighbors.

Gardening is his favorite pastime and each year this 97-year-old man has a garden to be proud of and is generally one of the earliest in the town. Mr. Davidson frowns on the girls and boys of 'teen ages. He thinks they are living too fast, spending too freely and that they do not look out for the future. He himself had to work without machinery for years on his farm and save his money. He retired in 1903, and later moved to Meaford.

Find Airbases On Anticosti

H.M.C.S. VENTURE, ANTICOSTI ISLAND, Que., Aug. 8. — (CP).—Wing Commander G. Brookes has completed his second navigation of Anticosti Island and finds confirmation of all the reports of the last 100 years that Port Menier is the only safe harbor for surface craft. While there are about eight lakes on the island, those on the west end are best suited for air-base purposes.

The east end of the island is low and sampy. There are several good lakes, but they are buried in the bush, and access by road to take in supplies would be almost impossible.

The north shore is highland, with a ridge in the centre; but the west end is wider, more level, contains a number of good landing lakes and some possible areas for landing fields.

Nothing yet has been found as good as lake Plantin and the mile square grass land adjacent.

Further reconnaissances are continuing to-day with Flying Officer Berven taking the air with a radio operator and engineer.

Since the aircraft arrived weather has been perfect, so the expedition is getting in all the flying possible before weather breaks up and grounds it.

Pastor Cycles 3 Days To Relieve Sick Minister

Toronto, Aug. 8 (CP)

IT TOOK three days for Rev. A. Hinton, Pointe Claire, Que. minister, to ride a bicycle from his home a few miles west of Montreal to Toronto where he substituted for a sick preacher. He started the 350-mile return journey today, hoping to cover the return route in less time.

He preached the sermon yesterday at Newmarket United Church, replacing Rev. R. R. McMoth, ill with a throat ailment.

Trucker Is Crushed Under Load Of Brass

CHATHAM, Ont., Aug. 8.—(CP)—C. F. Lawrence, 34, Lakeview, near Toronto, died in Chatham General Hospital from injuries received when the truck he was driving plunged into the ditch after a crash with another truck on number two highway just west of Thamesville early today. Lawrence was crushed under a load of brass which shifted on the truck when it hit the ditch. Thomas Mason, 37, New Toronto, a passenger in the truck suffered a hip injury. His condition is not considered serious.

According to Traffic Officer R. J. Clark who investigated the accident, a truck owned by Douglas McGuire and driven by Clarre Cake, both of Thamesville, was proceeding east and the vehicle driven by Lawrence, and owned by the W. J. McAnaly Transport Company of New Toronto was travelling west. The trucks sideswiped at a curve in the highway and the impact sent the Toronto machine into a skid and it plunged into the south ditch. The heavy load of brass fitting shifted forward, crushing the cab. Almost half an hour elapsed before the two men could be extricated.

Cake and McGuire who was also in the Thamesville truck, escaped

Fr. Divine Rounds Up 2,000 As Roosevelt's Neighbors

KRUM ELBOW-ON-HUDSON, N. Y., Aug. 8. (AP).—Father Divine, Harlem's black messiah, leads 2,000 of his faithful today to the cult's latest "promised land," a 500-foot tract across the Hudson river from the ancestral estate of President Roosevelt.

Two excursion steamers were chartered to transport the "peace-shouting worshippers from New York city to a site where the negro evangelist hopes to establish a self-supporting colony of 3,000 disciples.

The tract was sold for $51,600 by Bowland Spencer, who said his sole reason for making the deal was "to test the theories of President Roosevelt against those of Father Divine."

Since the land was purchased 10 days ago, 25 negroes have worked steadily preparing for the visit of Father Divine and his followers, who will inspect two "sub-heavens" at Milton and Kingston.

Lightning Splits Pole In Lad's Hands But Does No Harm

Fort Erie, Aug. 8.

WHILE fishing at the shipyard slip on Niagara River, near Fort Erie, yesterday, Jack Richmond, Bertie Township youth, shouted to Joseph Green, another veteran follower of Izaak Walton: "I've got a bite."

A moment later, a bolt of lightning knocked Richmond's fishing pole out of his hand, shivering it to bits. Neither fisherman was injured, however. Mr. Green, veteran railway employee, said the escape was a hairbreadth one.

Best Man Faints

MONTREAL, Aug. 8—(CP)—Perhaps George Green to-day is wondering just how he, the best man, and not his brother, Frederick, the bridegroom, found the ordeal of a wedding a little too much Saturday. As the Greene brothers stood at the altar with the bride, Miss Ivy Ashby, George fainted but was revived shortly afterward. Reverend Father J. J. Durnin proceeded with the ceremony.

Wheat Price Asinine —Hepburn

Cause Wide Damage Says Premier Home From Tour

TORONTO, Aug. 8.—(CP)—Premier Hepburn of Ontario, returning home in fighting mood from a three-week air tour of Northwestern Canada and the sub-Arctic, termed "absolutely asinine" last night the Dominion government's action in setting a minimum price of wheat.

"It will cause irreparable damage," the Premier said. "Trying to interfere with the laws of supply and demand is absolutely asinine."

(Prime Minister Mackenzie King announced in Ottawa last week a minimum price of 80 cents a bushel for No. 1 northern wheat, produced on the prairies, basis head of the lakes.)

Asked if he agreed with the action of Agricultural Minister P. M. Dewan who requested the federal government Aug. 3 to set a minimum price of Ontario wheat, on the grounds farmers in this province were being "discriminated" against, Premier Hepburn said:

"Certainly: If we're going to be crazy let us be crazy all over the country."

What He expected.

Told the Prime Minister had advised Mr. Dewan the Dominion government had no power under existing legislation to extend the operations of the Canadian Wheat Board to Ontario, the Premier then said:

"I would expect that. Mr. King never did like Ontario."

The Premier returned to Toronto with J. P. Bickell, Toronto financier, after covering 10,000 miles in Mr. Bickell's big amphibian airplane. The Premier expressed his regret that worry was caused when he was reported missing on a flight over the Alaskan mountains on one stage of the trip.

Mr. Hepburn said the only accident occurred as the plane, in charge of Pilot Jimmy Towne, neared Toronto yesterday. That was when it circled over Mr. Bickell's home a few miles west of Toronto and the premier was dumped upon the floor.

"The most interesting part of the trip was when we were flying down the canyon of the Takue river on our way from White Horse to Juneau," Mr. Hepburn said. "We were down in a gorge and thousands of feet above us there were scores of glaciers. When we got right to the bay we saw a wall of black fog absolutely down to the water's edge."

Attendance Record Set In Peterborough

The attendance at the General Motors Previews of Progress in Peterborough was higher than the program had ever drawn in any city anywhere of less than 150,000 persons, Ernest Foss, of General Motors Corporation, told the members of the Peterborough Rotary Club at their weekly luncheon today. Mr. Foss who gave an educational and interesting address upon "Research" took advantage of the opportunity to express sincere thanks for the co-operation and support given the Previews of Progress in Peterborough.

President James Dutton also voiced thanks to the members of the Rotary committee who assisted, to the Examiner for sponsoring the affair and to Andy Rutter for his success as manager.

The president expressed the deep sorrof of the club at bereavement sustained by two members, Rotarians George and Jack Gillespie in the death of Mrs. Gillespie, senior, and as a tribute of respect the members of the club stood for a minute in silence.

Mr. Foss who was introduced by president Dutton, told Rotary something of recent research developments in the manufacture of synthetics, remarking that in almost every case the synthetic article turned out to be better than the original product for which it was substituted. The speaker had samples of some of these synthetics and they were passed around for the inspection of the members. Among other things he showed them wool manufactured from milk, a glass-like substance, with all the advantages of glass and a few more besides made from wood, fabrics resembling silk and canvas manufactured from glas sand synthetic rubber that was produced from a combination of coal, lime and salt.

Interesting experiments made possible by a machine called a photo-elastic machine, by which light rays were polarized with surprising results, given by Mr. Foss and proved most interesting to the Rotarians.

The speaker pointed out that these developments and inventions paved the way for new industries and new jobs for thousands.

The thanks of the club were extended to Mr. Foss on motion of Rotarian W. R. Morris.

Among the guests from out-of-town were Rotarians Roy D. Kirby of Toronto and Dr. Bruce Marshall of Montreal.

Lindberghs At Paris After Ducking Storm

PARIS, Aug. 8 (AP).—Mystery of the whereabouts of Col. Charles A. Lindbergh was cleared up today by an announcement he and Mrs. Lindbergh had landed at Le Bourget airport last night after a flight from Le Havre.

The ariport commandant's office said the Lindberghs had landed at 6.55 p.m. They had been unreported since 3 p.m. yesterday when they took off at Biesille airport, Le Havre, where they had landed for motor repairs.

Suspect Dysentery In Seventh Death

DETROIT, Aug. 8 (AP).—Bacteriological tests were being made in Detroit today to determine whether the death of a girl her Sunday was caused by shiga dysentery, believed responsible for six deaths in Owosso, Mich.

Latest victim was Mary Ruth Conrad, six months old, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Conrad of Saginaw. The family was visiting in Detroit. The baby became suddenly ill, was taken to receiving hospital and died in two hours.

A post mortem disclosed death was caused by a disease of the intestinal tract but the exact nature was not determined. Three other choldren confined to receiving hospital were to undergo examinations to-day.

Meanwhile three new patients were admitted to Memorial Hospital Owosso and assigned to the isolation unit. All appeared to be suffering from the same ailment.

Dr. Don W. Gudakunst, state health commissioner, has called a general meeting of Owosso and Shiawassee county physicians tonight at the hospital to discuss the outbreak.

Huckleberries Are Plentiful, 10 Cents Quart

The local market on Saturday probably saw the last of the season's berry crop. Strawberries were only a memory of recent delight to consumers, and red raspberries had dwindled to a last few boxes that sold at 10 cents a box. One gardener said he had told the pickers to come back on Monday and Tuesday and keep for themselves half their picking, and that clean up should leave the bushes bare until next season rolls around again. Huckleberries were exceptionally plentiful and cheap, 10 cents a quart, or eleven quarts for one dollar.

The worthless lands mentioned in the valuation of the county a year or more ago have produced a tremendous crop of "blueberries" in a wide sweep through Harvey, Burleigh, Methuen and Belmont townships. This harvest apparently reached its peak on Saturday, but there will likely be other offerings during the week and next Saturday.

Potatoes were cheap on Saturday, 15 cents a peck and 80 cents a bag of six pecks. "We seem to be giving them away," one producer remarked, "and if there is any profit at all at that price we probably lose it in the cost of the big paper bags."

Another man said his big Cavan Cobblers would be worth more next Spring than they are now at 15 cents a peck, but when they are ripe and plentiful and their season is upon them it is a natural expectation of the grower to get some immediate revenue. Potato prices retreated as far as values during the last few weeks. The crop has ripened rapidly and early, and you could get 11-quart lots at 40 and 50 cents and carry them off in the large-sized baskets.

Only a few peas were left at 10 cents a pint, shelled, and red currants were also scarce and about at the end of their tether at 10 cents a box.

Carrots and beets were generally half the price of a week ago, selling at four bunches for 10 cents. String beans were 11 quarts for 25 cents, squash 10 and 15 cents each, cabbages 5 cents each or three for 10 cents; and cucumbers sold at almost any price you offered, but the long specimens of this species, popularly called "telegraph cucumbers" were 10 and 15 cents each. Cauliflower at 5 cents, onions by the bunch at the same price, Swiss chard for those who must have their greens, were other offerings.

Yellow Trasparent apples were 25 cents the six-quart basket, and Red Astrakans the same price. B. Isaac from the Warkworth neighborhood of Percy township had an attractive display of the red apples. E. T. Minaker from Trenton unlimbered a truck load of corn and tomatoes, and was about the busiest man on the market handing out Golden Bantam at 15 cents a dozen.

Eggs were firm at 27 to 30 cents, butter steady at 25 to 28 cents and chickens around 22 cents a pound.

New York Gives Corrigan Ticker-Tape Welcome

In a blizzard of ticker-tape greater than any that has showered Broadway since Lindbergh got back from Paris, grinning Douglas Corrigan of flight-to-Dublin fame, came back to New York and an official reception that would make a reigning monarch envious. New York's Mayor Laguardia gave the ocean flier an official handshake on the City Hall steps, LEFT, but a howling crowd of New Yorkers gave him a more vociferous greeting. At RIGHT Corrigan seems to be waving all ways at once as the ticker-tap descends and the welcome clamor rises. Actually the effect is produced by double exposure.

war with the U.S.S.R. Herein lies the whole danger of this clash, to which the Japanese government should pay most serious attention."

Litvinoff outlined Russia's position to Shigemitsu yesterday afternoon, shortly after a Soviet army communique announced Japanese had been driven from Siberian territory about Changkufeng. (A Korean army announcement admitted loss of some ground at Changkufeng, but a Tokyo communique denied loss of the hill.)

Wants Her Old Treaty Used

The Russian terms for a truce were listed by Tass (official Russian News Agency) as:

1. Hostilities would be discontinued after both sides pledged not to cross or fire over a definite line, and recalled their troops if they were beyond that line.

2. That line should be the frontier fixed by the Russian treaty with China of June 26, 1886. (Japan wants both the treaty and other data possessed by Japan to be used in determining the line.)

3. After peace be restored, a frontier bi-lateral commission of two Russian representatives, one from Japan and one from Manchoukuo, would go to the frontier and negotiate for redemarkation on the basis of the 1886 agreement.

Japanese with machine-guns were the attacking force near Sulfenho, new border danger area, Litvinoff said. Several Red soldiers were wounded. The north Manchurian railway crosses into Soviet territory at Sulfenho.

Britain Paces

submarines and two submarine depot ships.

The British government declines to state what ultimate standard it is seeking. At the moment it is concentrating on deficiencies of past years, a tremendous job considering that only two of the present fleet of 15 battleships were built after the war. In addition to aircraft carriers being built, all battleships and large cruisers are being equipped with catapults to launch planes, reflecting a determination to combine the new and the old in the modern navy.

Strictly Defence.

After years of scrapping ships, reducing the gun-power and size of vessels, Britain is in the midst of a program to increase the might of the navy. It is not with the intention of building a striking force. The object is a defence force strong enough to patrol an empire scattered over two hemispheres and maintain 80,000 miles of trade routes over which 3,000 ships pass every day in the year and upon which Britain depends for its very existence.

The program dovetails with expansion plans for the army and air force—the whole scheme involving a much as £1,500,000,000 ($7,500,000,000) in five years. For 1938, Britain is appropriating £127,336,019 ($536,680,095) for the navy alone, an increase of £15,642,000 ($8,210,000) over 1937 and twice the average figures for the years preceding the expansion period.

After the war, Britain entered whole-heartedly into naval reduction and limitation agreements, scrapping ships, installing smaller guns and reducing personnel. She did this in the hope the world was ready for peace and collective security. One by one, the agreements were repudiated or adjusted until, 20 years after peace was declared, any nation with the exception of Germany and Russia may build as many ships as she chooses. Germany and Russia are bound not to exceed 35 per cent. of Britain's tonnage.

Finally Wakes Up

As one nation, then another launched a naval construction program, Britain sat back in the forlorn hope that agreement still could be reached. Finally she realized her sea supremacy was in danger. Today the sound of the rivet hammer echoes though British dockyards, the stocks are full and a steady stream of new vessels is starting to slip down the ways at an ever-increasing pace.

The history of the post-war years is filled with naval agreements, starting with the Washington treaty of 1922 which set the 5-5-3 ratio for the British, American and Japanese fleets. It imposed qualitative and quantitative limitations. So did the London Treaty of 1930.

The end of quantitative limitations started when Hitler came into power and started to rebuild the German navy. The end was in sight when Japan gave notice in December, 1934 of her intention to terminate the 1930 London Treaty.

A second London Treaty was signed in 1935 between Great Britain, France and the United States. It is in effect today but it imposes no quantitative limits, only qualitative in respect to the tonnage and guns of the various classes of ships. Japan would have nothing to do with it and Italy, although she has observed its provisions, declined to sign because of political difficulties arising from her conquest of Ethiopia.

Bigger Battleships

Since then, Japan has refused to disclose her battleship program and there are persistent rumors she is exceeding the treaty limits for both ships and guns. This has resulted in the laying down of two battleships which will be the largest in the world, each displacing 45,000 tons and mounting nine 16-inch guns.

R.M.C. Cadet Wins In Tyro

CONNAUGHT RIFLE RANGES, South March, Ont., Aug. 8.—(CP)—Cadet D. A. G. Bird of Toronto, attending the Royal Military College at Kingston today posted a possible at 200 yards to win the Tyro match, opening event of the Dominion of Canada Rifle Association annual meeting.

Five others posted scores of 49. They were CSM W. A. Harris and Pte. D. H. Gibson, both of Hamilton, Ont., Trooper G. L. Calkin, Kentville, N.S., C.S.M. G. T. Hermitage, Toronto and Miss M. W. MacLennan of Charlottetown.

Thirteen marksmen turned in scores of 48, including Pilot Officer K. A. Gordon, Trenton, Ont., Corp. C. S. Kilgore, Toronto; Const. W. M. Beatty, Belleville, Ont., and R. Mendizabel, Sarnia, Ont.

The 1930 London treaty, the last of the qualitative agreements limiting the relative size of navies, expired Dec. 31, 1936. Britain's naval rearmament program started the next day when the keels of two battleships were laid. It has been gathering momentum ever since and the peak year will not be until 1939, possibly 1940.

In February, 1938, Britain had 15 battleships, the United States, 15 and Japan nine. Britain was building five, United States two but the Japanese program was unknown. Since then, Britain has authorized two more.

Britain had six aircraft carriers, Japan, four and the United States three, and Japan two. Since then, Britain has started to build five more and has another authorized.

33 Cruisers

Regarding cruisers, both over-age and under-age as defined in the 1935 treaty, Britain had 59, was building 17 and since then has authorized seven more. Japan had 33 and was building two. United States had 27 and was building nine.

To complete the picture of world navies, France had five battleships and a battle cruiser, Italy had four battleships and Germany three pocket battleships. France was building two battleships and a battle cruiser, Italy two battle ships and Germany two battleships and two battle cruisers.

France had one aircraft carrier. Neither Germany nor Italy had any although Germany was building two. France had 16 cruisers, Italy 19 and Germany six. Neither France nor Italy was building any but Germany had five on the stocks.

The following table shows the net increase in the British navy between 1931 and today, counting ships afloat, building and authorized:

	1931	1938
Battleships	15	22
Cruisers	59	83
Aircraft carriers	6	12
Destroyers	184	200
Submarines	66	73

Regarding cruisers, the figures may be misleading. As each new cruiser was built an old cruiser was converted into an escort vessel, rearmed with lighter guns for use against subs. and aircraft. Actually, Britain is aiming at a fleet of 70 cruisers and the number of ships converted into escort vessels does not show in the table.

Lifer Accuses Former Officer Of Murder

FRANCIS CARROLL

PAUL DWYER

After serving eight months of a life sentence for the murder of Dr. James Littlefield and his wife, in a bizzare tragedy which began in South Paris, Me., and reached through three states, Paul Dwyer, 20, took the stand in a South Paris court and swore that former Deputy Sheriff Francis M. Carroll, 43, and not he, was the real slayer. Carrol is now on trial. Littlefield was slain, the state avers, when he threatened Carroll with prison on morals charges, and Mrs. Littlefield when she became suspicious as to her husband's fate. Carroll's daughter was Dwyer's sweetheart at the time of the tragedy.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, Aug. 8—(CP).—Winnipeg wheat futures prices dived nearly three cents near the close today in a featureless session. Final quotations were 2½ to 2¾ lower with October at .71⅝, November .71⅝b, December .70½ to ⅝b, and May .73½b.

The market took its cue from Chicago which moved more than a cent lower. Moderate selling by locals and outside traders that found little support was also a factor in the decline.

Export business was confined to a few loads. Intermarket spreading was not in evidence in the drab session.

Pit trade in coarse grains was of mixed character. Hedging in barley was in evidence with the trade generally quiet.

Saturday's Quotations.

RHEUMATIC PAINS

Don't let them spoil your Summer

It sometimes seems as though those spiteful Rheumatic twinges in your joints bring you up with a jerk deliberately—just when you're specially enjoying yourself. How often the prods of pain catch you the very minute you bend over at work or play. Don't listen to pessimists who say there's no relief from Rheumatic trouble with its Uric Acid crystals that prick and pain. You can help dissolve these crystals, and curb Rheumatic pain.

Wealthy people "take the waters" at some European Spa. Nothing better for those who can afford it. For those who can't there's a simple remedy of a similar nature. Fynnon Salt is its name—a name echoed gratefully by many Rheumatic sufferers.

Take a ½ teaspoonful in a glassful of water every morning. It liberates Sodium, Potassium and Lithium—a combination of 'Salts of the Earth' that help disperse Uric Acid and remove from your system the poisons that cause it. Take Fynnon Salt, the enemy of Rheumatic pains, and see how fine you feel, how soon pain goes. Large bottle of Fynnon Salt, 75c at all druggists

Walmsley—Phillips

A lovely wedding took place in St. Johns Church at 2.30 Saturday afternoon, when Hilda Margaret, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. O. Phillips, became the bride of Wallace J. Walmsley, second son of Mr. and Mrs. P. B. Walmsley of Huntsville. Rev. Canon W. P. Robertson officiated, and the church was tastefully decorated with gladiolli, palms and ferns. Miss Dothothy Walmsley, sister of the groom, sang "O Perfect Love" during the signing of the register, and wedding music was played by Miss Lily Bacon, A.T.C.M.

The bride was escorted to the chancel by her father, and wore a gown of pink silk net over taffeta, floor length and with bolero jacket. Pink scroll design was appliqued on the jacket and hem of the skirt. She wore pink silk lace mittens and pink linen slippers and a large transparent picture hat of silk mohair daintily appliqued in satin finish and trimmed with tiny pink buds. Her shower bouquet of Butterfly roses had streamers of silver and blue ribbons.

The bridesmaid, Miss Florence Lemmings, was gowned in a frock of pale blue mousseline de soie, with short full puff sleeves and peplum; she wore long blue lace mittens and blue and silver slippers and carried a bouquet of Briarcliffe roses. Her hat in matching tone was a large transparent picture model of silk mohair and was trimmed with pink and blue buds.

Mr. Gordon Walmsley attended his brother as best man.

Following the ceremony a reception and luncheon was held at the home of the bride's parents, 167 Antrim street, to the immediate friends and families of the young couple. Mrs. Phillips, mother of the bride, assisted in receiving the guests and wore a dress of grey sheer, grey sailor model hat of straw and felt and wore a corsage of deep pink roses. Mrs. Walmsley, mother of the groom, was attired in a cream ensemble, trimmed with white fur, and wore a corsage of Talisman roses. The four-tier wedding cake which centered the bride's table, was made by Gustav Buechi, internationally-known pastry chef of the National Club, Toronto, and a tiny bride and groom walking hand in hand and fashioned from sugar adorned the top of the cake.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Walmsley left on a honeymoon trip to Ottawa where they will take a summer lodge in the Gatineau district near Chat's Falls, and after an extended holiday will make their home on Oxford Avenue, Westmount, Montreal. The bride travelled in a jacket frock of black and white corded crepe, snap brim navy suede hat, navy shoes, gloves and purse.

We Noticed

Easy front fullness is important in the new fall skirts, although they do present a narrow appearance. Gores, unpressed pleats and rippled flares are important, too.

High necklines are in distinct favor in the new fall dresses.

Fashion still approves the dirndl styling for juveniles, for daytime and evening frocks.

In high style again for early fall wear is the white satin overblouse with closed neckline and short sleeves, having some sort of draped treatment through the bodice.

Pulley Halts "Descent From Heaven" And Girl Flaps Wings in Vain

Montreal, Aug. 8 (CP)

WHILE the wings strapped to her shoulders fluttered uselessly, an eighteen-year-old girl, who yesterday tried to "descend from heaven" on a tight rope, was stranded 30 feet above ground when a pulley jammed.

The girl, Miss Louis Pucacco of Mimico, Ont., and her decorative wings passed at least half an hour gingerly attached to the wire by a safety device encircling her waist.

Beneath her those who had gathered at a downtown church to celebrate the feast of Notre Dame de la Defense milled about, while the white-faced girl alternately closed and opened her eyes to stare at the crowd.

Although the rope stretching from the church to a nearby school continued to sag and the jammed pulley creaked steadily, the safety device did not give away. The girl was released and brought down when firemen arrived with a ladder.

JUST BETWEEN US WOMEN

Lood ahead, Think, Plan, Dream, and have faith in your dreams! For, out of dreams grow empires. Let imagination be the architect of your future, but do not forget that reason and good judgment must be the actual builders of it. Without their services your plans will never be anything more than plans."—O. S. Marden.

Dear Friends:

When I was over in the States, a few of us were talking about things in general, and as usual the talk veered around to religion and faith. I listened to this one and that, all intelligent people, all well up in the news of the day, the trend of fashion, the wars and talk of wars, dictators in relations to kings, and running like a scarlet thread through their talk was the deep desire to be reassured that God did have an interest in them.

And, as a stranger in a strange land, they asked my opinion. Rather puts you in a spot when they ask you that. So I told them some of my experiences in regard to prayers being answered, and they seemed amazed because I had such faith.

Why shouldn't I have faith when the One I put my trust in never let me down. Of course some of my prayers are not yet answered, (and here you may say is the catch in this so-called faith of hers.) But truly there is no catch in it al all. You must use reason in regard to prayer, just as you use it in regard to running your business or your home. If you let yourself run out of food until all the stores are closed, you cannot be so unreasonable as to blame the grocer.

If, on the other side, you buy a lot of perishable goods and find them spoil on your hands, you can still blame no one but yourself. If you are a merchant and buy winter goods for the summer trade, again it is your own bad judgment that is at fault.

But how few use their head when they start to pray. They want to take life in huge gulps, then if they get it like that they use up in a day or a week what should in reason spread over months.

Or they don't far enough ahead to think what they will do with this that they ask when they get it. Sometimes they do not stop long enough to think if they are capable of handling this, all they do is send their prayers out blindly, then blame God bitterly that He did not grant them.

You plan meals, or a wardrobe that will last you the summer, or a home and the furnishings of that home. You plan for a vacation, for a profession, but did you ever plan your prayers, looking at them from this angle and that to see if what you ask is what you need?

God said: "Come let us reason together." So, do just that, telling Him your needs, and often He will answer your prayers by showing you how to get them for yourself. Other times He will send them to you through a very natural manner, and in emergencies He will use miracles to give you your desires.

But all prayers do not drop like manna from Heaven, very often they seem to come casually, and that I think, is why so many do not realize their prayers are being truly answered. They want something out of the ordinary to happen because they prayed.

A month ago I had an important prayer answered which brought me much happiness, and it came just two days before I needed it. I could have said this did not come from God, but from such a one. Yet who put it in their mind to do this thing but the One I had asked it from?

He can use you and He can use me to answer the prayer of another, so when you seem impelled to do some deed, remember you may be just the humble messenger of God. A prayer is simply a long-distance call for help, and as you would not want to be silly or unreasonable in your requests to humans, do not be either when you send requests to your Heavenly Father.

How You Revive Limp Fabrics With STARCH

Until the introduction of the New Ivory Laundry Starch package starching instructions have been scarce, in fact almost nil. Now that is all changed. There Isn't Any Justice

We have an idea there were many old fishermen in this part of the world who read of the success of Mr. Gagnon of Niagara Falls in catching a 23-pound maskinonge and sadly decided that the good things of this world are not divided evenly. They have spent many years fishing in the lakes and rivers of the district, have raised innumerable blisters a paddling hither and yon among the weed beds and in later years burned up huge quantities of gasoline in outboard motor boats, trying to bag a big muskie and the chances are that not one in a hundred of them ever succeeded in hooking and landing a 23-pound fish.

And yet along comes a man from Niagara Falls, borrows a leaky old punt and a trawling bait that hadn't been used in years and five minutes after he has left the house at which he is a guest finds himself at one end of a line and a whale of a maskinonge at the other.

No wonder many an ardent fisherman is murmuring to himself today that there isn't any justice.

Be that as it may we hope the city publicity bureau has not failed to notice the Gagnon exploit. It will do no harm in the next piece of tourist promotion literature that is issued from city hall to call attention to the fact that it is not necessary to go outside of the boundaries of Peterborough to land big maskinonge. We would not want to suggest for a moment, of course, that it is possible to go out on the river, within the city limits, at any time and catch a 20-pounder. But at least, however, our Niagara Falls visitor has convincingly demonstrated that the thing can be and has been done.

It Works Both Ways

The new United States law which requires Americans who want to bring back with them $100 worth of goods duty free to have been out of the United States for at least 48 hours is beginning to hit Canadian cities along the border and there is a certain amount of complaint from business men whose sales to American tourists have dropped off.

Before this regulation came into effect, Americans could cross the border for a few hours and on their return take back with them $100 of goods on which no duty was collected. It was a fine arrangement for Canadian merchants close to the international line and their business profited materially from that class of trade.

Naturally they feel it when the volume of sales is affected by the new ruling that unless Americans remains two full days out of their country they must pay duty on the goods they bring back.

At the same time, however, it is difficult to see what can be done about it.

It is Uncle Sam's right to say what he wants to collect in the matter of duties upon goods coming into his domain and if he chooses to say that he no longer proposes to allow his people to slip over the line, buy $100 worth of Canadian goods and take them home without paying a nickel into the American treasury that after all is his own business.

And it should not be forgotten that the rule the United States has now put into force is exactly the same regulation that Canada has adopted in reference to goods brought back into Canada by Canadians returning from the United States. The Canadian government says that under such circumstances folk from the Dominion visiting the country to the south must be at least 48 hours out of Canada before they can take advantage of the $100 exemption. What is sauce for the Canada goose is also sauce for the United States gander.

Clean Up The Game

Lacrosse players and executives throughout the province need to be reminded that history has a way of repeating itself.

This fine and distinctly Canadian game was at one time almost driven out of existence because of the unnecessary roughness that crept into the play. Patrons became disgusted at the dirty tactics that became part of the technique of lacrosse and they quit going to the games with the result that Ontario towns that were once thriving centres for Canada's national game, turned their attention to baseball and lacrosse was close to disappearing completely off the map.

The development of the modern box lacrosse with its fewer players, smaller fields, more scoring and greater amount of action has brought about a gratifying revival in interest in the game however and lacrosse has been coming back into its own, with each year seeing more teams in action and greater attendance all over the province.

Now the handwriting has begun to appear on the wall once again. The same thing that nearly killed the game before is coming to the front anew. Police action has been necessary in several senior games recently, players have been injured by attacks that could properly be described in legal phraseology as "assault, occasioning grievous bodily harm," and even in our own arena there have been riotous scenes and free-for-all fights on occasion.

In other words lacrosse may soon find itself on the way out again if those in control of the game, benefitting from the experience of earlier days do not see to it that rough play is curbed, dirty players checked or driven out, and disorderly conduct eliminated. Lacrosse enthusiasts may find one flareup thrilling but when that kind of thing becomes a regular feature of scheduled games, sooner or later the people who pay their money in at the box office, will become disgusted and their support will be withdrawn.

It happened before and it will happen again unless the game is cleaned up in time. There is no demand for sissified lacrosse but there is a happy medium between that brand and the knock-him-down-and drag-him-out stuff.

Hard To Justify

No one seems to be worrying very much about the amendment to the Criminal Code that has just come into force, outlawing slot machines and similar gadgets, including pin-ball games that are used for gambling purposes.

The indifference in official circles to the operation of these machines which by no stretch of the imagination could ever be claimed to be a community asset is surprising. The devices serve no useful purpose and on the contrary they are doing an immense amount of harm by teaching youngsters to gamble and by taking out of the pockets of breadwinners money that should go into the household budget.

It is true that humanity as a whole loves to gamble but that is no reason why gambling devices should be thrust under people's noses and certainly no reason why municipal councils should throw their protection over gambling machines and become partners in the business by licensing the gadgets.

We are thoroughly in accord with the Windsor Star when it says that Windsor and other municipalities which licensed the devices have nothing of which to be proud.

"They never had any business passing such bylaws," says the Border City paper "as these did not make the machines legal. All they did was to make the municipalities a partner in an illegal enterprise and in illegal profits, hardly a creditable situation."

That is so obviously true that we are glad we have not been given the task of thinking up a defence in behalf of the municipal licensing of gambling devices. There are a lot of other difficult jobs that we would tackle with a great deal more relish and with a lot more confidence. The machines are an evil in the first place and they are not improved in status merely because the municipalities step in and demand their cut from the owners and operators.

Too Much Slackness

The Municipal World has been discussing what it calls a common mistake on the part of municipal councils in awarding audit contracts on the bases of bids, arguing that the value of any audit is in direct proportion to the ability, experience and skill of the accountant.

That statement would seem to be self-evidence, as is the further remark that until councils realize that the important thing in selecting an accountant 's not price but skill, experience and judgment the citizens will not receive the protection to which they are entitled.

In our opinion there is a much more serious weakness that many of the smaller municipalities are guilty of. It is not that they hire accountants at all. They take a chance instead, on entrusting the important job of auditing their accounts to men who have no expert knowledge of accounting and who are chosen often because they are good fellows and friends of members of council rather than because they possess any particular aptness for the responsible post to which they are appointed.

The slackness shown by many municipalities in this matter of auditing public accounts leaves the door wide open for irregularities and it speaks volumes for the innate honesty of the vast majority of folk in the public service that there have not been more defaults and more losses. The inefficiency of the audit in many cases almost invites trouble; and certainly violates all principles of sound management and administration of the business of the public.

Proper audits stop leaks and check wrong methods; but unfortunately many municipalities are satisfied with something that stops far short of being a proper audit.

Using The Newspapers

The motion picture industry will spend between now and the end of October $600,000 in advertising designed to stir up attendance at film theatres throughout the United States.

In this regard Will H. Hayes, the Czar of moviedom, say "Advertising creates a demand which results in increased production as well as selling that already produced. If their industries follow our lead hundreds of thousands will go back to their jobs in reopened factories."

That is undoubtedly true and the striking thing about the statement is that it comes not from an advertising executive but from a man who no connection with the advertising field. However, he is in an excellent position to gauge accurately the value of publicity and this tribute to the efficacy of advertising coming from such a quarter, should impress itself upon the executives of other industries.

If the movie business which can do much advertising on its own account through trailers shown in the theatres, and which has the support of magazines devoted exclusively to the movie field a hookup with radio through which additional publicity can be obtained, finds it desirable and necessary to spend large sums on advertising, the moral should be plain. It is clear that what is good business for an industry so fortunately situated in the matter of promotion is even better business for other industries not so happily fixed.

And there is another point worthy of note. The $600,000 Mr. Hays speaks of is to be used entirely for newspaper advertising and papers all over the continent are to be utilized. The film industry has always been shrewdly managed and when the organized motion picture producers distributors select the daily newspaper as the most effective and potent form of advertising that is available there is no need to stress the point. The fact speaks for itself.

NOTE AND COMMENT

It seems idle to boast about the peace we enjoy in Canada as long as lacrosse continues at its present merry gait.

When Hon. C. D. Howe says that Canadian railways are facing difficult times he is not telling the railways anything new.

Lieut. Douglas Cleland of Toronto has won a riding competition in Eire. It takes a good man and a good horse to do that in Dublin, the home of great riders.

Regattas are useful in one way that they show there are folk who can paddle a canoe, despite the number of outboard motors in use.

The death of Pearl White suggests the idea that if you remember when she used to thrill you in movie serials, you have been voting for some time.

The next Canadian Corps reunion is destined to be held in Montreal. In that case it would not be difficult to furnish the French atmosphere.

Tennis is to be allowed in Toronto on Sundays provided there is no noise. But how can they play that game without raising a racquet?

Now they are talking about Senate reform again. As Mark Twain said about the weather, everybody talks about it but nobody does anything about it.

Boy Scouts in Ontario have registered 183 camps this summer. It is an ideal way to develop both the physique and the esprit-de-corps of the troops.

In fixing the price of wheat at 80 cents, the Government has not succeeded in pleasing the west. Another good sign that there will be no election this year.

Now that the wading pools are to be opened on Sundays in Toronto, the citizens who have not learned how to play golf will be able to solve the problem of Sunday recreation.

The thousands who pay good money in Toronto to see the Masked Marvel and his masked manager leave the impressio that it would not be difficult to sell Queen City folks the Peace Bridge.

When a Buffalo man went to a doctor complaining there was something in his eye it was discovered that the something was a gold nugget. Most of us have to be satisfied with a cinder.

MY SONG

I'll sing a song of Summer, and the gay, bright wildflowers blooming;
To nights when moonlight bathes the lake in iridescent sheen;
I'll sing my song of morning mists, and far horizons looming,
And quiet fields, and country lanes, and pools where birches lean.

I'll build my song of thistledown, so care-
free, lightly blowing;
I'll build it of a lover's words soft-whis-
pered in the gloom;
I'll build it of the sunrise in its first faint colors glowing,
And eventide, with light that gleams from some small cottage room.

I'll shape my song from breezes blown from nowhere into nowhere;
I'll shape it from the rosebuds and the clover and the grain;
I'll pattern it from fleecy clouds, and shadows on my lawn chair,
And dream filled hours, and sun filled days, and pattering of rain.

I'll take my song of Summer, when I've put it all together,
And give it for the singing to all the winds that blow,
That East and West and South and
North, in every clime and weather
You'll hear my Summer song to you no matter where you go.

Says Tax Milk To Bonus Cheese

(By Rusticus in the Stratford Beacon-Herald)

SKIM MILK is a very important by-product on most Ontario farms. We like the white fluid to feed our calves and hogs, even though we know that most of the food value went out the cream spout of the separator. In fact, we have become so dependent upon skim milk that we can hardly realize how we would get along without it. But perhaps skim milk is about the most expensive feed we could use to raise those wee heifer calves and pigs.

True, nothing can quite take the place of milk in the rearing of young animals, just as nothing can take the place of good wholesome milk in the human diet. If the urban population were using all the milk it should be, we might not be writing these lines today. There would be no milk problem on Ontario farms then. But with so very many families not able to buy the proper amount of milk for children or adults, the milk problem, or more specifically the butter problem, is becoming acute indeed.

Our farmers are not objecting to the price of butter being too low; though, goodness knows, it is low enough. The surplus piling up in cold storage warehouses is what really has us worried .We understand it is being put there in the hope that a higher price may materialize on the overseas market; but if that price should fail to advance, then the stored surplus will prove a real handicap to a healthy market next Fall and Winter.

The surplus butter can be attributed only to the value farmers place on skim milk. Cheese factories offer us an excellent outlet for our surplus milk and butter. While the price of cheese is high enough right now to make the cheese factory an attractive proposition, dairymen balk at sending their whole milk and depriving their calves and hogs of a drink of skimmed milk.

It has frequently been suggested that shippers of milk for the city trade and patrons of butter factories should be compelled to contribute a certain small percentage of their receipts toward subsidizing the export of cheese.

Some few years ago a bonus was paid on cheese manufactured. This was done to relieve the domestic market of a burdensome surplus, which really only consists of a very small percentage of our total production. If we remember correctly, the government advanced the funds to pay that subsidy, and possibly we should expect help from the Government once more in getting rid of this butter surplus. Everyone depends upon the Government for some assistance today, so why not the dairyman?

We think a more substantial method of market regulation would be better. We believe that dairymen themselves should tackle the problem. We believe that cheese exports will have to be bonused from a fund created by a small tax on every pound of butter and every pound of whole milk produced in Canada—and the producers themselves can best handle that marketing organization, if they would half try.

Why stress cheese? Simply because this is one product we can find a ready market for. Other Empire countries can command a premium for their butter in the British market, but Canadian cheese is of the highest quality and even if the British market could not absorb all our surplus cheese, there is a home market that would, or at least should, consume a much greater amount of this wholesome food.

Of course, creamery patrons and operators will fight a tax on butter and milk. They would probably take a short-time view and be inclined to hope that the market will yet right itself. But it would seem to us that the dairy industry might as well make up its mind that a new set of conditions exist and that we must shape our marketing policies to meet those conditions.

The solution of the dairyman's surplus lies in making the cheese factory patrons' returns attractive enough, so that more milk will flow into the cheese vats. Yes, we believe that skimmed milk should be made so expensive a food that more farmers would not want to feed it. In fact, it is an expensive feed even now.

AN EARLY PEACH.

(Detroit Free Press)

THE DISCOVERY and development of a peach that ripens six weeks earlier than the popular Elberta variety is something to make horticulturists sit up and take notice.

The discoverer is a Canadian nurseryman, C. Howard Fisher, who found this "freak of nature" growing on a single branch of a Valiant peach tree, and ripening three weeks in advance of the fruit on the rest of the tree.

That was four years ago. Young trees grown from buds cut from the branch are now carrying on the early-ripening strain.

While this new peach may be a freak of nature, it holds out great promise for the fruit belts of Michigan and other northern states.

The Chinese and other peoples have been cultivating the peach, which Darwin believed was developed from the common almond, for more than 4,000 years, and have created some 2,000 varieties, at least 500 of which are grown commercially.

And yet it is still possible for a man in Ontario to walk into his orchard and find a new and valuable variety, which nature has handed him on a silver platter, as it were.

A FAIR WARNING.

THERE are still a number of residents in this district who insist on driving with no light showing. One of these days there will be a big smash-up, with horse, buggy and bodies scattered all over the highway. • Western Grain Growers Can't Lose

(From the Montreal Star)

SUPPOSING you had something, like company shares or eggs, that you are going to sell some time. You want to make a profit on the sale but you are a little nervous about the price you are going to get. Along comes a kind person and says: "I don't want your stock (or your eggs), but out of the kindness of my heart I will guarantee you a price that will give you a profit. Of course, if I can sell them afterwards at a better figure I'll still give you the extra money."

So you can't lose. You can sell if the price of stocks or eggs goes up. If it goes down you can call on your friend to make good his promise. Then if the price rises again he will still have to give you all the extra gravy.

That is the position the Western grain growers are in now. The Dominion Government has promised to take all the wheat they want to sell at 80 cents a bushel. If the market price is below that, the Dominion Government will unload at the lower figure and stand the gaff itself. If the Federal Wheat Board can sell any above 80 cents it will turn the profits over to the farmers.

If the market price for wheat is below 80 cents, all the farmers will naturally dump their produce on the Wheat Board. Since it is the declared policy of the Government not to hold the wheat, the Board will have to turn round and sell the wheat on the market at the prevailing price. That may cost a great deal of money. Suppose, for example, that the market price averaged 76⅞ cents, the rate at which October wheat closed yesterday on the Winnipeg Exchange. With a 300,000,000 bushel crop the Government loss would be $9,375,000.

Last year, with a meagre crop and much higher world prices, the Government guarantee was 87½ cents. It was not brought into use because the price held up above 90 cents all season. This year, with a bumper crop and a world market that has sagged considerably, the Government has decided to cut the guarantee by only 7½ cents.

It appears that the minimum price set is designed to some extent to provide compensation to the West for the bad years it has gone through. The Prime Minister said that the Government had studied all phases of the question, particularly the "position of Western Canada in relation to Eastern Canada." For the last few years the price has been fairly good, but the farmers have had little wheat to sell, in many cases none at all. This time they will have more, and the Government is saying that the farmers get a good round price. The result should be a revival of business in the West, since the population will have a much greater purchasing power than it has had for years.

• The Horse Is Holding His Own

(From the Woodstock Sentinel-Review)

THE HORSE is not doing badly despite the inroads of the gasoline motor in his domain. This was statistically proven at the recent Veterinary Medical Association's Convention at New York, where Dr. T. A. Sigler of Greencastle, Ind., reported that horses and mules in the United States exceed in value every other class of animal. The value of horses and mules is estimated at $1,739,067,000 which is twice the value of all sheep and pigs and as much as all beef cattle, sheep and pigs combined.

Even if it is taken into account that the average horse has a monetary value several times that of a pig or a sheep, it must be admitted that the horse is doing a great deal better than was expected, for when motorcars began to be generally used it was freely predicted that the horse was destined for an almost complete discard. However, some phases of horse employment have developed or undergone revival. It is safe to say that more horses than ever before are used for pleasure purposes. Young people have taken to horseback-riding and the number of animals thus used has increased considerably. In delivery work, it is claimed that the horse is economically preferable to the motor vehicle. The principal drawback is that he requires human care when his day's work is done. He must be fed, watered and stabled. That requires labor and in these days of devotion to pleasure, such chores are distasteful.

On farms, the horse is likely to maintain his prestige for a long time. It is difficult to oust him there, for he is more useful commercially than motorized power. Then there is the racing industry. There are more operating racetracks on this continent tha never before. The betting could not flourish without the horse. All in all the day of extinction for the horse is not in sight.

• A Country and Its Trees

(From the Glasgow Bulletin)

"When ye hae naething else to dae, ye may aye be sticking in a tree; it'll be growing, Jock, when ye are sleeping."

IT CAN HARDLY be said that our generation has been overcareful of its trees. We have cut them down in the way of national defence, in the way of housebuilding, and for more casual reasons. At the same time both policy and sentiment have conspired to bring the tree into its own again, and the record of the Forestry Commission, which had the attention of Parliament yesterday, is fair testimony to a new and better outlook.

The Commission have the development and guardianship of 1,000,000 acres of forest land. From time to time we see it started—as, for example, in the recent Liberal policy report—that too much of the land acquired has arable or grazing value which should rule out afforestation, but the absence of a satisfactory census makes it difficult to assess this criticism.

Certainly we need all the trees we can get, and when we get them, as in the Argyll forest park to which Mr. Johnston paid a just compliment in the House of Commons, we find a balance of use and amenity which should be a strong incentive to further effort.

Mr. Johnston is on good ground also when he calls for extended research into the problem of bracken and towards the removal or discouragement of pests. But if these are no small points the great thing is to find a revival—officially backed and carried out with knowledge and zeal—in national respect for the natural furniture of the woodlands.

In a few years' time the tree census now being carried out will be complete and we shall know the nature and state of health of every woodland over five acres. Meantime we cannot be too attentive to the business of enlarging the stock, even if it involves greater demands on the Treasury than have so far been contemplated.

• An English Farmer In Alberta

(From the Lethbridge Herald)

THIS IS A STORY about a Southern Alberta farmer, and with it there is a moral or two. An Englishman with no knowledge whatever of farming—he had been a mechanic before he left the old land—took up a homestead in Southern Alberta. In the time he has been here, he has gone through lean years as well as good. Today he is in the possession of a thousand or more acres, all paid for. He isn't in debt, for he cleared up all his liabilities last year. This year he has 900 acres in crop, and if it yields as well as it promises now, he will have a tidy sum to his credit in the Fall of the year.

This farmer never worked on a farm until he came to Alberta. He has learned an awful lot in the meantime. He doesn't turn up his nose at the fellows who recommend sweet clover and corn and crested wheat grass. He does not think the chaps on the Experimental Farms or those who edit the farm pages of newspapers do not know what they are talking about. He believes they do and he often follows their suggestions. The result is that he is a good farmer; that he gets a crop when other farmers get very little.

Neither does he live by grain alone. He has live stock and has constructed a fine reservoir to water them. There is a lot of helpful information that could be supplied by this farmer if he would only allow himself to be quoted, but he is a modest farmer and we bring him into the discussion because he is an Englishman who did not know anything about farming and also because he is out of debt.

Now for the morals to be drawn from this farmer's success. First, it isn't necessary for an Englishman to know about farming before coming to Canada to take up a farm. If it were possible to fill Alberta up with Englishmen of his type we would soon have a greater and better Alberta. Moral two, is that farming can be made to pay and you can keep out of debt if you follow the plan our English friend has followed, and do not assume to handle more than can be paid for.

This Englishman credits the banks with having given him a lift up. Instead of damning the banks as so many Albertans have been doing in recent years, our friend praises them as having given him a helping hand when he needed it.

Remember to recall this Englishman and what he has achieved in Alberta when you meet a grouser who says that farming doesn't pay, and it is impossible for a farmer to keep out of debt.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

The Lord is my shepherd; I shall not want.—Ps. xxiii, 1.

FOR thus saith the Lord God; Behold I, even I, will both search my sheep, and seek them out. As a shepherd seeketh out his flock in the day that he is among his sheep that are scattered; so will I seek out my sheep, and will deliver them out of all places where they have been scattered in the cloudy and dark day....

I will feed them in a good pasture, and upon the high montains of Israel shall their fold be: there shall they lie in a good fold, and in a fat pasture shall they feed upon the mountains of Israel....

I will seek that which was lost and bring again that which was driven away, and will bind up that which was broken, and will strengthen that which was sick....And I will make them a covenant of peace, and will cause the evil beasts to cease out of the land: and they shall dwell safely in the wilderness, and sleep in the woods. And I will make them and the places round about my hill a blessing; and I will cause the shower to come down in his season; there shall be showers of blessing....

And ye my flock, the flock of my pasture, are men, and I am your God, saith the Lord God.—Ezek. xxxiv, 11, 12, 14, 16, 25, 26, 31.

No man hath seen God at any time. If we love one another, God dwelleth in us, and his love is perfected in us. Hereby know we that we dwell in him, and he in us, because he hath given us of his Spirit....

And we have known and believed the love that God hath to us. God is love, and he that dwelleth in love dwelleth in God, and God in him.—I John iv, 12, 13, 16.

BRITONS FIRST.

(St. Thomas Times-Journal)

HARK BACK to June, 1919. Alcock and Brown, two British airmen, first flew the Atlantic. For that time it was probably the best machine made. But compared with the nine-year-old Corrigan plane it was eight years older than that, when planes had not long emerged from the "crate" stage and the instruments these men had were primitive compared with what Corrigan had.

The Alcock-Brown flight, all circumstances considered, was the greatest and most daring of the Atlantic flights. It was not ballyhooed with snappy phrases and maybe for that reason it is almost forgotten. The majority of people, young people at any rate, especially in the United States, if asked who first flew the Atlantic, would probably answer, "Lindbergh."

THE SIMPLE LIFE.

(Kitchener Record)

IT IS SAID that the world has been so thoroughly explored that there is nothing left for the adventurous to seek. World records have been broken in every line of endeavor. One is no longer astonished at the inventions of clever minds. Old and young have ceased to be surprised. Is it then any wonder that the children of our time no longer show any curiosity? Their minds are sated. There are no mysteries. They are not curious because they already know. They miss a lot but they are not aware of the fact. And until we get back to a simpler, saner manner of living our young people will continue to yawn when they should gasp with wonder and delight.

THEY'RE GOING UP.

(Niagara Falls Review)

STAMFORD as well as the city of Niagara Falls finds relief rolls and costs mounting in spite of lowered provincial grants in aid of unemployment relief. The time must come when the whole cost of relief must be born by either provincial or federal governments, or both. Municipalities draw up and pass their budgets, including estimated relief expenditures, only to find themselves far out in the latter respect.

TWO WORLDS

BY MAUD McCURDY WELCH

READ THIS FIRST:

Determined to show Dr. Julian Paige, the man she is in love with, that she can make her own way in the world, Noel Shayne, wealthy society girl, burns her bridges behind her, moves to a rooming house and, for lack of anything better, obtains a job as a taxi dancer which she feels will be only temporary. She is living with a girl named Laurie Evans whom she met in the park. Noel feels she has a dangerous rival in Ruth Chester, Julians pretty nurse, who has been antagonistic. Noel is alarmed when one of the men with whom she dances at the Peacock seems to recognize her and almost discloses her identity to Nick Luigi, the proprietor. Julian calls Noel to take her to dinner before leaving town on a case. She evades him when he asks where she is working. That night a man follows her home from the dance hall.

(NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY)

CHAPTER 10

"You could manage the rent, if you didn't have to pay all my expenses," Laurie said sadly.

"Now, Laurie," Noel reproached, "you just get that off your mind. I couldn't have done without you at all." Then Noel added, "We'll manage some way. And I'll have $2 tonight—remember."

That night when Noel started home from the Peacock something queer happened. A strange man followed her home. But he managed it so cleverly, Noel couldn't be sure whether or not it was done purposely.

THE MAN who had followed Noel home the night before was at the Peacock the next evening. He sat alone in the opposite corner of the divan from where Luigi usually sat.

When the Peacock closed that night, he followed her again, keeping a distance behind her of some 15 or 20 feet, not making any attempt to catch up with her.

This time Noel was convinced that the stranger was following her. It caused her more anxiety for him to walk behind her, keeping the same distance, than it would have if he had walked up and accosted her. Then she would have known that he was just an ordinary masher and would have easily put him in his place. She couldn't imagine why he should shadow her. Did he have designs on her precious $2?

Noel went into the house, her breath coming rapidly. She hadn't dared look behind her when she had come up on the porch of the Court street house, but she had a feeling that the man had stopped on the street in front and was still standing there.

Laurie was in bed, but she was awake, and she knew at once by Noel's expression that something was wrong. When Noel told her, she got up and peeped through a tiny slit she made between the shade and the window. It was true. A man was standing on the sidewalk gazing at the house. But it was too dark to see his face.

"What do you suppose he wants?" Noel asked, her voice tremulous.

"Now, don't worry, Noel," Laurie said comfortingly. "He's just probably got a crush on you, and wanted to know where you lived — just somebody from the Peacock who danced with you."

But Laurie's words were not very reassuring. Noel thought she had recognized the man she had seen at Luigi's tonight as the same man who had followed her last night. She still couldn't be sure. But she couldn't help feeling there was a sinister purpose behind it all. Everything was going wrong.

Nick Luigi had come out boldly and asked her to have a little dinner with him in his apartment which was on the top floor of the dance palace.

That had happened just as Noel was leaving. She had told Luigi that she was very tired and wanted to go home.

"All right then, baby," he had agreed. "I can be patient, but don't make me wait too long."

Noel had felt that there was a threat in his low, tight-lipped voice. She felt worried about it. And then there was the rent.

"Listen, Laurie," she began, "here's the $2 for tonight, and with the two from last night, Mrs. Blarsom ought to be satisfied for a while. We can do without eating until — well, indefinitely, I suppose," she finished with a poor attempt at a laugh.

To Noel's surprise, Laurie's little freckled face was all smiles. "Now you listen," she exclaimed. "I've got a job, and I've also got $5. So we won't have to do without food."

"And we won't have to duck out, will we?" Noel exclaimed, and sank into a chair with a feeling of relief. "Well, we are progressing," she exclaimed a minute later. "We've both got jobs of—sorts. We can pay the rent and still eat."

Noel looked about the room, which Laurie's effort had made far more bearable. The curtains were back at the windows, and were actually white and crisp, although a little ragged. The rug looked more faded, but it fairly bristed with cleanliness. Once she had wanted to turn from the room in horror. Now it seemed friendly, even the grotesque old pitcher sitting in the bowl on the funny washstand was like an old friend. Laurie's news was still more surprising. For her job was that as cashier in the De Luxe cafe, where the former cashier had married unexpectedly.

When Noel thought of Laurie being in the De Luxe, just across from the Medical Arts, she was conscious of a stab of envy. Why, every day Laurie could look out the plate glass window and see Julian as he went in and out of the revolving doors of the building. Laurie of course, didn't realize what a privilege that would be.

Impulsively Noel decided to tell Laurie a little about Julian, so she would at least recognize him when she saw him.

"I sometimes have lunch or dinner with a young doctor friend at the De Luxe," she began. Then told her his name, and gave a brief description. "You'll probably see him."

Laura smiled. "Lots of the doctors take their meals at the De Luxe. And the nurses, too. There's a clinic in the building."

"Yes, I know" Noel nodded. Laurie's words naturally made her think of Ruth Chester, so competent, so crisp and immaculate in her white uniforms and white square-heeled shoes, and so darkly pretty.

She wondered if Ruth Chester was with Julian in New Orleans. She probably was by now, she decided. And New Orleans was such a romantic city with its French quarter, and the old, old houses with their little balconies and "iron lace" and all the beautiful century-old trees with the Spanish moss hanging so gracefully from their branches.

New Orleans was an ideal city for lovers. And no matter whether Julian realized how Ruth Chester felt toward him or not, she would press every possible advantage. In her mind's eye, Noel could see them together there, driving around under the soft southern moon in Julian's shabby car—

Perhaps it was only natural, Noel decided. Ruth couldn't work with Julian day by day—Julian being what he was, the most interesting and fascinating man on earth — and not fall in love with him.

And then Noel remembered something she had often tried to forget and could not. Julian's words and the look of quiet determination on his face that evening in the drawing room at Stone Gate, when he had said so calmly: "The truth is, I have no intention of falling in love with you."

He had meant it, too, Julian was not the type of man to make idle speeches.

Laurie suddenly broke into Noel's unhappy thoughts. "We'd better get to bed honey."

"Yes, I suppose so," Noel agreed listlessly.

In spite of Laurie's good news and the fact that the future was looking up, Noel couldn't fight out of her despairing mood.

If she only knew whether Ruth Chester was in New Orleans with Julian or not, she tried to tell herself it wouldn't matter. It was the uncertainty that made her feel so blue.

She had started on this adventure to prove to Julian that she wasn't the parasite he believed her to be. But it seemed very useless, even perhaps foolish, to her tonight. If she hadn't burned every bridge behind her, if there had been any possible loophole left, she might have given up and gone back. She would have to stick it out, no matter if she did weaken and want to go back, however. There wasn't anything else she could do.

When she awakened the next morning. Noel had but one thought. She had to know if Ruth Chester had gone to New Orleans, and if Julian had returned. There was only one way to find out.

So Noel called Julian's office. oT her surprise Ruth Chester's rich, contralto voice answered. There seemed to be a slight hesitation at her end of the wire when Noel asked if Doctor Paige had returned. Then Ruth told her that Doctor Paige was not back yet. He would probably be away several days longer.

Anyway, Ruth wasn't with him, Noel thought happily. But that night when she came home from the Peacock, Laurie told her that Doctor Paige had been at the De Luxe for lunch. She had recognized him by Noel's description, also because she had heard someone call him Doctor Paige. So Ruth Chester had lied.

Staid Hong Kong Now City of Rumor

HONG KONG, Aug 8 (AP).—It may have been a staid British colony and in some ways it still is, but the Sino-Japanese war has had its effect on Hong Kong.

Old-timers have good reason to rub their eyes and wonder and remark over their whiskeys and sodas that things have changed.

Events of the past year have given Hong Kong a touch of fever, a dash of glamour, a generous dose of anxiety, and a general air of mystery and excitement that knocks the staid British idea for a loop.

Hong Kong today is packed with rumors and rumor-mongers with war refugees and wealthy Chinese, with airplane salesmen, munitions salesmen, adventures and adventuresses, with spies and what have you.

It has been, and is, the doorway for Chinese military supplies. It has prospered commercially and yet fears for its economic future. It carries on with the British colonial traditions, and yet the hotel lobbies are packed with as strange an assortment of people as can be encountered anywhere.

In the dead of night, you may go out and see caravans of trucks and supplies going into China. In the harbor you may see Chinese fishing junks which have been damaged by Japanese warships You may sit in the Hong Kong hotel and hear more rumors a minute than you believed possible

"So they say" is the stock phrase in Hong Kong nowadays. It covers about everything the imagination can rake up. It is added on to statements that Hong Kong today has 16-inch guns mounted somewhere. It is tied on, as a careful afterthought, to information of every description.

And Hong Kong is gay about it all. In the packed hotels, they dance until 1 a.m. before the orchestras break out with "God Save the King."

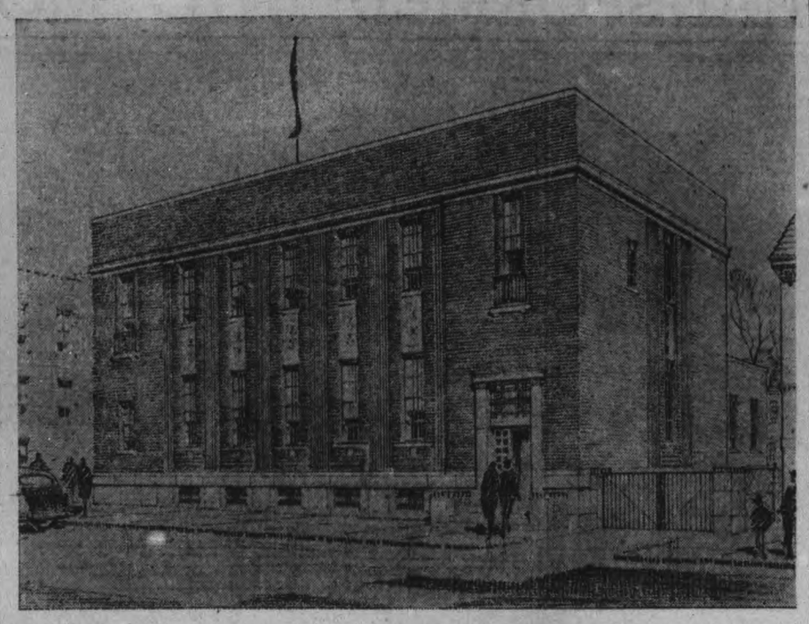
Drawing Of New Bell Telephone Building



Architect's drawing of new Bell Telephone building now under construction on Hunter Street. The structure will be of reinforced concrete with a two-storey facade extending 72 feet on Hunter Street with a depth of 42 feet. From this point an additioned one-storey building extends a further 40 feet. The front and side walls, faced with brick, will be graced with tall pilasters which extend from the stone base to the main cornice. An interesting color effect will be obtained by the use of glazed tile panels in a range of green tones over the principal ground floor windows. Specially designed metal work will be introduced over the main entrance. It is expected that the building will be completed early next year at which time the Northern Electric Company will commence installation of the dial switching apparatus and associated equipment, in readiness for the changeover of Peterborough's telephone system scheduled for the fall of 1939.

Goodnight Story

By MAX TRELL

IT WAS quite late at night when Knarf and Hanid reached the playroom. The room was dark except for a bit of moonlight which came in through the curtains at the window. They ran right up to the little show house which stood in the farthest corner of the room and called loudly: "Mr. Punch! We're back from the seashore with the children! Oh, what a wonderful time we've had!"

Finally they came upon Mr. Punch sitting quite by himself on the back steps of his little house. He was smoking his pipe. He smiled up at them.

"So you've all had a wonderful time? Yes, the seashore is a lovely place to go to."

"And the sun was shining all day long," Hanid said. "You ought to see how tanned the children have become."

"Why don't you go to the seashore, Mr. Punch? Why don't you get tanned and sunburned?"

Mr. Punch smiled sadly. "Well," he said. "I don't go out much these days.

"Why don't you get sunburned?"

I often look out of the window though, and see how nicely the sun is shining. I could go right 'out in the garden, and get sunburned. But—well, you know the children need me here. It wouldn't be right for me to go out."

He'd Look Handsome

"But the sunshine would do you good. You'd look very handsome with a coat of tan, Mr. Punch."

"Do you really thing so, my Dear? Yes, I guess you're right. I remember when I was younger how handsome I looked with my fine coat of tan. But I don't want to get tanned any more."

"You don't! The two shadows exclaimed in surprise.

He shook his head. "No. I've decided it's much better for me to look nice and pale. It's all right to get sunburned when you're young. But when you begin to get old—to tell you the truth I wouldn't get sunburned for anything in the world. I like moonshine. Just look! It's coming through the curtains now. Just move me over there near the sill, will you? There! Thank you very much, my Dears," he said as the two shadows helped him over. He held his face in the moonlight. "Yes," he added in a happier voice. "I've given up getting sunburned. It's much better for me to get moonburned."

Morrish Branch Millbrook Guests

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MILLBROOK, Aug. 8. — The local branch of the Women's Institute had as its guests on Wednesday evening over twenty members of the Morrish branch, who arrived about eight o'clock, and were welcomed by the president, Mrs. R. J. McKnight, and the members of the reception committee, Mrs. Basil Richards and Mrs. H. Nattress.

Through the courtesy of Mr. F. C. Scott the shuffle-board courts were reserved for the visitors, who were taught the intricacies of the game by the donor, Mr. Scott, and who became most enthusiastic and interested in the play.

A friendly competition between the Morrish and Millbrook members brought this part of the evening to a close, when adjournment was made to the home of Mrs. H. J. Armstrong, where the hostess society served a dainty lunch, and further social intercourse was enjoyed.

The visit on Wednesday evening was a return one on the part of the Morrish W.I., the Millbrook organization having some time ago, by invitation, motored to this hospitable community west of Welcome, and been royally entertained at the Reynolds' homestead.

Mr. Scott and the husbands of the visiting members from Morrish were included in the guests for the supper hour at Mrs. Armstrong's home.

Slip Cover Gives Key to Lovely Color Scheme

Dress Up Your Shabby Furniture

Make a slip cover for your sofa and build a refreshing new color scheme around it.

Complicated? Not a bit. For the sofa start with a multi-colored fabric like chintz or printed linen. Use colors from its design to slip your chairs.

Our picture shows a terra cotta material with design in beige and brown. For one chair, select plain terra cotta stripes alternating with figured ones in green and beige; for another a beige cover welted in green.

With a sofa in bottle green, a smart choice is a self-figured beige for one chair; a dusty rose, narrowly striped in beige for another.

Fitting a trim sofa cover is easy if you pin on material before cutting, as our upper sketch shows. Remember to centre fabric design on each seat cushion and each division of back.

Our 32-page booklet gives diagrams, step-by-step directions for all kinds of slip covers. New materials, colors, styles.

Send 15c in coins for your copy of HOW TO MAKE SLIP COVERS to Home Service, The Examiner. Be sure to write plainly your NAME, ADDRESS, and the NAME of booklet.

Lachine Wins C.C.A. Honors

KINGSTON, August 8.—Canadian canoe championship burgee flies from a flagstaff at the Lachine Boat Club of Montreal as a tribute of club triumph in the national paddling regatta held on the calm waters of the Cataraqui River here on Saturday. Victory only went to the Lachine club in the last race of the day when the Montrealers finished second in the mile war canoe, picking up two points to beat out Montreal Cartierville Boat Club and Winnipeg.

Small Attendance At Lakefield Game

LAKEFIELD, Aug. 8.—The first baseball game staged in Lakefield this year since school closing brought activities of the school teams to and end was held here on Saturday afternoon in the Exhibition grounds when Cosgrave's of Toronto battled with the Peterborough junior baseball team in an exhibition game sponsored by the local branch of the Canadian Legion. The game was held to swell the benevolent fund of the Legion, and though decidedly disappointing from the angle of gate receipts, the teams put up a good fight. Peterborough juniors carried off the honors with a two-point win, the final score being 7 to 5.

Patrons of baseball in the village are not being catered to this season as in former years and have apparently been forced to turn their attention to other fields, which probably accounts for the small attendance at the grounds on Saturday.

Ports-Brintons In 4-All Draw

Port Credit and the Brintons battled to a 4-all tie in exhibition game played at the former town on Saturday afternoon. The battle was fairly close, the forwards on both sides showing a flair for battle.

Port Credit— R. Hutchinson, J. Purdie, A. Pope, W. Mitchell, C. Watt, J. Simpson, J. Ridley, J. Forrest, T. Hanks, L. Brick, T. Brooks, L. Brcoks.

In an almost all-Canadian field the women's titles came to Canada Mrs. Rene Bolte of Montreal beat Mrs. A. R. Porter of Montreal, 6-1 6-4., in the singles final, and Mrs Fisher and Mrs. W. R. Walton, Jr., of Toronto won in doubles over Mrs Bolte and Francoise Lacasse of Montreal ,5-7, 6-3, 6-1.

Pitcher Walks 32 In Nine Innings

PONCA CITY, Okla., Aug. 8 (AP). —Pitcher Alex Swails of Muskogee, feared he held a world record today.

Alex walked 32 Ponca City angels in a nine-inning western Association baseball game yesterday. Ponca won 12-7.

Contrbuting to what sport writers believed was another record, pitcher Hugh Kittle of Ponca City walked 11 batters for a total of 43 free trips to first in the game.

Swails distributed his walks so well—he never gave more than five an inning—that he left 22 angels stranded, 21 of them in the first seven innings. He allowed seven hits.

OREGON TRAIL BEING TRANSFORMED INTO MODERN HIGHWAY

Gang Of Ninety Men Hopes To Complete Highway Before Snow Flies In Fall

Big Blasting Jobs Are Now Completed, Low Spots To Be Filled In

With the heaviest of the work now ended, the Oregon Trail between Burleigh Falls and Buckhorn will be completely transformed into a modern highway by the first of November, in the opinion of Walter Snider, superintendent of construction.

Ninety men are working on the twelve-mile stretch of road, blasting out rock, digging cuts, piling up fills, constructing bridges, crushing stone. One shift works through the hours of night, crushing stone two miles from the camp, where the others sleep in a miniature town they have constructed. The entire place is a bee-hive of industry, the men bronzed and lean, with muscles bulging from their backs and arms.

All the big dynamite blasting is now finished and most of the work that remains is to fill in low areas, complete two bridges, and place gravel. At the present time the road presents a ragged, battered appearance. Explosives have thrown rock in all dicetions, streams have been diverted from their channels, huge boulders line the sides. The old Oregon Trail runs parallel for some of the distance, looking for all the world like an old cow path in comparison with its successor.

Peterborough District Men.

Seventy per cent. of all the men working on the construction are from Peterborough and vicinity. "And there are some mighty fine ones, too," said Mr. Snider. "We don't intend to let some of them go when we finish this work." He said the men now employed are of the best type procurable, make no complaints and work hard. One of them had been unemployed for four months but had avoided relief, before he secured work on the road last week. He had only words of praise for the company and the working conditions. "It's tough, sure," he said, "but so is being out of work. They treat you fine here, and the food is better than you can imagine."

Three shovels are at work all day long, lifting unbelievable loads of rock and earth at each scoop. Two of them are 40-ton gas shovels, the other a 30-ton steam shovel. The largest of them can each lift 14 tons of rock at one swoop. Their operators, according to one of the workers, "can not only make the things talk, but have taught them quite a few languages. Truck drivers have no easy time of it, bumping over ground that could not be considered a road by the wildest stretch of the imagination, up to the shovels, back to fill-ins with their loads of rock and earth.

Most efficient truck on the job is a 1920 model. Far larger than any of the other modern vehicles, it is known to carry the largest load, operate more efficiently. Its motor is repaired every second year as an only concession to its age. However, its initial cost was some seven times as great as a modern truck, which is generally traded in every other year.

16 Feet Cut

Deepest cut in the entire road is sixteen feet through solid rock, only a little more than two miles from the Burleigh Falls end. It is to this point that the road is now completed. A little further on is Deer Bay Creek, whose waters have been diverted by an engineering feat. Two bridges are under process of construction, one over Deer Bay Creek, the other over Mississaugua Creek, while work continues in either direction from them.

From the Buckhorn end of the road is working a second crew of men, under sub-contractors Hansen and Martinsen. They are using no modern heavy machinery to dig out rock, but the old-fashioned pick and shovel. A single horse takes the place of a steam shovel, lifts loaded shovels to trucks to be dumped by human hands instead of levers.

"It's pretty slow, isn't it?" a reporter asked Mr. Hansen.

"Well, my boy, they built the C.P.R. that way, and everybody seems to think that was a pretty good job and not so slow, either," came the answer.

The men work ten hours a day, sleep most of the rest of the time. They have a dozen or so bunkhouses, kitchens, storerooms, erected in U-fashion a few miles from Burleigh Falls. There are electric lights in all the buildings and beds appear to be comfortable, quarters to be cool. They eat all their meals at the camp, are charged seventy-five cents a day for them. Their pay runs from thirty-five cents an hour up. All seemed agreed the meals were worth the money.

Find Boy Safe

Scared of Searchers

How the hundreds of searchers missed the boy as they combed a 24-square-mile area puzzled many "outsiders" who made special trips from North Bay, Sudbury and other points to watch the search operations. But Morrison, veteran bushman, knew the reason. He was "bushed."

"When one becomes lost, adult or child, he loses a grip on himself and tears around in circles, climbing trees, running aimlessly and wandering dully with no particular object in mind," Morrison said. "Reason and logic vanish and the lost person becomes something like a trapped animal.

"After a while he runs away from shadows, hides from sounds. That's why the lad moved off when we called him. Our shouts were strange to his ears. He was 'bushed' and didn't realize rescue had come. It is probable that in the past five days scores of searchers had passed nearby the child but the boy, animal like through loneliness, had hidden in fright."

First clue of the boy's presence came Saturday when a small piece of red wool, torn from a sweater he wore, was picked from a branch of a dead tree. More than 24 hours later, near that spot Morrison and Vellette caught a splash of red on a rock. The patch of red began to run and Morrison had to chase the boy more than 100 feet before he caught him.

Parents overcome

Mr. and Mrs. Valmarre Tessier were overcome when their son was returned. Tessier thanked the searchers and said "Let le bon Dieu bless them as he has blessed me." Though crippled with a bad leg, Tessier had spent almost the entire time Fernand was lost in the bush with the search parties.

The boy quickly shook off his "bush confusion" once he was back with his family. To a French-speaking reporter he said he was "scared" when the men moving through the bush called him.

The questioning was difficult as Fernand was too fascinated with his tricycle, brought immediately from Field as soon as it was learned he was safe, to answer questions.

"Tired?" asked the reporter.
"Non."
"Hungry?"
"Non."
"Where have you been sleeping?"
"I slept in the grass in my little bed."
"How did you miss your father?"
"Sais pas." (I don't know.)
"Were you frightened?"
"Oui."
"Did any bears or wolves scare you?"
"Non."

That ended the conversation as Fernand whirled off on his tricycle. Just then Dr. Malo ordered him off to bed.

Each step of the way fought through deep rock, completion of a new highway over the Oregon Trail between Burleigh Falls and Buckhorn is looked for about the first of November. Ninety men sleep in bunkhouses shown in (1), complete with electric lights and comfortable beds. They eat 60 pounds of beef a day, besides other foods. In (2) is the largest rock cut made on the road. It is 16 feet deep, has millions of feet of gravel piled between it and the camera. Three gigantic shovels are working full time scooping tons of earth and rock at each scoop, dumping it on trucks to be carried to fills where men level it off (3). The largest shovels can lift 14 tons at one scoop. The operator of the shovel in (4) lifted this huge bounder, placed it atop a pile of them, shoved it securely into place as though by hand. Chinese Airmen Sink Warships

SHANGHAI, Aug. 8.—(AP)—Chinese announced today their bombing planes attacked and sank three and damaged four of an estimated 90 Japanese warcraft concentrated in the Yangtse River 110 miles to 150 miles down river from Hankow.

Furthermore, the Chinese said, the river had been "definitely halted" by counter-attacks and floods.

Hundreds of Japanese were reported killed on the north bank of the Yangtse. Fighting on land centred about 110 miles from Hankow, the provisional Chinese capital and goal of the Japanese campaign.

Despite the Chinese list of successful attacks, there appeared no major change in positions. Japanese planes bombed Nanchang, the Chinese air base, and reported two direct hits.

HIGH HOPES
can't change the facts of life

All couples start life together with high hopes. Yet high hopes can't change these facts: of every 100 men now 25 years of age, only 5 will be completely self supporting at age 65. Those of the other 95 who are still living will be supported wholly or in part by charity or relatives.

But here is a couple that doesn't just "hope" that all will go well. They have an Imperial Life policy which means that if the young husband lives he will be enabled to save money, if he grows old he will have money to work for him, and if he dies at any time he will leave an income for his dependents.

There is an Imperial Life policy to suit your circumstances—to enable you to offer immediately financial security for your loved ones if you should die and for yourself if you should live to retirement age.

Talk it over with an Imperial Life representative soon. An Imperial Life policy can be made the corner-stone of financial security for you.

Ennismore Man Is Charged Illegal Sale

Earl Turner of Ennismore township was charged in police court this morning with having liquor for sale on his farm. The information was laid by Provincial Constable Silvester who was an unexpected caller Sunday afternoon. Among others, it was said, were three American tourists who arrived just as the officer was leaving with six or seven cases of beer he had confiscated.

Turner seemed to be confused by the legal phrasing of the arraignment and asked for a remand. Magistrate Gee sent him back to the police court cell to consider how he would plead.

He returned to the prisoner's box about noon and at his request was remanded for one week. Magistrate Gee set bail at $1,000.

For fishing without a license last week in Katchawanooka Lake, above Lakefield, B. J. Wilson, of Columbus, O., was fined $10 and $2.50 costs this morning. The arrest was made by I. J. Lyons, Fish and Game Inspector.

Bathroom Vents May Be Abolished

Local vents from bathrooms of private dwellings will no longer be compulsory if the city council approves the recommendation of A. G. Metheral, plumbing inspector, as outlined at a meeting of the property committee Friday night. No action was taken then, Alderman Stocker urging that further consideration be suspended until Mr. Metheral returns from the convention of sanitary engineers, which he will attend this month in Cleveland.

Alderman Juby, chairman of the fire, water and light committee, had brought up the question of ventilation of bath rooms, especially the practice of making outlets into chimneys, and the council directed the property committee to discuss a general revision of the plumbing bylaw. Vents into chimneys, it was said, have been known to accumulate soot and to become a fire hazard especially if a blaze occurs in the chimney. The vent pipes are usually of light material and are laid close to or on wood between joists.

Mr. Metheral said that Toronto requires a local vent in every house, but he had come to the conclusion that it was not necessary, and suggested that window ventilation would be sufficient for regulation purposes. His proposal was that vents should be required from closets only in public buildings.

The question of vents was raised in connection with the work being done by Gordon Dobbin for C. Huffman in a house on Monaghan road. A down draft from a bath room with outlet into a chimney in the basement was proposed, but at that stage of the discussion it was learned that the builder would probably project the vent through the roof. And that was a matter which did not come within the interests of the committee as it was simply following a practice recognized by the regulations.

Not Worry In World

Lucky are the residents of Kawartha Lakes district towns and villages, and summer visitors there, in the hot weather of the past week, when city folk are hanging listlessly over desks in sweltering offices. From LEFT to RIGHT they are: Shirley Fisher of Toronto, Helen Windover of Buckhorn, Leona Shearer of Buckhorn, and at the back is Mary Martinsen of Kipling, Ontario.

Two garbage containers were smashed, the contents spilled on the road and two pieces of sod torn from the boulevard on the opposite side of the street by a Campbellford bus driver on Saturday afternoon according to residents of Carlisle avenue who witnessed the incident. At Sidey's on Chemong a record crowd was on hand while at the Low Bridge over the canal on Parkhill Road, there were so many cars parked, many people thought there had been a drowning. All along the canal and river to Lakefield the bathers were on hand. At Inverlea the usual swarm of adults and children crowded the shoreline and the lifeguard had a busy time.

To add to his troubles the rope holding the floats and acting as a deep water boundary parted and he spent more than an hour trying to repair it while mischievous children tugged on the other end of the long rope.

Quart Of Gas Put In Dog's Bath Animal Becomes Frantic

A quart of gasoline poured into a dog's bath to rid the canine of fleas, sent the animal on a mad race down Aylmer street Saturday afternoon and several people phoned the police station saying a mad dog was loose after they had viewed the speeder with froth lathered jaws. The frantic animal which was a white wire haired terrior sought comfort in a bed of coal dust near the C.P.R. station and when he was found by the dog catcher he was black as night.

The dog had just returned home from a visit to the farm and its owner discovered his pet was loaded with "visitors." He filled a tub half full of water and poured in a quart of gas, then set the pup down in the bath. The gas floated on top of the water and after being immersed for a few seconds the pup with a howl of pain, leaped from the tub, careened through the door and started his mile a minute race down Aylmer street determined to shake the demon which was burning the hide off him.

Many south end residents noticed the distressed animal stand on his nose then do a series of cart wheels before disappearing into the coal yard at the corner of Wolfe and Aylmer streets. The phone calls brought two policemen and the dog catcher suitably armed to cope with a mad dog, but the pup had vanished.

Later the white terrier now considerably darkened by his capers in the coal dust was found by the dog catcher, resting near a parked car. Evidently the gasoline had routed the fleas but the dog catcher believes it removed a little of dog's hair with them.

Driver Is Facing Charge Of Reckless Driving

Her right arm still in bandages and supported in a sling, the hand and wrist swollen and discolored, Mrs. Edith Stewart of North Monaghan was a witness in police court this morning in the Crown's case against James J. Brady, charged with reckless driving and having defective brakes on his car in the accident May 22 last, on the Peterborough-Port Hope highway, near the "fox farm" corner in which Mrs. Stewart was seriously injured. Magistrate Gee presided.

Examined by F. D. Kerr, K.C., acting Crown Attorney, Mrs. Stewart said her home was near the crest of the water trough hill and on the north side of the road. The accident happened about 7.15 p.m. on the Sunday prior to Victoria Day as she was walking westerly to call at a neighbor's house.

"I was walking west on the left hand side of the highway, on the shoulder," Mrs. Stewart said. "I first saw this car come over the hill to the west, maybe six or seven hundred yards away. When it got 35 or 40 yards from me, the car started to zig-zag, about to the middle of the road and back. I stood still wondering what I would do, but before I could decide anything I found myself in the ditch. I was thrown into the ditch by the car."

Mrs. Stewart said she suffered a badly smashed right wrist, "the doctor said it was almost pulp, a broken bone in one leg and various bruises on her body. She said she didn't know who was driving the car.

Eye Witness Of Accident

Robert Calder, Toronto, a driver for the Robert Simpson Company, testified that he was an eye witness of the accident. "As I drove over the long hill going west I saw a woman ahead of us on the south side of the road. There was a car coming from the west. All of a sudden it got out of control, zig-zagged across the road and back, hit a post and broke it off, and then struck the woman. Mrs. Stewart. My car was just opposite her when I saw her hit and hurled into the air.

I asked Mr. Brady what had happened. He said he didn't know. He said some one had cut in. I didn't see any car ahead of me except Mr. Brady's. I didn't see any other car going west at that time. I don't remember one passing me."

T. J. Carley, K.C., was counsel for Mr. Brady.

Traffic Officer Broughton said it was about 8.15 p.m. when he arrived at the scene of the accident. Mrs. Stewart was lying at one side of the highway and there was a car in the south ditch.

"I inquired who was the driver of the car; Mr. Brady came forward and said he was."

Mr. Kerr—"Did he explain what had happened?"

"He said another car passed the woman and it confused him. He applied the brakes, and the woman also seemed confused. He said she stepped on and off the road."

"Was there any question as to his sobriety?" "He was perfectly sober and normal."

Mr. Carley—"After the accident you laid a charge of operating a car with defective brakes?" "Yes."

"Subsequently and under pressure by a lawyer you laid a charge of reckless driving?" "I want to correct that. The car was placed in the Duffus Garage and I asked the foreman to try it out. I did so myself and found several things could have been corrected before the accident."

Constable Broughton said he had worked four years at Bosworth's service station in Paris, Ontario.

Mr. Carley—"You examined the brakes and found that they stopped the car in less than the required distance?"

Officer Broughton confirmed that statement.

"Then when you found that charge wouldn't hold, you laid the reckless driving charge?" "No sir."

Witness said the law required brakes to "stop and hold," but the Brady brakes did not hold after tension first stopped the car.

Mr. Carley—"But that has nothing to do with reckless driving?"

The case was adjourned for the noon luncheon.

4 U.A.W. Officers Ousted In Cleanup

DETROIT, Aug. 8—(AP)—Expulsion of four high officers of the United Automobile Workers of America and suspension of a fifth failed to restore harmony today in the strife-torn committee for Industrial Organization union.

The four formers officers said in a statement they would seek a special convention of the U. A. W. and appeal to the rank and file to clean out the real enemies of the Union."

The union's executive board expelled Vice-Presidents Richard Frankensteen, Ed Hall and Wyndham Mortimer Saturday night. A month ago it expelled George Addes as secretary-treasurer and he was replaced by Delmond Garst, board member from St. Louis.

Walter N. Wells, another International Vice-President, was suspended from June 13 to Sept. 13. Homer Martin, U. A. W. President, suspended the five on June 13, charging they were seeking to wreck the Union and conspiring to turn it over to Communists.

Wells, however, was not convicted on the communism charge—one of nine against the men — thereby drawing a lighter penalty.

Swimmer Cuts Tendons In Foot

Betty Primeau, 16-year-old daughter of Arthur Primeau, Cricket Place, received a deep cut on the instep of her right foot in a freak accident at the High Bridge Saturday afternoon.

The girl had been swimming with a crowd on the east side south of the bridge and jumped into the water. As she kicked her feet to force her way to the surface, her foot struck some sharp object on the bottom which inflicted the cut. The girl swam as far as the wall but was unable to climb up and three boys, Jack Brady, Jack Heffernan and Fred White noticing that she was in distress assited her ashore. White applied a tourniquet to stop the bleeding and carried her to their car. She was then taken to the Clinic where several stitches were required to close the wound. A couple of small tendons had been severed it was learned today.

The girl's father commenting on the accident today expressed his gratitude to the boys who acted so promptly in bringing the girl out of the water and hurrying with her to a doctor. He is certain the accident would have more serious consequences had the three not been swimming at the time.

This is the third accident which has occurred in the vicinity of the High Bridge and all three point more or less to the fact that motorists drive under the trees near the bridge for a social drink, then hurl beer bottles either into the water or along the rocky shore.

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 8.—Col. McAuley addressed members of the Legion congratulating them on the fine spirit which moved them to this annual decoration of the graves of their comrades.

On their arrival at the Cenotaph, Clarence Massie called on Rev. Harold B. Neal of St. John's United church who led in prayer.

Major J. B. Belford who introduced the speaker told members of the Legion that this organization represented a very definite step towards the ends the legion wanted. The cenotaph and the place it holds in the minds of all members of the Legion forms a great object lesson to all young people of today stated Major Belford. Captain E. Smith of Trenton who directed the band also assisted in the service.

Police said they were told Mrs. Murphy ran in front of the car to assist one of the children.

Vader was hurled through the windshield and suffered fractured skull and broken neck.

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

IF THE WEATHER acts sensible this e'en there will be another nifty senior lacrosse game here at nine tinkles of the timepiece. Brampton are billed to take issue with the Petes, and in their last local clash the Bramptonites took more than issue—they copped the win! But it was thrown out as they used an ineligible player. Tonight's tilt ought to be hotter than a gallop for the bus when 'tis 93½ in the shade, and no holds barred. Maybe not as many fist fights as the brawl here last Friday, but a real tight tussle throughout and plenty of action for the gutted-stick followers. The fray promises to be close and should draw quite a crowd.

* * * * * *

A RATHER SMALL CROWD in Oshawa, for a playoff game, saw the GM-men do a 10-5 trick to the Petes to win the four-in-seven ball series opener on Saturday. Yep, they done our boys wrong. Next joust is here this coming Saturday, and the Petes can't afford to lose it. In fact, they gotta take four of the next six games or call it a season. The 1937 champs are still potent with the bat and tough to take when the chips are down. We like the Petes over 'em this semester, but not if the boys don't get better pitching and more timely pingling than they showed day before yesterday.

* * * * * *

They Massaged The Apple

THE PETES got plenty of hits, 13 against 15, and 13 off Jake Biddle in one game is enough ordinarily to win from here to heck and gone. But they didn't bunch 'em after their three-run splash in the initial inning. Hadn't the punch in the right spots. Whereas Oshawa did in three big heats. Our relief hurling was okay, barring one inning, and probably Russ Kitchen would have won the game had he started—the way the Petes were hitting the apple against Biddle. But Lefty McNally started and was hammered out in the third. Went bad in the second and out in the next. McNally didn't have a thing Saturday but a lefthanded prayer—and it was answered by ringing basehits! He can fling lots better but shouldn't take those GM-men lightly when it's playoff time. He had good hitting and fielding support, too.

* * * * * *

AH, WELL, maybe the Petes will even it up this week-end and smear 'em in their home corral next visit. We hope. Calladine conked the pill for three in three times, two of 'em doubles, besides walking twice. And Burton got three hits in four. As Starr hit a double and single, and Murphy and Doll two singles each. The latter and Burton featured with running catches. This is the bright side of it, but the score is the blacker picture. We don't like it. We even dislike it a lot. In fact, we hate it! So there.

Closer Than Hot Weather

OVER AT THE BOWL on Saturday aft, Westclox gals got a win over C.G.E. but it was closer than Thursday to Friday, or even a mosquito's eyebrows. Yep, a 5-4 win after being outhit all the way. C.G.E. got 10 hits and Westclox four. Two were off Marilyn McCarthy in eight frames. Marilyn walked two to open the ninth and was replaced by A. Clarke. Westclox promptly got a single and homer, the four-bagger by M. Hawthorne, to cop the verdict. A tidy tilt. It was the first of the three-game sectional playoffs, winner of this serial to tackle Keene in league finals. Next fray is listed for Tuesday in the gloaming at seven in ye East City saucer.

* * * * * *

THERE was a men's softball game at the Bowl, too, Saturday in the eve. Motorists had to hustle plenty but they grabbed off an 8-7 win over Westclox in 10 heats. And heated heats they were, also. With arguments galore between these old rivals, and the umpirs getting a verbal scorching for decisions that would blast the ears off a brass monkey. Or at least singe the metal ape's listeners. Both sides hit hard and fielded fair, the twirling being just average, though Strickland looked neat in a relief role The win puts Motorists half a game up on Omemee and half a game back of Westclox. Tonight at the Bowl, Omemee and Westclox wind up the men's schedule.

Howson of Crowe's, and Ruth Dalliday, Shirley Zacks and Iris Forbes of this city. Probably several more, too. Various events up to a mile, and these swims come after the heavy regatta program in the afternoon.

WE FEEL like going off and having a quiet sob by ourself in a hollow tree or down under the cellar steps. On account of our favorite manager in the Big Leagues is fired—Mickey Cochrane of Detroit. Del Baker has been apointed his successor and, as Joe Cronin succintly puts it, Del "is a good third-base coach." Lefty Grove blasts Briggs all over the expanse of his big car factories for tossing out a fighting pilot who led his team to two pennants, one world's series, and finished second twice, in four years. Black Mike made mistakes but he was and is popular, and more will be heard of this, don't worry. We have seen Mickey dozens of times in action and we don't ever expect to see a better catcher or a scrappier player.

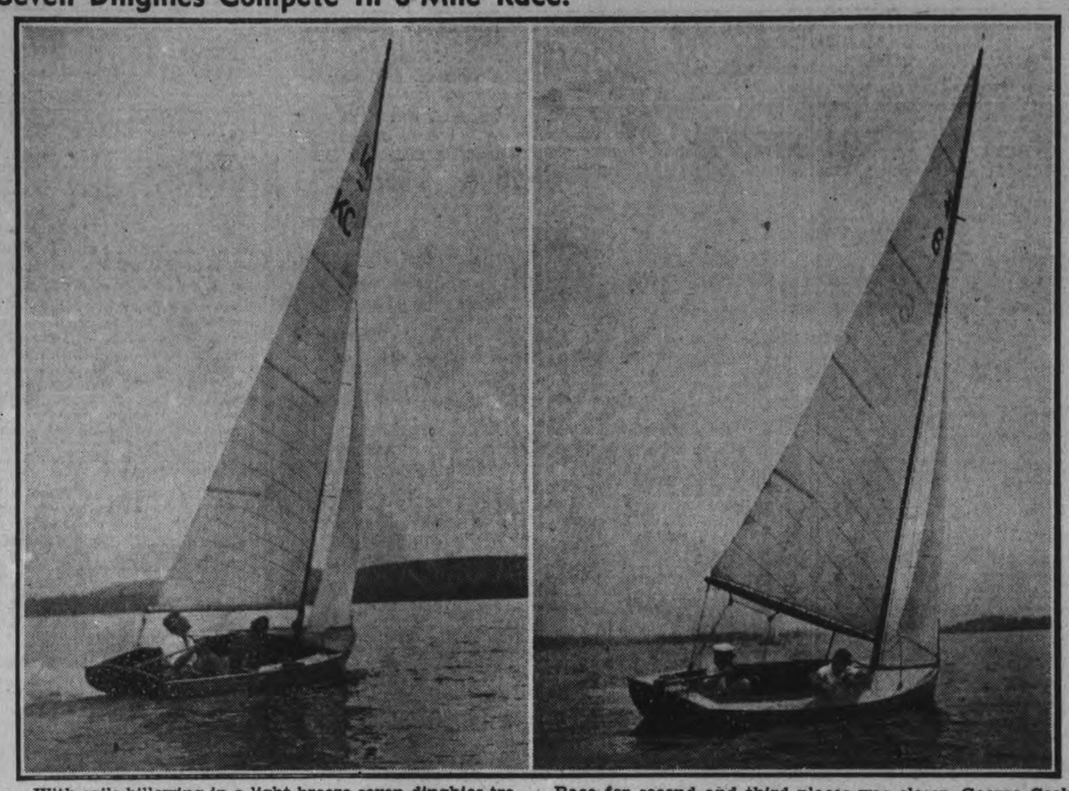
Seven Dinghies Compete In 6-Mile Race.



With sails billowing in a light breeze seven dinghies traversed a 6-mile course around Lake Chemong in leisurely fashion on Saturday afternoon, in the annual tournament. Winner by one minute and thirty-eight seconds after a two-hour sail, was a smart craft manned by Craig Somerville and Gordon "Spike" Matthews, racing from Chemong. Race for second and third places was closer, George Cook and A. Stuart of Lakefield, LEFT, nosing out the Hopkins brothers from Sturgeon Point, RIGHT, by half a boat length. The race was uneventful, lightness of the breeze throughout the entire event prolonging it longer than is usual. Somerville and Matthews took the lead at the start, held and increased it throughout. Smelters Lose Soccer Battle By One Goal To Electrics

Deloro Plays Short Of Regular Strength

(Examiner Correspondence.)

MARMORA, Aug. 8.—Deloro received C.G.E. in a Peterborough and District Football League fixture on Saturday afternoon and with a weakened team of only ten players lost by the score of 4-3.

The homesters kicked off and at the start exchanges were even. Keith got clear on the right wing but his parting effort lacked direction. Deloro then took up the attack and Bolton was tested. Elliott carried the ball up field before passing to Brooks. The latter transfered to Brown, whose drive hit Bolton's foot as it registered Deloro's first goal. On one of Deloro's infrequent raids Brown centered with Brooks and Hart making vain efforts to reach the sphere. Ultimately it travelled to Bradley, whose left foot drive found the right hand corner of the net. O'Neill came in for a stiff bombardment but the opposing forwards failed to find the net, McMaster being repeatedly robbed of the ball when in a favorable position.

Elliott was again to the fore, demonstrating improvement. His unorthodox play gained for him valuable space with the result that he passed to Brooks who placed a beautiful shot well out of the reach of Bolton. McMaster was now being fed adroit passes from his inside men and from one of his well directed shots a melee ensued in front of goal. The ball returning to this player ten yards out of goal, O'Neill saved at the expense of a bruised thumb. A few minutes later McKenzie put a ground pass between the backs and McMaster went through to register. Half time came with the score, C.G.E. 1, Deloro 3.

Regain Lost Ground.

Resuming play C.G.E. were out to wipe out the two goal deficit but met an equally determined defence. The pace got fast and heavy and eventually McMaster scored. Harris on the left wing was sending over fine passes, but a Deloro player would be there to relieve the situation for his team. Deloro seldom were over their halfway line. The pressure of the visitors was bound to yield results. A lob into goal from Earle was taken advantage of by McMaster who hocked the ball over his head into the top right hand corner of the net, putting the teams on a neven basis. Ten minutes later, Brown missed a golden opportunity on a pass from Brooks with only Bolton to beat. Bolton cleared the latter's bullet-like drive with Mitchell's assistance.

End to end play characterized with individual forays prevailed for a while. Keith initiated an attack on the right and J. Hart in attempting to clear, slued the ball on to his arm. A penalty kick taken by A. Mitchell saw the ball soar over the cross bar. C.G.E. were now relentless in their attack. McPhate sent in a shot and hesitation to cover the ball enabled Keith to get his head there first to head the ball practically out of O'Neill's hand. The final whistle blew shortly afterwards with the score reading C.G.E. 4, Deoro 3.

Teams—

C.G.E.— Goa, Bolton; backs, J. Mitchell, Murduff; half-backs, McKenzie, Earle, McPhate; forwards, Keith, Goodhue, McMaster, A. Mitchell, Harris.

Whitakers Club Avenges Defeat With Toc Club

The return match between Whitakers and Toc H. of Toronto was played on the University of Toronto lawn on Saturday and the local team avenged the defeat they had sustained on July 16. A low-scoring game resulted in a win for them by 51 to 43. Toc H. had won the first game by 91 to 47.

Whitakers batted first and lost 4 wickets for 14, but Smith and Haig took it to 34 for 6. The latter took out his bat for an invaluable 13 and the total reached 51. On Toc H. going to bat their earlier batsmen did well, taking the score to 32 for 3. After that, good bowling by the captain, J. Wild and G. Colbran, who had relieved Hamilton, proved fatal to the side and 6 wickets fell for the addition of 7 runs. The last two men took the score to within 5 of a victory but in the excitement the last man was run out with the total at 47, leaving Whitaker's the winners by 4 runs. Wild celebrated his return to the side after a long absence, by taking 3 wickets for 16 runs finishing up by bowling 8 overs for 5 runs and 2 wickets. Colbran had a fine spell the other end taking 6 for 24, the other two men being run out. Next Saturday, August 13, Peterborough play the Toronto C.C. at the Oval and Whitakers go to Oshawa.

Pirates Boost League Margin By Double Win

NEW YORK, Aug. 8 (AP).—One reason why the old argument as to what happens when an irresistable force meets an immovable object never has been settled is that one or the other always fails to live up to advance notices.

That's the case in the recent "crucial" tilts in which New York Yankees and Pittsburgh Pirates, currently the fastest-moving forces in Major league baseball, met up with the clubs that were suppose dto be the strongest barriers ahead of thm—Cleveland and the Giants. Yankees, by routing the tribe 7-0 yesterday made a clean sweep of the series and stretched their lead to 5½ games. The Pirates, after loeing the opener, scored a decisive double victory yesterday over the Giants 5-1 and 13-3 to gain a 6½ game margin.

There were other interesting weekend developments, notably the sudden dismissal of Mickey Cochrane as Detroit manager and the elevation of coach Del Baker to his post Saturday night and Buck Newsom's unsuccessful "iron man" pitching effort for St. Louis Browns, but they aren't likely to have much effect upon the pennant races.

Giants' Hitting Weak

More to the point were the collapse of the Giants and the way the Yanks won. The Giants made only 10 hits all told, including two homers by Mel Ott. And the usually reliable Carl Hubbell was belted out in the seventh inning of the nightcap for his second decisive defeat within a week. Red Ruffing hed the Indians to two hits while Lou Gehrig, whose hitting hasn't been of the best, virtually settled the game when he hit his 18th homer with Joe Dimaggio aboard in the fourth.

The Tigers, with Baker at the helm, walloped Boston Red Sox 7-3 as Hank Greenberg socked his 38th home run with two aboard in the first inning.

Cincinnati Reds, with a chance to oust the Giants for second place by winning a doubleheader from Brooklyn, lost two tough ones instead 11-10 and 6-3, and finished tied for third with Chicago Cubs, who first trimmed Boston Bees 7-4 then yielded 5-0 to Jim Turner's five-hit flinging.

The Reds had a five-run lead in the first inning of the opener, but Johnny Vander Meer gave out five walks in the same inning and the Dodgers eventually won with three in the ninth. In the excitement Babe Ruth objected so strenuously to a decision that he was "bounced" for the first time since he became a brooklyn coach and later Manager Burleigh Grimes followed him.

Newsom Fails

Newsom couldn't even draw a crowd, only 5,610 turning out for his double effort. He beat the Athletics in the opener, 5-3, giving up eight hits, fanning nine and receiving the support of two homers by Harland Clift. The A's knocked him out early in the nightcap, however, and went on to win 8-5.

Washington and the White Sox split a pair of slugfests, Chicago taking the first 14-5 and the Senators the second, 12-5. Claude Passeau pitched the Phillies to a six-hit 6-3 win over the St. Louis Cardinals, but the gashousers took the rain-shortened nightcap 5-1.

The Yankees defeated Cleveland 7-3 Saturday while Boston walloped Detroit 14-8. Washington won 7-1 from Chicago and Philadelphia defeated St. Louis Browns 8-4.

In Saturday's National league games Cincinnati defeated Brooklyn 11-6 and Boston shutout the Cubs 1-0. St. Louis Cards won 7-6 from Philadelphia.

Del Baker Takes Over Position With the Briggs Organization

Cochrane Will Try For Ball Comeback

DETROIT, Aug. 8.—(AP).—Gordon Stanley (Mickey) Cochrane, who managed the Detroit Tigers to American League pennants in 1934 and 1935, was removed Saturday night as the leader of the club, a victim of what Owner Walter O. Briggs termed "Baseball."

Announcement of the dismissal was made by Briggs, who said he and Cochrane had reached the parting of the ways at a conference following Detroit's 14-to-8 loss at the hands of Boston Red Sox Saturday.

Delmar Baker, a native of Sherwood, Ore., and a member of the Tiger organization since 1914, when he joined the club as a catcher, was named the new manager by Owner Briggs. He was given a contract for the remainder of this season and one for next year.

Owner Briggs and Cochrane, reputed to have been the highest-paid manager in baseball, with an annual salary of $45,000, would be given his pay for the rest of the season.

"There is nothing that I can say at this time except that I am out," Cochrane said after Briggs had announced the change in management.

Cochrane indicated that he would take a vacation for about a month before seeking a new connection and taking another crack at baseball.

"I haven't had time to think of anything," Cochrane said. "I was notified after the game that I was through. I want to get my bearings before I say anything."

Later Mickey said he would leave Tuesday with his family for a month's vacation on a ranch near Cody, Wyoming.

"After that I'm going back to take another crack at big league baseball," he said.

A statement issued by Briggs said he and Cochrane conferred, and "it was agreed he would no longer continue his connection with the Detroit Baseball Company."

"I regret sincerely," the statement said, "the termination of our baseball relationship, both from a personal standpoint and because of the contribution which Mickey Cochrane made to Detroit and the club when he came here as manager and catcher five years ago."

Lawn Bowling

By HERB MARTIN

There will be no twilight tournament for men on Wednesday, August 10th, the committee decided, for the time being to withdraw that contest, but instead there will be a big local mixed draw from the boon at 7.30 p.m. Good prizes, and all for 25 cents.

On Friday of this week, August 12, our ladies' section intend holding an open tournament. Circulars have been sent out and a large crowd is expected. It will be for "Irish Trebles" and the games start at 2.30 D.S.T. 75 cents per player is the fee and good prizes will be provided. Last year this tournament drew 21 entries, and in view of the fact that our ladies have been supporting outside tournaments to the limit we see no reason why a record entry should not attend the contest.

The remaining days of the week will be as scheduled in the schedule book.

We are now ready to receive entries for men's Globe and Mail Scotch doubles. Entries in writing with 25 cents fee to the games secretary. These entries will close on Monday, August 15th.

$85,000 Arena For Brantford

BRANTFORD, Aug. 8.—Proposal for the erection of a sports arena, community hall and agricultural building as one structure at an estimated cost of $85,000 has been presented to the Finance Committee of the City Council here. The proposal was embodied in a brief address to the Mayor and Council, presented by Parks Board Chairman A. T. Whitaker and Vice-Chairman James Douglas.

As evidence of the financial feasibility of such an undertaking it was pointed out that a similar arena at Galt last year showed a total revenue of $11,379.61, and an actual operating profit of more than $5,000.

OSHAWA GM-MEN POUND OUT McNALLY AND BEAT PETES 10-5

Win First Tilt In Playoffs In Motor City

Oshawa GM-men pounded out Lefty McNally in the third inning and went on to win a 10-5 decision over the Petes Saturday in the first of the four-in-seven C.O.B.L. playoff series in the Motor City. Hardly 500 fans were on hand to see the 1937 champions cop the first of the money series in a struggle that turned into a slugfest.

Both clubs were smacking the ball hard all afternoon, the winners having only 15 hits to the losers' 13, four on each side being struck out during the whole fray. The Petes stepped out and copped a three-run lead in the first inning, but saw it dissipated in the second as Oshawa got four. The visitors kept hitting the apple the rest of the route but were bingling in timely style, while Oshawa bunched hits again in the third and ninth to pile up the count.

Lefty McNally started for Eddie Murphy's gang but didn't have a thing. He got by the first inning on support but was banged hard for four runs in the second. He was knocked from the box in the third and Russ Kitchen took over. The big fellow hurled fine relief ball against the hard-hitting GM-men till the eighth when they got to him for three more runs. Kitchen gave eight hits and one walk while fanning four in 5 and two-third frames. McNally had given seven hits and two walks with no strikeouts. Jack Biddle was only fair, being nicked for 13 hits and four walks as he fanned four, but good support at bat and afield gave him the game. The fielding on both sides was good.

Has Perfect Day

Bill Calladine had a perfect day at bat with three for three, two of them doubles, as he walked twice. Les Burton also got three safe blows while Doll, Murphy and Starr had two each, one of the latter's being a two-bagger. Red Jubenville led the winners with three in five, Hurst, Foley, Miller, Bennett and Biddle getting two apiece. Dalton, Foley and Biddle had doubles. All got at least one hit but Wallace. Fielding features were turned in by Hurst with a catch in deep left, and Burton and Doll with fine grabs on the run.

Kearns singled to start the game, stealing second, moving up on Murphy's double and scoring ahead of Murphy on Doll's single. The latter tallied on a long double by Calladine. Aside from Foley's walk, the GM-men went out in order on two rollers and a foul fly. Starr singled in the second and Kearns was safe on a fielder's choice after an error by Biddle but they died on base. The lid blew off in Oshawa's second and they got four runs. Wallace filed out. Jubenville singled and took third on Miller's hit. Bennett bunted and was safe when Jubenville beat the throw home, Miller moving up. The latter was nicked trying to steal 3rd, but Biddles single sent Bennett to third. Jake going ahead on the throw. Both scored on a double by Dalton to left, the latter later scoring on Hurst's hit. Foley walked but Rowden rolled out.

Change Hurlers

Calladine got a free ticket and Burton singled in the third for the Petes but they expired on the sacks. With one out for Oshawa, Jubenville singled and took third on Miller's hit, the latter taking second on the throw. McNally walked out and Kitchen took over. He got Bennett out but Biddle's double scored two, making six runs counting against McNally. Dalton fanned.

Outside of Foley's single, neither side did a thing in the fourth. With one out for the Petes in the fifth, Doll singled but was caught stealing, and a walk to Calladine and single by Burton did no damage. Oshawa got a run when Miller was hit by a pitched ball, taking third on a hit by Bennett and home on an out. The Petes went out in order in the sixth and Foley's double was wasted for Oshawa.

Starr scored for Peterborough in the seventh when his single got through Foley's legs, letting Eddie reach third from where he tallied on an out. Hits by Calladine and Burton later did no good for the locals. Bennett's hit in Oshawa's half was wasted. The Petes went down one-two-three in the eighth but the homesters notched three more in their half. Dalton opened with a walk and got to third on Hurst's hit, the latter stealing second. On the play, Dalton was trapped off third but scored when he bumped the ball out of Starr's hand, hurting the local catcher. Hurst got to third and scored on a fly to centre. Rowden singled and went to second on a fielder's choice, on a vain attempt of a double play on Wallace's roller. Rowden scored on a single by Jubenville.

With one out in the ninth, the Petes kept trying as Biddle tired. Murphy singled and got to third on a double by Calladine, after Doll had filed to second. Burton walked to load the sacks and Whatley drew a walk to force in a run, but Cadd popped out to end the fixture.

Famed Horseman May Never Ride Again

Winner of the Lou E. Marsh memorial trophy for the outstanding sports achievement in Canada last year, Lieut. Marshall Cleland, ABOVE, internationally famous equestrian of Troy, Ont., may never be able to ride again unless a recently disclosed injury heals. After suffering a sore back a few times Cleland had an X-ray taken which revealed a split vertebra, for which he is now undergoing treatment, the result of which will not be known for some months.

Burns Injured As Leafs Win Saturday Tilt

BALTIMORE, Md., Aug. 8.—Toronto withstood a last-minute rally by the Orioles and scored an 8 to 6 victory for their third straight triumph in the current series. The victory almost proved to be a costly one when Irving Burns, manager and first sacker of the Leafs, received a blow on the jaw when Greenberg accidentally hit him with his elbow while crossing first base on a close play in the sixth inning.

Burns was knocked cold and carried off the field. He was removed to the West Baltimore General Hospital for an examination. He was later declared to be all right, but spent the night at the hospital.

Earl Caldwell, scoring his sixth win of the campaign, held the Birds at bay until the ninth, when four hits and a base on balls gave the Flock four runs. Woodrow Davis was then rushed into the fray and retired the last batter.

The Leafs made ten hits, all singles, off Frank Sancosi, young Oriole left-hander who went the route, and were helped along by six enemy errors.

Roy Spencer, Birds catcher, was hit on the head by one of Caldwell's pitches in the second inning and had to be removed from the game. With Manager Bucky Crouse also on the side lines with a broken finger, Early Bolyard had to be called in from centre field to catch and Blondy Ryan, an infielder, went to the garden.

Petoskey, Porter and Reiber, led the Leaf attack with two hits apiece, but Gantenbein and Caldwell drove home two tallies each with one single. Tauby and Taylor hit homers for Baltimore.

Motorists Win Over Westclox

Motorists yanked out an 8-7 win in the 10th inning of a thrilling men's softball game Saturday night at the Bowl before a good crowd of fans. The win pulls the Barrett boys up to within half a game of the loop-leading Clockmen and half a game ahead of Omemee. There were plenty of arguments with the umpires, and a hot dispute in the 10th frame on a close play at first base. Bateman twirled for the losers, allowing 12 hits and three walks with no strikeouts. Wilson started for Motorists but went out in the fifth, his sojourn yielding 11 hits and three walks as he fanned two. Strickland finished with three hits and two walks while fanning three. The fielding was only fair on both sides.

Strickland led the winners at bat with three hits, as Starr had a double and single, and Dorrington, Conroy and Weir two singles each. For Westclox, Currie got a triple, double and single, with Ellis hitting a triple and single, Bateman a two-bagger and single, Foster and Gainey two hits apiece, and Carlson a double. Neat defensive plays were supplied by Conroy, Playford, Watson, Currie and O'Leary. Foster pulled off a fine grab in the second and Dormer stopped a rally in the ninth with an unassisted double play. The teams:

Maxie Hoists One—For Junior

Maxie Baer, boxing's prince of buffoonery, takes time out from his training...yes, they say he really keeps in shape...to serve Max, Jr., as lunch time rolls around. Max may only be keeping in shape to meet Joe Louis in the fall, which isn't much to look forward to, but anyway, that's milk in the bottle, which proves that Jr. is training properly.

Lacrosse Tussle On Here Tonight

An O.L.A. senior "B" fixture be staged tonight (Monday) at nine o'clock under the lights in the George St. arena. It will be between Brampton and the Petes, weather permitting, and should attract another big crowd of fans. In their last appearance here the Bramptonites easily defeated the classy Petes, but the game was thrown out when another squad protested Brampton's use of Bill Anthony, a signed senior "A" player. Anthony was dropped, and the Petes feel they can knock off Brampton now, though they may run into another surprise. The B's are still plenty tough and will hustle the homesters here tonight every minute.

Following last Friday's wildly exciting fray, followers of the gutted-stick sport are stronger than ever for the game and for the scrappy Petes who are now in a virtual first-place tie in a powerful grouping. All the locals expect to be on deck this evening for another hot battle, and it is bound to attract a huge gang of local and district rooters. The game may be preceded by another midget lacross melee, as on other nights of senior "B" contests.

Westclox Girls Beat C.G.E. 5-4

Westclox girls nosed out a 5-4 victory over C.G.E. at the Bowl Saturday afternoon in the first of their three-game sectional playoffs before a neat crowd. The winners were held to two hits by M. McCarthy but she walked seven, while fanning four, and the hits and walks were bunched. A. Clarke relieved in the ninth but was nicked for a homer and single. M. Snowden of Westclox was nicked for 10 hits, scattered but for four the in 1st, and four walks while she struck out three. The fielding on both sides was fair with nice catches made by M. Batley, P. Bigelow and A. DeCarlo of the Electrics; and A. Sturgeon, M. Hawthorne and D. Merrett of the winners. Next game will be Tuesday at the Bowl.

M. Hawthorne hit the homer with one on to win the game in the ninth after M. McCarthy had walked two and was replaced by A. Clarke. G. Mortimer, M. Ferguson and M. Allison had a single each. For C.G.E., A. Clarke, M. McCarthy, P. Bigelow and J. McCrank hit safely twice each, while G. Mann and E. Craig hit doubles. The teams:

IN MEMORIAM

BROCK.—In loving memory of my dear husband, Roland Brock, who passed away August 8, 1936.

The face I loved is now laid low,
His loving voice is still;
The hand so often clasped in mine

I often sit and think of him
When I am all alone;
For memory is the only thing
That grief can call its own.

—Ever remembered by his Wife and Family.

HARTSHORN. — In ever loving memory of a dear son and brother, Norman Hartshorn, who was killed at the Battle of Amiens, August 8, 1918, while attending a wounded soldier.

And who, though absent, is just as dear.

—Lovingly remembered by Dad, Mother, Sisters and Brother.

4,000 Loyalists Die In Retreat

HENDAYNE, France, Aug. 8 — (AP)—The Spanish Insurgents reported today the Government's entire northern flank of the Catalan front had been wiped out in one of the most powerful single assaults of the war.

Dispatches from Zaragoza said 4,000 Government militiamen had been killed and an equal number captured. Four thousand others would be unable to fight their way out of a trap, the dispatches said.

The counter-offensive was reported to have cleared the west bank of Ebro River of Government troops from Mequmenza to Fayon, 10 miles to the south.

A Government communique admitted only the loss of Los Auts Heights north of Fayon, declaring all other attacks on the northern flank had been repulsed.

Insurgent dispatches said small streams, mountain paths and trenches were choked with Government dead, while many hundreds of bodies floted down the Ebro. Many militiamen were machine-gunned by low-swooping Insurgent planes as they attempted to swim the broad river.

Descriptions of the battle said an Insurgent column from the north cut in along the west bank of the river while the area was being blasted by artillery and planes. Tanks then cleaned up the newly occupied territory.

Two Insurgent seaplanes bombed and set afire the British Steamer Lake Lugano at Palamos, 50 miles northeast also machine-gunned the The planes also mahine-gunned the burning vessel, but none of the crew of 27 was injured.

SCOTT'S SCRAP BOOK —By R. J. Scott

OUR BOARDING HOUSE —with Major Hoople

DOROTHY DIX

Customers Are Not Looking For Dolls When They Go Into Store—They Want Service, And Survey Shows The Woman In Middle Age Is The Best Saleswoman.

RISE up, you middle-aged women! Smite upon the cymbals and raise your voices in song of thanksgiving, for here are tidings of great joy for you. No longer need you beat upon your breasts and wail and lament that there is no place for you in the business world; that you can't compete with young girls and that employers will hire none but platinum-blonde flappers with stringbean figures.

A nation-wide survey has just been made of department stores, and it has been found that women do their best work after 50. The statistics showed that when it came to efficiency, pleasing customers and selling goods, ladies with grizzled hair and the middle-age spread left Miss America at the post. This happened even in the shops where the managers preferred youth and good looks in its personnel and tried to push the youngsters ahead.

More than that, the investigators discovered that, instead of age relegating a saleswoman to the shelf with the other outmoded goods, it brought her to the front and made her the one whom customers asked for, and that saleswomen in their fifties sold more than those in their forties, the forties sold more than the thirties and the thirties more than the twenties.

Probably the first reaction of every one who reads this report will be a gasp of surprise, for youth and beauty have been so exploited of recent years that we have come to accept it as a fact that they are as important in business as in society. But a second sober thought makes us realize what we subconsciously know all along—that it is not looks that we care about in those who serve us, but efficiency—and efficiency only comes with age and experience.

Every wise shopper passes by the pretty little doll, teetering around on spool-heeled sandals, who has to detach herself from her lipstick before she can even see a customer and murmur "we haven't got it," for some middle-aged clerk who put on her complexion before she left home, whose feet don't hurt her, who knows her stock and takes a real heart interest in trying to find you what you want.

Of course, there are a few gay Lotharios among business men who pick out their stenographers by their kissability instead of their spelling, but the great majority of employers would rather have a settled woman in her thirties, who knows her job and has got marrying out of her system, to any ravishing 20-year-old bathing beauty who is boy crazy and concentrates whatever mind she has on her dates.

It is fine for a girl to be young and pretty; but it fits her for marriage, not for business. Her thoughts, her interests, her ambitions are all centered on selling herself to some slick-haired boy instead of selling woollen underwear to rheumatic old women. The thing of importance to her is how SHE would look in a French hat, not whether it becomes a customer or makes her look like a figure of fun. And, anyway, she is just working until she can catch a husband. She doesn't mean to stick to it a minute longer than she has to, so there is no use to bother about acquiring efficiency in her job.

But the middle-aged woman has no beauty to atone for inefficiency. She has to make good, and she does if she holds her job. She has handled the same goods a thousand times and dealt with the same cranky customers and pernickety bosses, so she has learned widom and patience and how to jolly people along in the hard school of experience. That is why the invaluable Miss Smiths in offices and the Mrs. Jones we wait for in stores are nearly always fortyish or fiftyish.

I trust that these official figures in this report, showing that women are at their peak in earning power when they are 50 or more, will put fresh hope into the hearts of many despairing women who do not even try to do anything because they are middle-aged, and that it will stiffen their backbones so that they will rise up from the do-nothing stools on which they are sitting and get busy. If it does it will solve one of the most heart-breaking problems in the world—that of the woman who, when her husband dies, instead of finding some self-supporting occupation for herself goes to live with her children and makes them miserable and is miserable herself.

Millions of women knock off work thirty years too soon. They could have not only the happiest but also the most profitable years of their lives during their middle age if they would only put to use the knowledge and experience they have gained through living. DOROTHY DIX.

BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER

By SHEPARD BARCLAY

"The Authority on Authorities"

PLEASE DON'T CROWD

NINE PLAYERS seldom "crowd the bidding" unnecessarily. You will almost never see one jump more than a single level on the first round after the partner has opened the bidding. That leaves plenty of time and space for other calls, which may be very enlightening as to exact distribution and strength held. Such a single jump guarantees enough total strength for the side to reach at least a game bid in something and removes the need for hurry. Minimum calls thereafter are safe, because you know a good partner will not drop you short of game.

(Dealer: North. East-West vulnerable.)

North opened here with the very bad bid of 1-No Trump. South would have carried that to three, holding something like three spades to the K-J, three hearts to the K-Q, three diamonds to the A-10, and four little clubs; the opponents probably would start by running the club suit. A better opening would have been a heart with the plan of showing diamonds later.

South, however, far outdid North in bad bidding. After the original No Trump, he bid 4-Clubs. Why all the pushing and shoving? The right bid was 3-Clubs, then let nature take its course to game; or perhaps only 2-Clubs, biding your time to jump with that suit on the next round.

Over the 4-Clubs, North bid 4-Hearts, first right bid by the side. When South called 5-Clubs, North should have passed or bid 5-Diamonds, but didn't. He bid 5-Hearts. Then, when South went to 6-Clubs, North took it to 7-Clubs. "Woe is me!" sobbed the partners in unison after West led a small heart and set it two.

Exiled Writers Good Company

NEW YORK, Aug. 8—(CP).—News from Berlin that the German citizenship of Erich Maria Remarque has been withdrawn "should astound no one who has followed the works of one of the most competent and enlightening writers of our time," the New York Herald Tribune said in a recent editorial.

Dispatches have hinted the author of "All Quiet on the Western Front," dramatic and revealing picture of the German side in the Great War, might come to the United States and become a citizen. Of late he has lived in Switzerland. The news caused The Herald Tribune to recapitulate some of the leaders in the arts and sciences who have left Nazi Germany.

"Consider," the newspaper said, "the loss of Ernst Toller, Dr. Richard Goldschmidt, James Franck and George Grosz. Of Eliazbeth Bergnor, Max Reinhardt and Dr. Otto Klemperer. Of Sigmund Freud and Albert Einstein. Of Thomas Mann, who was justly revered as late as 1931 by a leading Berlin literary critic as "greater than Goethe." Of Von Ossietsky, who won the Nobel Prize for peace and was crucified for it.

"The record is more astonishing as time goes on. And Erich Remarque, whose books were the first to be burned by the wildly-shouting barbarians, probably is aware of the good company he is in."

Land Settlement Scheme Is Urged

GEORGETOWN, British Guina, July 16.—(CP)—Definite action was urged upon the government of British Guiana by the legislative council for action to develop the hinterlands of this British colony.

A motion requesting the government to appoint a small committee of the council to consider the entire question and to recommend the best methods for the economic exploitation of the hinterland's resources was unanimously passed by the council after a motion was unsuccessfully introduced to pave the way for construction of a railway to the hinterland.

Hon. Joseph Eleazar of Berbice River, in introducing the motion for a committee to study the matter, declared that the development was not only necessary to further expansion and growth of the colony, but also would provide a means of alleviating the rising tide of unemployment which appeared to be engulfing the country.

LAKE COUCHICHING, Ont., Aug. 8—(CP).—Discussion of Canadian labor problems and a four-day conference of employers, employees and government officials will feature the seventh annual session of the Canadian Institute on Economics and Politics at Lake Couchiching Aug. 6-19.

Under the chairmanship of Prof. J. Finkelman, or the University of Toronto department of administrative and industrial law, distinguished Canadian businessmen will discuss with trade union officials and authorities in economics and business such subjects as: the Committee for Industrial Organization, the American Federation of Labor, national unions, Catholic unions, and the relationship of employers to trade union organizations. The labor discussions begin Aug. 12.

What Britain is doing in the problem of labor and unions will be discussed by Sir Francis L. C. Floud, high commissioner for the United Kingdom. A distinguished leader in, labor relationships who will attend the sessions is Phillip Murray, chairman of the Steel Workers' Committee, Pittsburg. Canadian labor men present will include A. R. Mosher, president of the All-Canadian Congress of Labor, and John Bruce, Toronto leader.

Others expected in the Institute's discussions include Hon. J. G. Taggart, minister of agriculture for Saskatchewan, and Dr. Hans Simons, former director of the Deutshe Hoschschule for Politik in Berlin and a member of the graduate faculty of the New School of Social Research, New York.

Among the subjects to be discussed in the four days when labor problems will come to the fore are: legal status and right to organize of trade unions in Canada; present forms of trade union organization; relations of government to trade unions and and labor questions; what can be learned from British and American experience.

R. E. G. Davis, secretary of the committee sponsoring the Institute said prospects were for a successful conference.

Italian Measures Aimed At Jews To Prevent Hybrid Race

ROME, Aug. 8—(AP).—The Italian Government announced to-day it had "no special persecution plan against Jews."

It expressed determination, however, to limit participation by Jews in "the full life of the state" to the same proportion that Jews form in Italy's population—about one in a thousand.

The announcement was made in a bulletin issued by the official agency, Informazione Diplomatica, which replied to foreign criticism of the Fascist race doctrine enunciated last month.

The bulletin declared the doctrine was not new, but was stated by Premier Mussolini as early as 1919 and was designed to prevent creation of a hybrid race in Italy.

The bulletin disclosed a special censu will be taken shortly to determine the exact number of Jews in Italy.

"We will send into Libya and East Africa—with the passing of time and for the absolute necessity of life—millions of men," Informazione Diplomatica said.

"To avoid a catastrophic plague of mongrelism, creation of a bastard race neither European nor African fomenting distintegration and revolt, severe larws promulgated and enforced by Fascism are not enough.

"There also is need for strong sentiment, strong pride and a clear, omnipresent consciousness of race.

"Discrimination does not mean persecution. This is said to the all too many Jews of Italy and other countries who raise useless lamentations to the skies which pass from arrogant complaint of attack and senseless panic."

KING'S POET IS OLD OFFICE

Napoleon's Hat Bought At $800

PARIS, Aug. 8—(CP).—Eight hundred dollars is a lot of money to pay for a hat—especially an old hat, faded and a little shapeless. But that's what was paid for Napoleon's headgear at auction here. The reason the hat looked so depressed was because it had fallen into the water once while Napoleon was boating near the Isle of Elba. After that Bonaparte gave the hat to his chamberlain. An autographed document sewn into the crown testified to this. Almost anything from a Luther Bible to a lock of Bonnie Prince Charlie's hair can be purchased at these sales.

Find Chinatown A Model Centre

NEW YORK, Aug. 8—(AP).—New York's Chinatown, long depicted in movies and mystery thrillers as a dark, sinister district of skulking shadows and flashing knives, is in reality the most crime-free section of the metropolitan area.

Court records show the oriental population of New York have the lowest percentage of juvenile delinquency of any racial or sectional group in the city.

Recently a legislative committee went into Chinatown to confer with Chinese elders and learn the secret. And this is what they heard from W. H. Pyn, Chinese interpreter in the courts, who could only recall three minor offences by his countrymen within the previous six months:

"The Chinese child is taught reverence for his parents. Whenever a boy or girl is guilty of misconduct in public it is a disgrace not only to himself or herself but to the family. And the Chinese family is pretty big. We are 45,000,000 brothers. Here if some Chinese boy committed the most minute crime the whole community would know of it and he would be losing face.

"Among the young the most severe punishment is to lose face. Chinese children are not punished physically."

In the course of other remarks Mr. Pyn said divorce was almost unknown among the Chinese community.

Emphasize Sport In Boys' School

TORONTO, Aug. 8—(CP).—Boys in bathing suits, 80 to 100 of them, marching briskly down a half-mile of streets to the East Toronto beach with only one adult supervisor in charge, give a little jolt to the popular idea of restraint at juvenile correctional institutions. This has been done for years in St. John's Industrial School here and the school enjoys a fine record among institutions of its kind in Canada for infrequency of escapes.

St. John's has more the air of a boarding school than one devoted to disciplining boys. There are no barred windows, nor a fence around the great playing fields. The only item suggesting restraint is an oblong enclosure topped with wire netting. It's the new box lacrosse field, joy of the boys and pride of the staff.

Brother Cyril, head of the staff of 12 to 16 Christian Brothers, admits that sometimes corporal punishment has to be used. He is not prepared to say what keeps escapes to a minimum. The school has an active program and the boys are kept busy, he indicates.

Was it school spirit? We do figure there is a good spirit," he said. "It is not so much equipment. The buildings are not as modern as in some other schools.' He said the school's system was not soft by any means, but tended to guarantee against repetition of offences in any necessary punishment for first offences.

He places emphasis upon the sports program, given a large scope through one hard baseball and three soft baseball diamonds, four handball courts and the lacrosse field. The school bantam and midget hockey teams won their series last winter.

The regular school program is divided equally into study classes and shop or vocational work. The boys work a garden area of close to four acres and operate a large greenhouse. They do all the baking under the direction of a supervisor. In the workshops many boys who never before created a thing with their own hands learn trades.

Flowers In Stone For Peace Arch

OTTAWA, Aug. 8—(CP). — The lion and the unicorn are being curry-combed on Parliament Hill adding an extra attraction for the daily thousands of sight-seeing tourists. Two trained carvers armed with power drills are adding finishing touches to the curly manes of the stone carvings of the animals that stand at the base of the sandstone Peace Arch at the entrance to the House of Commons.

Three more carvers are cutting stone squares on the two side arches to represent wild flowers of Canada. The trillium, water-lily, iris, purple-flowered raspberry, thorn apple, Jack-in-the-pulpit, lady slipper, dog's tooth violet, Indian cup and tiger lil yare included in the emblems that will mark the 17 squares around each archway. Animal life has been included in several of the carvings. A sleepy frog sits beside a skunk cabbage in one square, in another a salamander twines itself among marsh marigolds (cowslips) and a snail rests on water leaves in another.

Topping one arch will be combined heads of an Indian and a French-Canadian habitant, while an Indian and a western pioneer in similar pose will centre the peak of the second arch, depicting the bonds of friendship established between the early settlers of the land.

Three days' hard work is required to complete one square. With compass and a heavy black pencil the design is sketched on the bare, stone square from a plaster of Paris model completed by Cleophas Soucy and Couer de Lion MacCarthy in their clay modelling room in the basement beneath the Senate Chamber. Fitting a heavy chisel into the power drill, the carver cuts the outline, adding the delicate finishing and smoothing with finer chisels.

Quebec Employs Her Unemployed

MONTREAL, Aug. 8 — (CP). — From as far north as Hudson Strait to where Quebec touches the United States there is not one man in Quebec province living on direct relief except in Montreal area, according to the Montreal Standard.

Yet two years ago at least 5,000 men in rural districts were supported solely by the government, the paper says, adding that to-day all are laboring six days a week, reconstructing villages, building farm houses and "transforming bleak stretches into magnificent parks where tourists will want to linger."

Not only is the countryside being made attractive, the paper continues, but also the rugged St. John district is being laced with roads that will afford easy access to Chicoutimi and other market centres.

Little more than 10 years ago northern pioneers had slashed their way through this district and just when their efforts were assuming the appearance of roads, the waters of Lake St. John overflowed, flooding entire counties, destroying cattle and buildings and leaving farmers destitute, the paper states. Many migrated and those who remained did little to reconstruct either their isolated hamlets or the dirt roads leading into them.

Even Quebec City, one of the most picturesque cities in America, is having its face lifted by hundreds of men who until recently were unemployed and living on the dole.

Bedaux, renowned industrial expert whose link-up with the proposed visit to America of the Duke and Duchess of Windsor, brought that project to a halt, is expected to become special adviser to the Greek government of Premier John Metaxas, with the task of reorganizing the country's economic structure. Mr. Bedaux was quoted in Athens as forecasting a swift rise in Greece's living standards. He has recently been advising the Turkish government on economic reforms.

RAF Training Scheme Advances Fast

Canadians To Serve British Force As Course Ends

OTTAWA, Aug. 9 (CP).—Tentative plans covering the training of pilots in Canada for the Royal Air Force are believed here to be taking shape in consequence of the survey conducted by Group Captain J. M. Robb commandant of the central flying school of the British air ministry.

Already he has made an exhaustive study of the situation at Camp Borden and Trenton. It is understood he will extend his enquiries to Western Canada, and probably the Maritimes.

The authorities here continue reticent, but Defence Department is according complete cooperation to the British envoy.While Nothing official could be gleaned, it is believed tentative plans are in the making which contemplate the expansion of the training school at Camp Borden, with others to be established elsewhere throughout the country.

tI was indicated last week there would be one on the Pacific coast, and two more in eastern Canada. Moncton was named as the location of a school in the Maritimes, with the other situated on the St. Lawrence, east of Montreal.

Year to Teach Pilot

The capacity of the schools will be governed by the character of the training and the length of the courses. Yearly admission will be limited to the numbers that can most conveniently be handled. At present it takes about a year to educate a pilot for the air force, and the likelihood is that this may be the length of the probational training.

Cadets will be taken on the strength of the Royal Canadian Air Force, probably as provisional units, and transferred to the British Air Service at the end of the training.

Their period of engagement in the R.A.F. will likely be the normal five-years required at present, at the close of which they may either

Prisoners Uneasy At Stony Mountain

WINNIPEG, Ang. 9.—(CP).—The Winnipeg Free Press yesterday published the following:

Unrest among the prisoners at Stony Mountain Penitentiary has prevailed since the recent transfer of fifty convicts from the penal institution at Kingston, it was learned from a recently released prisoner.

The trouble, is is understood, arose over a difference in exercise privileges in the two institutions. Last week things came to a head and the majority of prisoners were locked up and all work suspended.

"It's just a little unrest on the part of new arrivals until they get used to our rules and regulations," Warden Campbell told the Free Press Monday morning. There are still one or two gangs locked up, athough the rest of the prisoners are at work."

Beyond this, he declined to go, except to say that the situation was in no way serious.

During the night, it is understood, constant yammering by the prisoners in their cells, keeps the institution in a tumult.

Alberta Metis Demand 5-Year "Stake"

EDMONTOIN, Aug. 9. (CP).—Delegates from Alberta halfbreed settlements last night voted disapproval of a tentative agreement reached between certain sections of the Metis people and the Alberta government under which each of the province's 2,500 halfbreed families would receive 320 acres of land on a 99-year lease.

The delegates were called together by A. J. Hamilton, president and leader of the Dominion Independent Progressive Association, a group he said embraces all the halfbreed people in North America.

Hon. Dr. W. W. Cross, Alberta Minister of Health and in charge of relief, "is trying to lead Alberta's Metis population into a corral," Hamilton said.

Hamilton, a grandson of Louis Riel, presented a resolution, adopted by the meeting, which asked that the government give the Metis 320 acres of land to each family, or a tract 150 miles long and 100 miles wide, homes schools, free medical attention, nursing, school books, farm animals, farm equipment and hunting and fishing licenses.

Hamilton also asked that the government "stake" the halfbreeds for five years, and that after that time, provision of free schooling, medical attention and free hunting and fishfishing licenses be continued.

Under Dr. Cross' tetative agreement Metis would pay taxes and hunting and fishing licenses in return for government provision and voting privilges. White men would not be allowed to conduct business transactions with Metis unless given a special permit. Halfbreeds would also be required to get permits to leave their property.

Strikes are reported to have delayed the return of prosperity in amaica.

Japan, Russia May Call On Britain

Move Seen Afoot For London To Be Peacemaker

LONDON, Aug. 9 (CP). — The possibility of British mediation of the dispute between Japan and Soviet Russia over the Siberian-Manchoukuoan border was seen today in talks at the Foreign Office by both Soviet and Japanese diplomats.

Ivan Maisky, Soviet Russian Ambassador, just back from a lengthy visit in Moscow, went to the Foreign Office and conferred with Sir Lancelot Oliphant, who is in charge during the absence of the Foreign Secretary, Viscount Halifax.

Maisky had expected to see the Foreign Secretary and the Foreign Office first said he had seen Lord Halifax. Later it corrected this to say the Minister had not returned from his Yorkshire home and Sir Lancelot saw the visitors.

A representative of the Japanese Embassy also called at the Foreign Office.

An informed source in discussing the Russo-Japanese dispute on the Siberian - Manchoukuoan border said:

"The question of mediation undoubtedly has been discussed by British officials but they will take no steps in this direction unless invited by either the Soviet or Japanese governments."

$400 Bond Asked Of Sidley Executors

TORONTO, Aug. 9. (CP).—The four United States executors of the estate of Mrs. Maybelle Horlick Sidley will be required to post the $400 surety the Crown asked when they sought to arrest the inquest into her death, according to comment of Deputy Master O. E. Lennox, sitting in chambers at Osgoode Hall today.

The Crown, represented by C. R. Magone, pointed out the Judicature Act provides that plaintiffs residing outside Ontario must post surety for actions. R. H. Sankey, K.C., on behalf of the executors, claimed his clients were not "plaintiffs," under the terms of the Judicature Act, since their motion was one of prohibition, not of claim. Mr. Magone quoted a decision of Mr. Justice Middleton.

Mr. Sankey said "if we have to give security, of course, we can do so."

The master said that while he intended to give written reason and decision, for the time being he felt himself bound by the decision of Mr. Justic Middleton, which would mean his present belief that the cost must be posted.

Scotland expects to develop natural gas fields along its seashore.

No Bayonet Drill, Useless In Modern War

CAMP BORDEN, Ont., Aug. 9. —(CP).—Western detachments of the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps were under canvas to-day at Camp Borden, bringing to about 80 men and 110 officers the strength of Canada's permanent force concentrated here for training manoeuvres.

Small western detachments from Victoria, Calgary, Regina and Winnipeg arrived last night. A Halifax unit was already encamped.

Limbering-up exercises started with announcement that bayonet practice would be omitted from the extensive list of drills because bayonets have no place in modern warfare.

During preliminary trials and the actual manoeuvres special attention will be given to gas drill.

As other units prepared to go through gas drills, ambulance loading, field kitchen trials and route marches, members of the Carden Lloyd Tank School put finishing touches to their training. Brigadier W. H. Elkins, officer commanding the camp, is to inspect the tank corps Saturday.

4 Shot As Climax To Family Tiff

PITTSBURG, Aug. 9.—(AP). — Four persons were wounded to-day one seriously, as squads of police surrounded a house and fought a gun battle with a man who barricaded himself there, challenging police to "come and get me."

Detective Walter Mullen, who took charge after the critical wounding of Lieut. William Lavery, identified the others shot as: Joseph Fundakowski, 40; Anna, his wife, and Albert Cunningham, 18, a pedestrian, wounded by a stray bullet.

Escape Threat Behind Convent Fire

Witness Reveals Sudbury Girl's Plan To Get Free

OTTAWA, Aug. 9 (CP).—Threats that if she could not run away she would set fire to the convent were made by the 15-year-old Sudbury girl, to a companion, some days before the blaze which razed the convent of the Good Shepherd, a girl testified when trial of the former was resumed in juvenile court here today. The convent was burned early on July 22, when its residents were at Mass.

Today's witness, also a 15-year-old girl, declared she and the Sudbury girl had made plans to escape. Finally the witness divulged the plans to the Mother Superior and told the accused she had done so.

"I'll get out just the same," was the accused's reply. This was the day prior to the blaze.

The girl witness told the court she had been sent to the convent for misbehavior, on July 15. She detailed how they had both planned to make their escape, through the front entrance, after accused had got the keys left by one of the nuns on a table.

She changed her mind about the convent a few days before the fire because the nuns gave her "a good example," said the witness. On July 21 she had told accused "there was no way out," to which the Sudbury girl was said to have replied:

"I'll get out if I have to burn the house."

Mother Guarded After Two Of Family Slain

FREDERICTON, N. B., Aug. 9 —(CP)—The mother of two slain children was under police guard today in the same hospital where her boy and girl died after a swift eruption of violence in their quiet country home at Long's creek, near here.

Royal Canadian mounted police said Mrs. Otis Niles had been the only person in the house with her three children yesterday when two of them received fatal wounds and the third was seriously injured. The mother, ill for a long time, suffered wounds which officers said they believed self-inflicted.

Six-year-old Lena Niles, slashed with a knife, and a two-month-old baby, its skull fractured, died a few hours after they had been taken from the blood-spattered home. The other youngster, Donald, was expected to live, according to hospital authorities.

Police said their father was working in his hayfield when death struck the little household in the lonely creek settlement. When he got back to the house, he summoned a doctor from Prince William and notified police.

Officers investigating the case withheld fuller details of the tragedy. An inquest was set for last night at the school house in Long's Creek.

Pembroke Collision Puts 6 In Hospital

PEMBROKE, Ont., Aug. 9.—(CP.)—Six persons were brought to hospital here to-day suffering from injuries received in a head-on collision between two automobiles on the Trans-Canada Highway three miles west of here.

Mrs. Roscoe D. Wheat, 61, Portland, Ind., was the most severely injured. A passenger in one car driven by her husband, she suffered an intro-cranial hemorrhage and paralysis of the right side.

Thomas N. Brooks, 73, of Lakewood, Ohio, driver of the other machine, suffered a fractured ankle and nose, while the four others received minor cuts and bruises. Two others were treated on the scene of the accident, also for minor injuries.

60 Pounds Disappear In 40-Day Fast But Hay Fever Goes, Too

Detroit, Aug. 9 (AP)

WITH the hay fever nine days old, George McKenna hasn't sneezed once—and that's news.

It means, according to McKenna, that the 40-day fast he endured last spring was not in vain, for its purpose was to rid his body of "impurities" and enable him to escape hay fever from which he suffered each August.

At the conclusion of his great experiment, when he had dwindled from 150 pounds to 90 pounds, he issued a challenge to scoffers:

"Come around and see me in August and if I have hay fever then, you can say that I was just plain crazy."

A week ago, he told inquirers that he wasn't certain yet whether congratulations were in order.

Little doubt remained in his mind today.

"I am fairly certain now," he said, "that I will never have hay fever again. Last year at this time I was suffering terribly and not able to do any work. You can see that I am not suffering now."

26,000 Volunteer In Week To Join Britain's New Civil Air Guard

Gives Any 18-50 Chance To Learn Flying At 60 Cents Instead Of $8 An Hour As Part Of Vast Reserve Defence Unit

LONDON, Aug. 9 (CP).—Britons in large numbers hope soon to dismount from bicycles, motorcyles, automobiles and take to the air in a drive that may raise the largest aviation reserve force in the world.

During the first week after Air Minister Sir Kingsley Wood announced formation of the Civil Air Guard more than 26,000 persons wishing to join applied to officials of the Air Ministry and civil flying clubs.

So great was the response to the recruiting bid the Air Ministry decided to advance the effective date of the scheme if possible from October 1 to September 1.

Men and women rushed to sign their names to applications that will make them part of the reserve defence force if war comes, and will give them a chance to get into the air cheaply whether war comes or not.

Theoretically applicants of either sex between the ages of 18 and 50 will be able to obtain flying tuition in ultra-light planes for 60 cents an hour compared with the present rates for private instruction of $8.75 to $11.25. In addition, they may buy a private pilot's license for about $8 instead of $100 to $200.

Drop Cycles for Planes.

The air ministry's scheme took the breath away from Harry and Harriet, who trundle through weekend traffic aboard dual control bicycles, wearing matching costumes and manifesting one of Britain's courting rites. If they are poor they pedal; if they are not so poor they motorcycle.

An hour's flying is all they could manage a week—or all the flying

Fire In Sawmill Is Probed In Apsley Hall

(By Staff Reporter)

APSLEY, Aug. 8.—An enquiry into the cause, origin and circumstances of a fire which destroyed a portable sawmill on the shore of Loon Lake on June 19th last was held by the Fire Marshall's Department of Ontario here Monday afternoon and revealed evidence that the fire might have been of incendiary origin, but failed to incriminate any person or actually prove how the fire started.

W. H. Stringer, Deputy Fire Marshall and D. H. Saville, inspector from the same department, examined the witnesses with Provincial Constable David Silvester acting for the Ontario Provincial Police at whose request the enquiry was held. In all nineteen witnesses were called and several were subjected to questions from Constable Silvester and both members of the Fire Marshall's Department. The town hall where the enquiry was held was jammed to the doors and the proceedings lasted for three and one half hours.

Valued At $6,000

The fire started Sunday morning about five o'clock following a heavy rain and was not discovered until the sawmill powered by twin Diesel engines was completely enveloped in flames. Operations had ceased at five o'clock the day before and the total value of the mill with sundry equipment was $6,000. Actually only $1,100 damage was done as the Diesel engines had been repaired and were now in use again, according to evidence given.

C. W. Biersworth, Bancroft lumberman and owner of the mill told the court he had contracted with the Purdy Lumber Company Ltd. to cut logs at $7 per thousand board feet. The mill had been operating since May and 16 men were employed, eight from Bancroft and eight from the Loon Lake district. He testified that on the Saturday night prior to the disaster he had been working at the spot until seven o'clock and that when he left everything was correct. He said two valuable rubber belts and an emery wheel had been taken from the mill either before or during the fire. He had never received any threats nor did he know why anyone should burn the mill.

Wilbert Wilson, a truck driver for Biersworth, gave the only startling evidence of the probe. He swore that the day before the fire he had filled the truck gas tank and during the day had used about two gallons of gas working. When he arrived at the truck the morning of the fire he discovered that the opposite door of the truck to which he usually entered the cab was open, and that the seat had been pushed forward off the tank. Six gallons of gas had been removed from the tank, he said. He expressed the opinion that the fire did not appear to be acci-

Corrigan Suspects Lie Detector Lies

BOSTON, Aug. 9 (AP).—Douglas Corrigan stoutly insisted a lie detector was wrong to doubt his now celebrated story of his wrong-way flight to Eire.

"I wouldn't say it was exactly correct," said the grinning Irishman from California when Dr. William Moulton Marston, New York physchologist, announced last night at a dinner in Corrigan's honor that the machine showed the aviator had "fibbed."

The New York to Eire flier had been asked, "did you really start for California?" and answered certainly." His voice was weak, however, and Dr. Marston noted a "slight rise" from normal in Corrigan's blood pressure.

Theft Of T.N.T. Costs Marmoran 6 Months

BELLEVILLE, ONT., Aug. 9 —(CP)—Isaac Wright, Marmora Village, was sentenced to serve from six to nine months in the Reformatory after being convicted yesterday of the theft of a quantity of dynamite.

County Crown Attorney B. C. Donnan, K.C., held that the accused was not only stealing the dynamite but selling it into the hands of unknown persons. "This is a dangerous practice," warned Mr. Donnan before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd, Northbrook, meted out a sentence of six months determinate and an additional three months indefinite.

Siberian War Front Widening

2 Red Battalions Attack Suiliufen, Shelling Continues

TOKYO, Aug. 9—(AP).—The Japanese War Office to-day declared Russian forces were constructing new defences on the southwest shore of Possiet Bay and were concentrating cavalry, artillery and tanks there.

Possiet Bay is several miles east of the disputed Siberian-Korean border zone where Russian-Japanese fighting has been going on since July 11, and is said to be done of the Soviet's strategic naval and airplane bases.

An army communique said two battalions of Soviet infantry attacked Sulliufen, a hill six miles north of Shachofeng, which the Russians occupied July 29 and lost again July 31. This was the first time the fighting extended to Sulliufen.

A War Office spokesman expressed belief the concentrations at Possiet Bay did not mean the abandonment of Soviet positions near Changkufeng, the disputed border hill which Japanese took from the Russians, along with Shachoefeng.

He said he believed it meant extenion of the whole front, although he said Soviet forces were withdrawing some men from Changfukeng. Japanese said the Russians had lost 1,500 men in fighting for Changfukeng since July 29.

Shell Wrecks Train.

The opposing infantry units were quiet this afternoon but sporadic exchanges by artillery were made. One heavy Soviet shell struck a passenger train several miles behind the lines.

"I believe the civilian casualties will be heavy," the spokesman said.

It was reported Marshal V. Blecher, Soviet commander-in-chief in the Far East, had arrived at Novokievsk to take command of the forces.

A Japanese communique said neary 1,000 bodies of Russians had been collected on all parts of the front. Opposing troops were about 1,500 yards apart this evening.

Joint Border Probe?

Diplomatic negotiations between Tokyo and Moscow were expected to be resumed. The foreign office said that Maxim Litvinoff, Russian foreign affairs commissar, agreed in principle to a Japanese request a joint border commission re-survey the frontier zone, which each country claims and the scene of "incidents" since July 11.

The Japanese plan was for a commission of three Russians, three Japanese, and three representing Manchoukuo, Japanese protectorate. Russia wanted a board of two Russians, one Japanese, and one representative of Manchoukuo.

Japanese communiques said 100 Soviet tanks had been disabled. Two Soviet infantry deserters reported a Russian tank corps commander who had planned to surrender his entire unit was executed and that a purge had been extended down to the lowest ranks.

Dispatches from Yuki, Korea, near the Siberian frontier, said new activity was reported among Soviet forces at Changkufeng after day-long bombardments yesterday. The Japanese at Yuki said the Russian left flank was driven back Sunday night but Soviet units had driven a wedge to the Tumen river, thereby isolating Japanese troops on the hill.

Last Of Notorious Bird Gang Arrested With Blonde

BALTIMORE, Aug. 9 (AP).—A young man and his attractive blonde woman companion, arrested here last night, were identified through fingerprints today as Charles Bird, midwest desperado, and his wife, Barbara, police headquarters said.

After armed detectives seeking the couple for several robberies here had captured them, captani of detectives John A. Cooney said Bird admitted his identity.

Bird is the last of the notorious gang that escaped from Cleveland's county jail Sept. 23, 1937.

James Widmer, 31, was retaken in Philadelphia Oct. 15, and Frank Bird, 30, was captured in Cleveland Oct. 29 with his wife Sylvia, 21, when she became homesick in New York and urged their return to visit her mother.

J. Edgar Hoover, director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, ranked the fugitive Charles Bird on Nov. 6, 1936 as "public enemy No. 2."

Frank Bird, sentenced five days earlier to 45 years in a federal penitentiary after he pleaded guilty to bank robbry, and Widmer, under a 65-year sentence pronounced Oct. 26, were taken Nov. 3 to the Leavenworth (Kas.) prison.

Troops Capture Four In Palestine Hills

JERUSALEM, Aug. 9. (AP).—An Arab was slain in Jerusalem and a Jew and an Arab were wounded in a shooting between Tel Aviv and Jaffa today.

British troops fought an armed band in the hills east of Nablus, and captured four of them, wounding three. Seven rifles were seized.

Only yesterday, the high commissioner of trans-Jordan and commander-in-chief of Palestine, Sir Harold Alfred MacMichael, had appealed for an end to the "ruinous campaign of murder and sabotage." His appeal was broadcast.

More than 200 persons have been killed in Arab-Jewish conflict since July 5.

Quints' Bad Tonsils Poor Mufflers So Separation Ends Quickly

CALLANDER, Ont., Aug. 8.—(CP). —Four the Dionne quintuplets raised so much "fuss" about Emilie's isolation in another room at the Dafoe hospital here, Dr. A. R. Dafoe agreed to-day to re-unite the five on condition they "behave." The five have been ill for several days with throat infections.

Emilie was the first of the quintuplets to show illness from tonsilities. Her sickness was noticed Friday and on Saturday when her condition became worse, she was isolated from her sisters. She disliked being alone and the four others—Yvonne, Marie, Cecille and Annette—also protested at her absence.

Another factor in re-uniting the five sisters was that the excitement generated by the separation was not good for them during their illness. Each has showed improvement today, Keith Munro, their business manager, said in speaking for Dr. Dafoe.

Better This Year.

"All the babies have bad tonsils, have had for some time, but for some time the tonsils have been improving," Mr. Munro said. "They are much better this year than last."

It is hoped that constant effort to prevent infection may result in the quintuplets passing the normal danger point of early childhood tonsil condition without the need of having their tonsils removed. "The doctors don't want to operate," Mr. Munro said.

Temperatures of the children, four years old May 28 of this year, hovered only slightly above normal to-day. Each was kept in bed.

Public viewing of the children was prohibited Saturday by Dr. Dafoe. To-day he was considering allowing the children to be shown at the nursery windows when they have recovered sufficiently to be allowed out of bed, but are not sufficiently well to play in the nursery playyard.

Sees Highway To All Lands Except Australia

SEATTLE, Aug. 9 (AP)—A world highway linking every continent except Australia was forecast yesterday by Donald Macdonald, Fairbanks, Alaska, engineer and supporter of the proposed United States-Alaska highway.

Macdonald, "outside" for the first time in seven years, told interviewers the idea of travelling over the world by automobile "is entirely feasible and as natural as evolution. It's not pipe dream."

Macdonald said a motorist some day would be able to travel from Cape Horn in South America up the west coast of that country, across Central America by the Pan American highway system, thrugh Mexico and into the United States. Using the proposed Alaskan highway through British Columbia, the Yukon and Alaska, the future motorist would cross the Bering Sea into Russia, travel on into Europe and across the Suez Canal to Africa.

Think Flour Fliers Have Died At Sea

LEEDS, England, Aug. 9 (CP-Havas)—Four men of the Royal Air Force were feared dead today following the disappearance of a plane of the 233rd squadron. It was believed to have gone down in the bay at Bridlington, Yorkshire.

Fishermen reported hearing a plane flying low and then an explosion late last night. This morning a lifebelt of the type used by the air force was washed ashore on the beach.

The plane, which had participated in manoeuvres over the week-end, left Gosport last night for its regular station. Aboard were Pilot-Sergeant C. J. Gordon, Aircraftsmen T. C. Andrews, M. G. Brand and L. Freeman.

Coast guard vessels and private craft searched the region this morning without finding any trace of the missing craft.

Wheat Board Moves In High Gear

Busy Fixing Prices Below No. 1 Average 60 In '37

WINNIPEG, Aug. 9 (CP).—Machinery of the Canadian wheat board moved into high gear today to handle all or part of the 1938 wheat yield.

Biggest immediate problem before chief commissioner George McIvor is the fixing of the spreads on lower grades on the basis of 80 cents for No. 1 Northern at Fort William. Fixing the spreads—the difference between the No. 1 price and the price of lower grades—will be completed shortly.

What percentage of the 1938 wheat yield of the Prairie Provinces will be handled by the board is still problematical. The board is preparing for a big volume—and if the open market price is below 80 cents for No. 1 the greater portion of the crop is expected to be sold through board channels.

The board of grain supervisors, which took office in June, 1917, handled all the 1916 carryover and the 1917 and 1918 crops while the first wheat board in 1919-20 handled the whole 1919 crop. Under war-time influence, these boards paid producers from $2.21 to $2.63 a bushel on the No. 1 northern Fort William basis.

Canada's next wheat board operated in 1935-36 after grain stabilization efforts and it handled 150,740,226 bushels of the 1935 crop on the basis of 87½ cents a bushel for No. 1 northern at Fort William. The 1936-37 and 1937-38 boards took no wheat from the farmer because the open market price did not fall below 90 cents but the 1938-39 board will accept wheat regardless of open market quotations.

Average of 60 Cents.

Wheat pool sources estimated farmers on the average for all grades of wheat received about 60 cents a bushel at their nearest elevator point under the 87½ cents a bushel price. Under the 80-cent price, it is estimated the average return for all grades will be about 53 cents a bushel at the nearest elevator point.

Prices to producers by the 1935-36 board on a Fort William basis were 89 cents for No. 1 hard, 87½ cents for No. 1 northern, 85 cents for No. 2 northern, 81 cents for No. 3 northern, 76 cents for No. 4 northern and down to as low as 50 cents for feed wheat. The Amber Durum No. 1 price was 87½ cents.

Alaskan Flier Sighted Safe

FAIRBANKS, Alaska, Aug. 9.—(AP)—L. F. Barr who disappeared Thursday on a flight from Fairbanks to Big Delta, was reported safe today on an open hillside along the middle fork of forty mile river.

Pilot Jimmy Dodson said he sighted the Canadian airman during a flight late last night but could not land.

By the light of the "midnight sun" Dodson said he saw Barr walking beside his plane.

On the fuselage, Dodson said, was printed "Joseph's Village," indicating the pilot intended to hike to that village, about 20 miles from where he was forced down.

A plane was loaded to fly supplies to Barr.

CAMPBELLFORD

$400 Realized In Dog Taxes, Report Shows

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 9.—Over four hundred dollars was handed over to the town treasury as a result of the diligent efforts in the matter of collecting dog taxes it was revealed before members of the town council on Monday evening. This was the largest revenue that the dogs had ever yielded according to assessor Harry Townsend in whose hands the collection of the tax rests.

Addressing members of the council Mr. Townsend stated that he felt the town should next year publish a pamphlet clearly indicating when the tax was due and by giving a copy to each dog owner overcome the danger of any person being unaware when the tax was due. He also pointed out that according to the terms of the local bylaw he was himself liable to a $10.00 fine if he failed to report the presence of any householder who was harboring a member of the canine family.

The request of George Potts for a sidewalk on Garry Street was left in the hands of the Road and Bridge Committee, and when a delegation from the Rotary Club headed by S. A. Maguire requested the use of a portion of Bridge street for a Street Fair on Sept. 13 the council made a motion granting its use.

Councillor Donald told members of the Council that work on the parking lot on the west side of the town was proceeding and with the placing of several more loads of gravel and the erection of lights would be ready for use. It was decided that the building owned by the town and known as the Armouries should be painted and a motion was passed authorizing the purchase of all the paint required to cover the woodwork. It was revealed thata letter had been received from the Department of Militia authorizing the town to make use of the land surrounding the building as a parking lot providing a suitable fence was erected and gate placed in it in order that it might be used for drill purposes when required.

In his report for the first seven months of the year Tax Collector Birmingham stated that collections to date exceeded those of last year by eight per cent. with the arrears during the same period showing a decrease of $2,318.19. He also stated that the District Weed Inspector who had recently paid the town a visit had seemed well pleased with conditions in the municipality.

When it was learned that poison ivy weed was growing in one section of the town, council members authorized immediate steps to be taken for its removal.

Referring to the lights on the Cenotaph Mayor F. F. Long stated that the water and Light Commission had agreed to take over their maintenance with the town paying the sum of $25.00 a year for the power used.

'Lost' Campbellford Child Returns Home – Visiting Friends Of Family

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 9.—A two year old Campbellford child who was thought to have been lost was returned to her home shortly after an organized search had begun. Wanda, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. D. W. Grills, Ranney street left her mother as she was preparing supper at 5.40 Monday afternoon and toddled across the bridge where she was taken home for supper by a friend of the family, while the panic stricken mother was conducting a frantic search for her.

It was not until shortly after eight o'clock that she was returned to her parents just as the alarm had been sounded to summon a search party. The child stated she had gone downtown in search of her grandmother who had left the house a short while earlier, nor did her hosts have any thought of the anxiety the missing child was causing until they heard the alarm.

Czech Killing Of Sudeten Stirs Berlin

Nazi Press Brands Neighbor Lawless Nation

BERLIN, Aug. 9—(AP). — The controlled Nazi press levelled a barrage of invective to-day against Czechoslovakia in the slaying of a 28-year-old member of the Czechoslovak German minority.

"Present conditions in Czechoslovakia have reached the limit of what is bearable, said The Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung. It said the killing of Wenzel Baierle after a saloon political quarrel was "outstanding among the "great number of Czech crimes against the Sudeten German people.

Baierle and two companions quarrelled with several German Social Democrats, opponents of the Sudeten German party. After being ejected from the tavern they continued their argument, and Baierle was stabbed.

(An official Czech report of the slaying near Glasenwald, Bohemia, recommended that the number of constables in remote districts be increased where possibilities exist of heated political arguments).

"Lawless" Land?

Chancellor Hitler's newspaper, Voelkischer Beobachter, called Czechoslovakia a "lawless" country "where people in the streets are attacked and even killed daily—a country in which soldiers and gendarmes fire wildly about them without being punished."

Under the headline "Cowardly Attack on Sudeten, Again a Victim fo Czech Murderous Baiting," the paper said: "These instances show a condition of lawlessness which must fill every neighbor with the greatest sorrow.

"For this reason, Sudeten Germans must have the possibility of living in their own territory according to their own laws. Only thus can the present friction, furthered by Praha and gradually developing into a danger for all Europe, be eliminated."

re-engage or go on the reserve list. Those who return to Canada at the end of their service will probably be transferred to the Canadian reserve.

Places For Canadians

Although recruits will be drawn in large numbers from among British youths, young Canadians will also be given opportunities. But in all cases the British government will reimburse the Canadian government for all out-of-pocket expenses incurred.

Those concerned with aviation see in the plan many features of advantage to both the British and Canadian forces. On the one hand, the Royal Air Force will possess in this country a source of pilots in training, under conditions somewhat more favorable than exist in the United Kingdom. On the other, the Royal Canadian Air Force will be placed in possession of greatly expanded facilities and, in due course, will have built up a voluntary reserve of trained pilots against any emergency.

These two circumstances are regarded by the government as complete justification for its insistence that the training schools be established and operated as an integral part of Canada's forces.

The matter has not yet reached the stage of final negotiation between the two governments. These must await the report which, in a few weeks, Captain Robb will render to the British air ministry.

Ontario Police Challenge Magician To Catch Bullet In Teeth

FORT ERIE, Aug. 9—(Speciald)—Leading members of the Police Association of Ontario, headed by Chief Daniel T. Boyd of Thorold, First Vice-President, yesterday challenged Theodore Annemann of New York, to repeat his stunt of catching a bullet in his teeth at the approaching conclave of the Piff-Paff-Poofers Association here Sept. 3, 4 and 5.

Robert Weill, executive director of the Piff-Paff-Poofers, an international organization of amateur magicians, after receiving Chief Constable Boyd's challenge, Sunday wired Mr. Annemann, who first performed the stunt at Fort Erie three years ago. Annemann's reply, received later, is to the effect he will come.

The stunt calls for the use of a rifle, which will be loaded by a volunteer committee under rigid inspection, with the casing and slug both initialled. The gun will be discharged at a distance of fifty feet, and Annemann says he will catch it in his teeth.

The committee will be given its choice of ammunition with which to load the rifle.

The Police Association of Ontario will name a committee of leading chiefs from the Niagara Peninsula to check the gun and the bullet before and after the stunt.

10 Days Of Death Promised Canton By Japs

CANTON, China, Aug. 9.—(AP)—Japanese warplanes, which dropped leaflets promising 10 consecutive days of bombardments, unleashed explosives today that killed at least 102, maimed 159 and buried uncounted scores of persons.

The first of the raids yesterday left 121 dead and missing and 180 injured. Today's attacks lasted three hours and were part of widespread bombings throughout Kwangtung province in which many centres and railways suffered. Officials of this South Chinese port expected an intensification of the raids the rest of the week.

The missiles were mostly 500-pound bombs which, besides inflicting widespread property damage in industrial district, demolished hundreds of flimsy houses. Two acres of such dwellings were laid waste by five 500-pound bombs in Taipingshan. Ten bombs wrecked the old waterworks. Another piled debris 30 feet high behind a theatre.

A bomb wrecked the 49th Girls' Primary School, which had been evacuated less than an hour previously.

A hush reminiscent of June, when Canton was bombed day after day, fell over the city as further alarms cautioned terrified inhabitants to await another attack.

Tourists Complain Of High Licenses

(Examiner Correspondence.)

LINDSAY, Aug. 9.—A battle royal, due to over-consumption of wine, was staged in "Pumpkin Hollow" on Saturday night. Chief of Police Lawler and Constable Reeves visited the scene of hostilities, and as a result the combatants, Frank Conners and Howard McGinnis, will be asked to explain their conduct in police court this week. The police were also called to a house on Regent street where a gallon of wine was responsible for another fight. The man of the house threatened to cut his wife with a cross-cut saw, but before he went into action the police had arrived.

The spruce saw fly is creating havoc in Haliburton county, and every effort is being made to eradicate its spread. Those who see any signs of this insect are urged to spray the trees with arsenate of lead, using the same proportions as used for potato bugs.

A serious accident occurred near Bolsover on Saturday when two cars side-swiped each other. William Stanley, of Bolsover, is in the Ross Hospital in a serious condition. Art Ross, driver of one of the cars, Mrs. Ross and Miss Grace Ross all received injuries, but were able to be removed to their home. The Ross car was proceeding north and the Stanley car going south. The Stanley car was turned over on its side on the road. Both cars were badly damaged.

The Examiner representative ran into a party of tourists from Ohio and Pennsylvania yesterday, and they protested strongly at what they termed excessive license fees for the privilege of fishing. They had been having little luck in their piscatorial proclivities, as the lunge were biting poorly. They did not complain about that so much, but they pointed out that while Ontario was making a big bid for tourist business, and while Americans were glad to come over, they did not feel that it was good business to charge what they considered a high fee for licenses. They pointed out that they could go into Wisconsin and Northern Michigan and fish for pike and the license fee was only one dollar. They further claimed that a number of ourists from Ohio and Pennsylvania had visited this section for the last time.

We Noticed

Shaded velvets are being used by the best milliners for fall hats.

The old-fashioned camisole is back, as you may have seen. Beading with ribbon run through it is a part of lingerie trimming this year.

Small beads and seed pearls are used in new ways. Often they form the ground for other embroideries, such as a lace-like frill around a bouquet of embroidered flowers.

Black gloves or white gloves have been the preferred colors all summer. With the advent of late summer and early fall, it's to be all black, they say.

New shoes are closely following dress styles. When the dress is shirred so is the correct shoe to wear with it. Drapings call for draped effects in shoes. With ostrich feather and suchlike Victorian fripperies, wear shoes with coy bows.

DOROTHY DIX

In Real Life Vice Is Sordid—It Never Is as Alluring as Pictured In Novels, So Don't Take the Fatal Step if You Are Seeking a Way Out of Poverty or a "Tame" Life

DEAR MISS DIX—I am an attractive girl, 24 years old, who is tired of being good. I have always been good and what have I got for it? I have tramped the streets looking for a job with no success because I refused to be "nice" to the boss. My clothes are dowdy. The soles of my shoes worn thin. I don't have enough to eat. I am sure there is some man who will gladly give me clothes, money and food. Why should't I take it? I am young. I want some fun and life is so short. Don't you think that I should take what I can get from it? Life owes me something besides starvation and misery. NELL.

ANSWER:

You are falling into the error that so many girls make of believing that vice is always gilded and that the downward path is paved with gold. You think that the price of virtue is fine clothes and furs, jewels and feasting, and that if you sold yourself for these you would walk in silk attire and silver have to spare, like the heroine of the old song.

If this were true, and if every girl who threw her cap over the windmill did so at the instigation of a millionaire playboy or a Sugar Daddy, one could hardly blame a poor girl for taking the easiest way to get the good things of life. For to resist the temptation to exchange shabbiness for Paris confections; walking for automobiles; delicatessen sandwiches for rich food; hard work for lazy loafing would require more strength of character and higher principles than the average young woman possesses.

But it is only in novels and the movies that wickedness is always glittering and gay, and every Lothario a spendthrift billionaire, and every girl who goes astray swaps her shabby but honest raiment for sables and diamonds. In real life vice is sordid and unprofitable. Most of the Don Juans have pocketbooks as thin as their morals. They can't support themselves in comfort, to say nothing of a Lady Love. And so the girls who think that it pays to be bad find out that Mrs. Warren's profession, as Shaw called it, is a poor trade for a girl to follow.

I get many letters from girls like you who complain that the reason they cannot get work is because they are good, and that they cannot hold a position when they get it because they will not put up with the familiarities of bosses who consider petting a part of a secretary's duties. No doubt there are such employers, but they are not universal. They are not even common.

Most business men divorce their work and their gallantries. They have to concentrate so completely on their jobs that they have no time nor thought for love-making. In business hours the only lady they are chasing is the one on the dollar.

The reputation of being "wild" is no recommendation for a girl who is looking for work, and it is true, whether you believe me or not, that the great majority of business men prefer good girls to bad girls as employees. They don't want their offices cluttered up with sirens, nor to have their attention distracted by affairs. Most of the women who hold executive positions or are the heads of departments and who are spoken of as our "invaluable Miss Jones" are as virtuous as Caesar's wife.

So put out of your mind this idea that all that you have to do to get a high-salaried position is to be nice to the boss. Efficiency, not sex appeal, is what counts in business. And don't delude yourself by thinking that you can go out on the street and pick up a millionaire. They are scarce as hens' teeth. Go to work and make something of yourself. Goodness pays bigger dividends even in money than vice does.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—I am a girl of 17, still in school. My parents are making me take a commercial course, which I don't like, because they think it is wonderful for a girl to be a stenographer. What I want to be is a hairdresser. I love to set hair and I am very clever at doing it. My ambition is to own my own shop. I am behind at school because I don't like to study and don't understand the work of a stenographer. Do you think I should be what my parents want me to be, or should I persuade them into sending me to a hairdressers' school? A WORRIED GIRL.

ANSWER:

Your parents are making a great mistake in trying to force you into doing something for which you have no aptitude and in which you will never succeed. Many fathers and mothers feel that they have a right to pick out their children's lifework for them and this is why we have so many failures. Square pegs that never fit into round holes.

We never do anything well that we don't enjoy doing for its own sake. Your choice, anyway, is a much wiser one than your parents', for there is a limit to the demand for even the best stenographers, whereas every woman in the world wants a permanent or a water wave or what have you, and she will spend the last dollar she has for it.

The beauty shop has opened one of the best avenues to making a livelihood that any girl can enter. If she is a good operator, she can always get a well-paying job and look forward to owning her own shop eventually.

DEAR DOROTHY DIX—I am one of those guys who hate baby talk and, unfortunately, I am in love with a girl who makes me so darn mad doing it I could almost cuss. She greets me with: "Hi, big boy! Do great big boy love ittybitty girlie?" I also hate nicknames like "Little Sweetiepie." What shall I do to break her of this darn habit? PERCY.

ANSWER:

I also loathe baby talk and if I were on the jury I would bring in a verdict of justifiable homicide if you choked her, but inasmuch as you would perhaps hesitate to take that drastic method of curing her just tell her that you can't stand that idiotic mushy line any more and that you are not coming back until she learns how to talk like a sensible human being. And you won't be doing yourself any harm if you never return, because the baby-talk girl develops into the "poor-little-me" wife who never acts her age and is a pain in the neck to her husband as long as she lives.

JUST BETWEEN US WOMEN

"At last we must admit that the man who towers above his fellows is the one who has the power to make others work for him; a great success is not possible any other way."—O. S. Marden.

Dear Friends:

On reading this quotation you might say, "Oh well, I guess I will never tower above anyone, for the reason I work for others, they do not work for me." But wait a minute, wait a minute.

You may not be a power in the land, you may not have land or riches, your income may be tiny as mine is, but look around and see how many people work for you.

In our own Examiner Office, think of all the people wro work early and late so that you get your Peterborough Examiner each day. Starting with our editors at the top, and going on down to the boy who delivers for you, every last one of them works for you and me and the next fellow. Ever think of that?

And consider that right now someone may be making a dress you will wear later on, or a suit or shirt, a tie or a pair of laces. And you thought you had no power. Think also of the ones who are gardening for you, and raising wheat to make your bread.

Cast your eyes around and see the men who are on day and night duty to protect you from burglars, who regulate traffic so you can walk the streets in safety. Think also of those who are ready at a moment's notice to come and put out a fire if you are unfortunate enough to have one. Lots of power there, even if you do share it with others.

Every morning around 4 a.m. I listen to a man with a big machine who goes along hosing the streets, washing away the filth of the day before so that it can run down the sewers. Some power there to make our streets clean while we are asleep.

And far away in China and Brazil someone is picking tea leaves for you and coffee beans for me, so that we have a refreshing cup when we arise. Someone else is picking cocoanuts, and rice. Someone else is picking currants and raisins, gathering spices, making cloth, painting pictures. No end to the power we have when people work for us.

And in a building, numbers of girls are ready with "Number, Please" so that we can order our food without stirring out of our home while numbers of other men are seeing to it that all this is kept in good running order. You thought no one worked for you.

In another building someone is making your breakfast food, in another they are spinning wool, someplace else they are arranging the canned foods, making bread and wrapping it, making cakes so we will not have to heat the kitchen up.

Men are making canoes and outboard motors, fishing things, the awnings which make homes cooler. They are making soft drinks (wish I had one now), ice-cream, cream, butter, and cheese. Men are killing and dressing animals so that we shall have meats, cooking hams and other things that we may have variety.

You think no one works for you? Why, there are armies of people doing just that; not only here, but all over the world. And all these folks need someone also to work for them, so what are you doing for your share, except sit down and grumble about your lot in life.

With all that power at your disposal, with all these jobs taken off your hands, dare you say you have no time to do the things you want to do, dare you grumble that no one ever does a single thing for you, you must do it all yourself? Who are you fooling?

O. S. Marden tells us further: "You cannot take out of life what you have not put into it, any more than you can draw out of a bank what you have not deposited." Put some of YOUR power into it and see the difference.

Your Friend, ROBERTA.

Minted Apple Jelly
Creamed Whole New Potatoes
Stuffed Tomato Salad
Peach and Cantaloupe Fruit Cup
Cup Cakes Iced Tea

NOTE: Even the butchers admit the price of Spring lamb is high and my butcher has the good sense to order in yearling lamb—all you have to do to have more lamb cheaper, is to cook it long and in a slow oven—searing it at high temperature at first—after having floured and salted it.

Cover, bring to boiling point, stir down and let cook until tender—not more than 5 minutes and strain through coarse sieve. Add just enough sugar to sweeten a little. Good served hot with hot cake or fresh bread. If less sweet it is grand with sausages baked.

The Other Side Of It

We are told so often that modern machinery is the chief cause of unemployment and that labor-saving devices have resulted in the loss of thousands of jobs that it is refreshing to have some one come along and tell us as did Ernest Foss in addressing the Rotary Club, that modern inventions have on the contrary opened the door of employment for armies of men in fields that were not dreamed of a short time ago.

Mr. Foss whose lectures during the Preview of Progress presentations entertained and instructed thousands of citizens here made out a good case in behalf of his theory.

He was able to show for example that the Neon sign industry, a development of the last half a dozen years, has provided large numbers of new jobs, that electric refrigeration has been responsible for the establishment of a vast new industry and that out of it in turn has come another great industry, in its infancy at present, namely, air-conditioning. Today when scientific research is making it possible to make wool out of milk, glass out of wood, and rubber out of coal and lime and salt and other synthetics are rapidly being perfected, Mr. Foss claims with such truth, that it is not difficult to visualize a vast change in manufacturing conditions, a change that must inevitably produce a continued demand for labor in industries that now do not exist at all or are only in the experimental stage. There may be temporary displacements as readjustments were made but in the final analysis the result cannot fail to be new jobs for thousands.

Help Is Needed

A relief situation that contains the possibility that by the end of the present year Peterborough may be $30,000 in the red because of the assistance it will have to provide to unemployment persons and their families is a condition that cannot be accepted calmly. It is also a condition that should be called sharply to the attention of both Federal and Provincial governments.

Peterborough is not to blame because the general economic picture has become somewhat darker since the beginning of the year and there is no logical reason why this and other municipalities should be called upon to foot the whole bill represented by the additional relief costs. The fact that this increase in costs was unforeseen is surely not sufficient cause to throw the entire expense upon the shoulders of the municipal governments.

The simple facts of the local situation are that at the beginning of the year the city council appropriated $47,500 to meet the city's share of relief for the twelve months and that by the last day of July, all but $8,791.52 had been expended. Applications for relief had increased rapidly, instead of falling off as had been hoped and the result is that while only 883 persons were being looked after in July a year ago, there were 1,541 people in receipt of assistance last month. It is true that the per capita payment dropped slightly but that did not make a start toward coming close to taking care of the cost represented by the larger number of persons on relief.

Meanwhile the governments have stood by and done nothing about the situation. Their grants have been exactly what they planned at the beginning of the year and the unexpected lengthening out of relief rolls and corresponding expense has been left on the doorstep of the municipalities.

It is time the whole layout was adjusted. This city should not be asked to pay the whole cost of a $30,000 increase in relief costs and we believe that the council should lose no time in calling the attention of Queen's Park to the situation and in appealing for help. The municipalities have tried to play the game but there is a limit to what they can do toward caring for the unemployed when the numbers swell to their present proportions.

It's Justified

We want to cross swords at once with the Guelph Mercury which has been attacking Civic Holiday as an occasion that it says has not the slightest justification for existing.

"Perhaps someone can suggest a way," says the Mercury, "whereby this rather meaningless holiday can be made to take on some tangible form that will justify us in continuing its observation." Our own opinion is that our Guelph friend is growing needlessly fussy about something that no one else seems to be worrying about in the least.

There is no difficulty, if one is really seeking it, for finding justification for Civic Holiday.

Surely the very fact that it provides a long holiday weekend half way between Dominion Day which is the real beginning of the vacation period and Labor Day which marks the end of the summer play time is all the credentials Civic Holiday needs to carry.

Our British friends long ago learned the desirability of a holiday just about that season of the year so they launched the August bank holiday when everybody that can get there goes to the seaside.

Civic Holiday, now observed by most Ontario municipalities on the first Monday in August, affords a mid-summer opportunity for a day or two out-of-doors and it has become one of the most popular holidays in the Canadian calendar. It may not be an anniversary of historic importance or a day of any great significance but we doubt very much the ability of the Mercury to get it abolished. It is too firmly established in the affection of Ontario folk to be tossed lightly out of the picture at this stage.

Cutting Hydro Melons

The Examiner said something a few days ago about municipal councils killing a little idle time by passing more or less impossible resolutions and then passing copies around to the other municipalities with the request that they should be endorsed.

One that has been going the rounds recently originated in St. Thomas, where the council approved of a resolution to the effect that a provincial amendment should be passed making it possible for Hydro surpluses to be handed over to the municipalities.

That is a sample about what is best described as a half-baked proposal.

The principle upon which Hydro was founded was that of supplying its customers with power and light at cost.

If a local Hydro Commission finds itself in possession of a surplus at the end of a year, there is only one logical place for the extra revenue to go and that is back into the pockets of Hydro customers, not into those of the municipal ratepayers.

The surplus can be returned to the customers either in the form of a bonus or by reduction of rates, but in any case the customer is the person who should benefit.

It does not destroy the logic of that argument to point out that most Hydro customers are also municipal taxpayers and that they stand to benefit in either case.

There is a right way and a wrong way to do everything and when it comes to cutting up a melon provided by a Hydro surplus, the right way is to give the slices to the persons who made the melon possible in the first place. Nobody else, surely, is entitled to share in the distribution unless both the laws of common-sense and the ruling principle of the Hydro system are to be disregarded completely.

We Could Use This

In England there has been organized recently a body of citizens known as the "Council for the Preservation of Rural England," and we imagine that there is room for something of that kind in Canada, where we are far too much inclined to be careless about preserving historic spots and saving the beauty of the countryside.

Here are some of the questions the Council has been asking municipal bodies and the list provides a chance to appreciate the scope of the work that has been undertaken.

"Have you a fine old bridge which is threatened with destruction?

"Are any ancient buildings or historical sites in danger?

"Is litter allowed to accumulate in places where the beauty is much sought by travellers and local people?

"Are good old trees being needlessly cut down to broaden roads and no others planted to replace them?"

We have an idea that most of these questions have a bearing right in our own province, where already we have allowed most of the evidences of pioneer days to disappear altogether, where we have been neglectful of the old cemeteries in which the early settlers in Ontario are sleeping and where we have been careless about how beauty spots drifted from public ownership into private hands.

In the latter regard we have an example at Stoney Lake, where most of the favorite picnic grounds and shore dinner sites that once were popular with summer residents have been allowed to come under private ownership. Fairy Lake, Gilchrist Bay, the land around Eel's Creek, Oak Ridge back of Quarry Island, and scores of other points that once were available to everybody are gone, so far as public use is concerned.

A government with imagination, with the same kind of imagination that has inspired Britishers to launch this body for the preservation of rural England, might have foreseen such a development and laid down a policy that some at least of these beauty spots, once all government-owned, should be preserved for the public.

Why They Happen

Some interesting data on automobile accidents has been provided by a survey made under the auspices of the British ministry of transport during which some 200,000 traffic mishaps within a year were closely investigated and studied.

There is nothing startlingly new in the conclusion arrived at in the report that the majority of road accidents could be avoided with ordinary care and that the human element, rather than the condition of the automobile, the road or the weather, plays the most important part.

The survey, however, is valuable in the evidence it gives of the most prolific causes of accidents and these are listed as follows:

Because drivers turned from one road into another without proper care—12.9 per cent.

Because their cars skidded—10.4 per cent.

Because drivers were in too great a hurry and overtook other cars improperly—10.2 per cent.

Because the attention of the driver was diverted from the road for a vital second—9.8 per cent.

Because drivers misjudged the clearance, distance or speed of another vehicle—9.2 per cent.

Because drivers insisted upon travelling too fast—9.1 per cent.

It will be noticed that in all these categories, responsible for over 60 per cent. of 200,000 accidents, it was the human factor that caused the damage. The driver did the wrong thing, made the wrong move or disregarded the rules of common sense and courtesy and the result was disastrous.

The British investigators did not stop with studying the habits of motorists but took some time to delve into the technique of pedestrians as well and found that carelessness on the part of folk on foot has had a lot to do with a large number of accidents. The most dangerous practice on the part of pedestrians—and it was reflected in the fact that it caused almost 40 per cent. of all the mishaps in which they figured—was the habit of attempting to cross a road or street without first making sure that such a movement could be carried out in safety, while another 13.5 per cent. walked from in front or behind an object which hid the traffic.

NOTE AND COMMENT

A thief in Guelph has stolen a bass drum. Police have good reason to believe he grabbed the percussion instrument and then beat it.

Hamilton has now four women pilots and we suppose there will be men mean enough to claim that flying hazards have correspondingly increased.

It is difficult sometimes to realize that the fellows whose occupation it is to photograph bathing girls and beauty contest winners get paid for doing it.

Night life in Preston has taken on a new thrill. One of the citizens owns a night blooming cereus and it has been doing its stuff.

A Montreal man was fined $1,000 at Hawkesbury for possessing gambling devices. Apparently in that case the court cracked the jack pot.

Cuba is releasing 5,000 prisoners, including a number of murderers, from prison. Cuban police are no doubt looking forward to a period of intense activity.

The Canadian tennis championship wound up in an all-American final, just after another American had carried off the golfing championship. This sort of thing has to stop.

Police in British Columbia had to use tear gas to disperse a crowd of Doukhobors. It is too bad the stuff could not be used on those responsible for bringing them into Canada in the first place.

A C.C.F. candidate has defeated Hon. C. M. Dunn, Saskatchewan's minister of highways, in a by-election. It looks as if the minister was diverted into a political detour.

With one killed and two wounded in Kentucky's primary campaign it is evident that the folk down in the blue grass state take the politics seriously, sah.

A story from Hamilton says that an army cook was convicted there of the theft of bacon. There must be something wrong; no army cook ever stole anything.

"We cannot imagine anything upon which the provincial government could more profitably expend money than in substantially increasing the number of provincial police so the highways could be more efficiently patrolled," says the Telegram. We cannot, either.

ON A VACATION

Wearied by men, and traffic of the town,
Once more I come, as in the years gone by,
Where hills of canyoned green and tawny brown
Slope to a rainless sky.

Drinking anew the ancient psalm-like peace
Of brooklets lapping under shadowy boughs,
I feel like one condemned, who wins release
Out of the prison house.

Here only, where the groves and streams are lords
And ridge and vale make one harmonious whole,
The tired seeker, worn by pummelling hordes,
Can find his own lost soul.

The Geneva Park Rally Is Unique

(By Dr. R. W. Frank)

GENEVA PARK, Lake Couchiching, Aug. 9.—Personal reflections may be taken for what they are worth and this worth is gauged usually by the extent to which any one else already agrees with them. Be that as it may I am going to record some of my own before I forget them.

My first is that so few people know what the "Canadian Institute on Economics and Politics" is, why it is held, and who sponsors it.

Now in case you are one of these, may I in some wise enlighten. It is sponsored by the only organization that could sponsor such an organization, namely the National Council of the Y.M.C.A. You say "Why the only organization?" Because the Y.M.C.A. is a non-partisan international organization broad enough in its outlook and application to include all races, creeds and philosophies. Under its friendly roof Jew can meet with Christian, Roman Catholic with Protestant, French Canadian with Anglo Canadian, to discuss freely their various problems and present frankly their individual or sectional view point. What but a better understanding can come out of such a gathering?

The place of meeting is Geneva Park on the east side of Lake Couchiching, eight miles from Orillia. The park contains 110 acres with individual and collective housing space for hundreds, communal dining room service, and every faculty for sport or study.

Why It's Interested

You may ask "why is the Y.M.C.A. so interested in Economics and Politics." Did you ever read the words on the Y.M.C.A. crest—the triangle? You will find their the words "Spirit," "Body," "Mind." Each is complimentary to the other, and all are needed for a perfect whole, and so the Y.M.C.A. seeks to develop all. "I have come that ye may have life and have it more abundantly." C stands for Christian in Y.M.C.A.; so they are doing all they can to interpret and fulfill the words of Him who spoke them.

Now it follows that if we want life and want it more abundantly we must seek ways and means of getting it. There is an old saying that "God only helps those who help themselves," which is pretty much borne out by experience. There are still some who believe that God will suddenly transform this wicked old world into a place like heaven, but the concensus of modern opinion seems to be that when Jesus taught us to pray "Thy kingdom come, thy will be done on earth as it is in heaven, that He was showing us a way by which we could do it ourselves, through brotherly love, and that He taught us to pray in those words that by its daily repetition we would dedicate ourselves perpetually to bring it about. Have we tried? Is it not time we did?

To Spread Knowledge

Well that is just what this conference is for—to help bring it about, by the dissemination of knowledge, pertaining to our social, political, economic and religious problems and to demonstrate that these controversial problems can be discussed without bitterness, and if we cannot agree as yet, we at least part with a friendly handshake and a new friendship sealed. There is no fiery oratory to inflame a mob for personal gain, no flag waving, no jockeying for position or heckling an envied opponent, but deep thought well expressed by men whose mental capacity is capable of burrowing far below superficial platitudes and exploring fundamentals.

Now one of these fundamentals is that you cannot go very far in the development of a saintly spirit or a contented mind unless the needs of the body are taken care of. In other words what chance has a man or a woman to attain a full life if he or she is denied the right to attain a decent livelihood. They may exist it is true. But is life merely existence? Life lived on a weary treadmill in full view of close but unattainable necessities will break the spirit of the strangest individual or nation until they go down in despair or tear each other in pieces in the ravages of war.

This is an economic matter, a problem on the production and distribution of, wealth, which is not money, but the things we need and want, and which minister to the development of spirit, body and mind.

Can Be Changed

Now our economic system is carried on under rules which we call laws and which are made by men being in organized societies. They can be changed, are changed, and must be further changed if we want to make them function for the good of all. This is one function of our political organization therefore economics and politics are closely allied.

Thus the National Council of the Y.M.C.A. recognize that to a great extent the development of spirit, body and mind, even to the fulfillment of our daily prayers, is bound up in communal or concerted action and co-operation; and in order that this concerted action may take a better course through free discussion and understanding of our problems they conceived this splendid plan.

The general course this year is on problems of Canadian unity divided into 4 sections of which I shall now only mention the first, Dominion provincial relations, under Prof Curtis of Dalhousie University, with Prof. Lower of Wesley College, Winnipeg; Jas. MaGeachy, Winnipeg Free Press; L. M. Gouin, K.C., Montreal; W. A. McKague, consulting economist, Toronto; J. W. Nosworthy, president Teachers' Federation; Roger Brassard, Montreal, and Prof. Underhill, University of Toronto, and M. J. Coldwell, M.P., president of C.C.F.

I shall try to give some impressions of the matter contained in the council course as it develops. Time is at a premium with 40 lectures and as many open discussions I may fade out.

Coatless In Church

I went to church this morning and I consider the most important event of that gathering was the fact that I took off my coat without anyone blinking an eyelash. The reason of course was that I was almost the last to do so. But I could not keep reflecting that if more people were cooler in church less would go to sleep. Incidentally I got a lot of what I have said here from the sermon, so now you know I was awake.

I realize that it is dangerous to express ones thoughts on a sermon but a few stand out clearly. One was in response to the speaker's own question "What contribution can the church make?" The thought immediately prompted the answer "The practical betterment of mankind." In other words if organized Christianity is to continue as the greatest organized force for good it must help man to find man, and that repentence and sacrifice must be interpreted and practised in the twentieth century by admission of mistakes and a willingness to change one's mind. If practical betterment means anything then material betterment is as important as the spiritual for without material well being the spiritual has but little chance to survive. It is therefore important for organized Christianity to assert man's right to economic security and give all the leadership within its power to achieve that end.

It is too much to expect the deep channels of habit and thought to suddenly change their course but youth must take command and give leadership wherever present leadership fails to function.

We are living in the 20th century, we must think in 20th century thought. Reality must be faced. We must be realists.

• How To Think Straight

(From the Brantford Expositor)

WHEN Dale Carnegie offered to the world his simplified "success" formula under the comprehensive title "How to Win Friends and Influence People," he struck a publishers' gold mine and thereby started something. Without commenting on the merits, or supposed merits, of this magnum opus, the fact that it "went over" with the reading public, or a large section thereof, has given rise to a whole deluge of self-improvement tomes of one sort or another. Also, it seems various organizations, having roughly the same objective, have grown up in the land. Newest, on the last available count, is the National Institute for Straight Thinking, typically U.S. improvement unit, headed by William J. Reilly.

Recently President Reilly, after due research, gave a 7 a.m. breakfast in a Manhattan hotel to 60 pupils anxious to learn how to think straight. At this function he revealed his formula thus: (1) Separate facts from opinions and look at the facts from the standpoint of who, what, when and where. (2) Arrive at an intelligent definition of the real problem and do not jump from an opinion to a conclusion without reasoning. (3) Consider carefully all possible solutions of the problem. (4) Accept the solution which has the largest number of advantages and the fewest disadvantages.

To the uninstructed and uninitiated, to those of us not captivated by the magnetic personality of the formulator, this looks very much like old stuff. Indeed, instead of being a new "Open Sesame" to mental clarity it seems to be nothing but a simple restatement of the most ancient and elementary rules of logic platitudinously and tritely phrased.

Of course it may be that this generation has never heard of the old rules; possibly due to the modern rush and scurry it has never had time to look them up. In which case President Reilly's neat summary may save a good deal of reading and much thinking.

But a skeptical outsider may be forgiven for suggesting that there seems to be something slightly amiss when it is considered that the enthusiastic self-improvers who attended the Straight Thinking breakfast of grapefruit, cereal, ham and eggs and coffee were assessed $10 each. But then, perhaps they paid before they absorbed President Reilly's illuminating formula.

• More Publicity Is Needed

(From the Chatham News)

WIDER ADVERTISING of Canada's entrancing beauty spots was urged recently. More money could well be invested to aid in financing a great publicity campaign to attract more visitors to this country.

Canada is not excelled for scenic grandeur and has plenty of attractions to offer to those seeking a holiday or rest from the worries and cares of business. In addition to the hundreds of places of historic interest which are well worth visiting, as a recreation centre and sportsman's paradise the Dominion is unsurpassed.

Not only are there innumerable attractions in summer, including the finest fishing and hunting on the continent, but Canada is rapidly coming to the fore as a winter sports centre.

National parks, bird and game sanctuaries are dotted over a wide stretch of country from coast to coast. Its many other unique and wonderful resources that appeal to the tourist who is looking for something just a little different from the average run of attractions, are easily and quickly reached over a fine system of permanent highways or through the facilities provided by up-to-the-minute train, bus and boat services.

In prosperous days, when the tourist traffic was at its height, the Dominion benefitted to the extent of nearly $300,000,000 in a single year. For some years the tourist business was on the wane, but it is steadily improving, and there would appear to be no good reason—now that economic conditions in the United States and other countries from which we draw vacationists are on the mend—why a revival of this profitable business could not be assured by an energetic and well-planned campaign of publicity. An increased government appropriation for publicity purposes would help materially in this objective.

The tourist traffic is capable of enormous expansion. Canada's unrivalled attractions, so wide and varied in character, are an asset which we are just beginning to appreciate. To cash in on them to the fullest extent we must do more along the line of advertising and letting the world know what we have to offer.

• Fish Bite Best When Hungry

(From the Chicago News)

BIRDS LIVE at fever temperature. Their hearts throb fast. They burn energy every second, and, to restore it, eat all the time. But fish are different. Their blood is cold. Their digestion is slow. Lying torpid, they can go without food for long periods.

Every fisherman has his own theories as to why fish sometimes bite and sometimes don't, but who really knows? Peer into some spring-fed pond where trout thrive, or into some small clear bass lake. There they lie fanning, a whole school of the beauties, in assorted sizes, all facing the same way. Suddenly, for no apparent reason, they dart off in a body, close up, turn, fan a moment, then cruise back. Now drop a line in. Perhaps there will be a dash for the bait; perhaps not. Now they are biting; now they have stopped biting. Why? On what principle?

Of course, method and bait should be adapted to the time, the place and the fish. But which time is best? Is it dawn, or dusk? And have not fine catches been made at noon? Or even at midnight? Trolling is good, but so are bobbing and casting. If the same fish will bite both, which is preferable—live bait, or artificial? If artificial should it be a plug, or a fly? Fish move about. Now they are in shallow water, now in deep. Why? How does heat affect them? Or a sudden change? Or rain? Or a thunderstorm? Why is an east wind or a north wind bad—if it is bad? And if bars, points, weed beds, steep shadowy banks and the vicinity of logs and snags are the places most frequented by fish, why are good catches sometimes made in open water?

There are perfect fishing days on which nothing is caught, and bad days which turn out not so badly. On one such day we fished a fine bass lake. For several hours we dropped our fly behind logs and among lily pads along every nook of shore, without raising a fingerling. Then, about noon, we noticed a swirl and splash under a tree, twice repeated. A bass was feeding. At our second cast to the spot, a handsome three-pounder smashed into the fly. Four fish was our string that day, all big ones. Not one was caught by chance. Each one we had seen feeding before we went for it, and each one we saw, we caught. The fish were not biting, but these four were biting. So when do fish bite? Perhaps it is simply when they happen to be hungry.

CAR IS LIKE A CAT.

(Oshawa Times)

IT IS QUIET except for a slow and pleasing purr. Its padded tires are like padded feet. It has powerful eyes that shine at night. And when it is allowed to run wild, it gives an awful screech at the moment before it does its victim to death.

At 25 miles an hour, it is like a pussy-cat. It may scratch you up in an accident, but it isn't likely to kill you. Few fatal accidents occur at low speeds.

At 50 miles an hour, it is not twice but four times as powerful. Like a bobcat, it is quite able to inflict great damage.

At 75 miles an hour, it is not three but NINE times as powerful as at 25. Nine times as hard to stop — nine times as hard to turn—nine times as deadly.

A Bible Message For Today . . . .

I WILL mention the lovingkindnesses of the Lord, and the praises of the Lord, according to all that the Lord hath bestowed on us, and the great goodness toward the house of Israel, which he hath bestowed on them according to his mercies, and according to the multitude of his lovingkindnesses. For he said, Surely they are my people, children that will not lie: so he was their Saviour. In all their affliction he was afflicted, and the angel of his presence saved them: in his love and in his pity he redeemed them: and he bare them, and carried them all the days of old.—Isa. lxiii, 7-9.

Hear the word of the Lord, O ye nations, and declare it in the isles afar off, and say, He that scattered Israel will gather him, and keep him, as a shepherd doth his flock. For the Lord hath redeemed Jacob, and ransomed him from the hand of him that was stronger than he. Therefore they shall come and sing in the height of Zion, and shall flow together to the goodness of the Lord, for wheat, and for wine, and for oil, and for the young of the flock and of the herd: and their soul shall be as a watered garden; and they shall not sorrow any more at all.—Jer. xxxi, 10-12.

Incline your ear, and come unto me: hear, and your soul shall live; and I will make an everlasting covenant with you, even the sure mercies of David....For ye shall go out with joy, and be led forth with peace: the mountains and the hills shall break forth before you into singing, and all the trees of the field shall clap their hands.—Isa. lv, 3, 12.

O give thanks unto the Lord; for he is good: for his mercy endureth for ever....To him which divided the Red Sea into parts: for his mercy endureth for ever: and made Israel to pass through the midst of it: for his mercy endureth for ever....To him which led his people through the wilderness: for his mercy endureth for ever.Ps. cxxxvi, 1, 13, 14, 16.

A Bit of Nonsense

TOLD OFF

A small man sitting in the corner of a train glared at a very stout woman who occupied most of the seat.

"It's a pity they don't charge passengers according to their size," he remarked.

"If they did," retorted the stout lady, "they wouldn't stop to pick you up."

TWO WORLDS

BY MAUD McCURDY WELCH

READ THIS FIRST:

Determined to show Dr. Julian Paige, the man she is in love with that she can make her own way in the world, Noel Shayne, wealthy society girl, burns her bridges behind her, moves to a rooming house, and, for lack of anything better obtains a job as a taxi dancer which she feels will be only temporary. he is living with a girl named Laurie Evans whom she met in the park. Noel Feels she has dangerous rival in Ruth Chester, Julian's pretty nurse, who has been antagonistic. Noel is alarmed when one of the men with whom she dances at the Peacock seems to recognize her and almost discloses her identity to Nick Luigi, the proprietor. Julian calls Noel to take her to dinner before leaving town on a case. She evades him when he asks where she is working. That night a man follows her home from the dance hall. Laurie obtains a job as cashier at the restaurant which Julian usually patronizes. She tells Noel of seeing the young doctor there at noon though Ruth Chester had told Noel he had not returned from his trip.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY:

CHAPTER 11

NOEL HADN'T believed that Ruth Chester would stoop to such infamy as that of lying. It was plain enough that she was trying her best to keep Noel and Julian apart when she had told her over the phone that Doctor Paige was still in New Orleans. But she was not going to succeed entirely, Noel told herself with a smile.

That morning when Laurie started to work, she had asked Noel to meet her at the De Luxe for dinner. But Laurie had called it supper. All employees of the De Luxe, Laurie told her, were entitled to a discount from the price of their meals. And now that she could begin at last to pay Noel back for some of the things she had done for her, Laurie was anxious to start.

"You don't owe me a thing," Noel told her, but she was glad to have such a good excuse to come to the De Luxe. She had been debating over and over in her mind whether or not she should go there tonight. Julian hadn't even called her by phone. Perhaps he had even forgotten his feeling for improvement ten his feeling of responsibility toward her.

Six o'clock found Noel walking to the De Luxe. Julian was there. He rose the minute he saw Noel come into the cafe, dressed in her suit, which she had carefully pressed, and the clean linen blouse which she had washed and ironed all under Laurie's careful directions. She was wearing the little "beanie over the back of her loose golden curls, and she had never looked more irresistible.

But of course Noel did not realize that. All she really thought of was that Julian was here, looking so tall and rugged and brown, and yet there was a tired look in his fine dark eyes. Seeing him again after his absence was almost unbearably sweet.

Noel explained to Laurie and moved toward him with an eager little rush. He held her chair for her while she seated herself and spread her paper napkin, which immediately floated down to the floor. Julian laughingly handed her another.

She was conscious of his smiling happy gaze and was afraid her own delight at seeing him was shining through her eyes. At last she managed to say, casually, "You look tired, but happy."

"My patient is on the way to recovery. It was a serious major operation, but the little chap is a good fighter, and I know now that he'll pull through." There was a devout quality in his voice.

Noel was beginning to realize just what his work meant to him. It was like a religion—a consecration. She could see how it could absorb him so completely that there was hardly room for anything else in his life. Not even love, perhaps.

"You're thinner," he said, "and also you were quite pale when you first came in. You have a little more color now."

"Have I?" she parried. "That's the doctor in you, always observing, analyzing, diagnosing. The only trouble with me is that I'm hungry, which seems to be a more or less chronic state."

He ordered steak, potatoes, a green vegetable and pear salad. "Too bad we can't have broiled squabs, avocados—" he half apologized.

"Julian," Noel said with sudden earnestness, "if you only had half an idea how very much I like steak and potatoes."

"Still a novelty, what?" he smiled. Then she realized that he was regarding her steadily. "You seem to be changed in some indefinable way," he said. "I can't quite put my finger on it, but it's there."

"I hope it's for the better. According to your opinion, there's quite a lot of room for improvement."

"Why remind me of that?" he smiled again. This time she saw he was looking at her hands, which certainly showed the need of care.

"Well, of course I need a manicure," she began uncertainly.

He shook his head. "I'm afraid you're taking this experiment entirely to seriously. I'm even still hoping that you'll call it off."

"The answer is still no. You see, I'm—having fun."

"You're absolutely unpredictable. Having fun being a sort of nurse and governess combined? Do you actually expect me to believe that?"

Noel started. She had almost forgotten that Julian believed her to be employed out at the Garwoods. To cover her confusion she took up her coffee cup.

"Hadn't you better give me your address?" Julian persisted.

At that Noel almost swallowed half a pear from her salad. She choked a little and this gave her time to think up an answer. "You're not thinking of calling?" she countered at last.

"You have Sundays off?" he asked.

She was a little more flustered at that and answered without necessary caution. "Oh, Sunday—Sunday evenings, of course. That is—at least every other Sunday."

"No wonder you're looking pale," Julian said, his eyes upon her with a thoughtful frown. "Is tomorrow your day?"

She nodded.

"Well, then, as your doctor," Julian began with his whimsical smile, "I prescribe a day in the country. I'll call for you in my car of sorts—it's a Ford, in case you should be interested, and I'll have Cointepas here fix us up a lunch."

Noel tried hard to keep her eyes steady and her voice as well, when she said, "Now, really, you mustn't take your responsibility toward me too seriously. If you'd prefer taking Miss Chester out—" in spite of her determination to be nonchalant, Noel's voice broke.

"Listen, you brat," Julian said reaching over and giving her ear the tiniest tweeak. "I'm not thinking of my responsibility toward you at all, do you hear?"

Then he said with his usual persistence, "What is your address? Can you be ready at 10 o'clock or 10.30?"

"I—that is, suppose I meet you here," Noel suggested. "You see, the cashier is a good friend of mine, and it will be very convenient to meet you here." It was a lame excuse she knew.

Julian smiled and said that would be all right They were finished now and walked together to the register, where Noe lintroduced Julian to Laurie.

Laurie held out her hand. "I'm glad to meet you, Dr. Paige. I've heard lots about you."

"Have you really?" Julian queried. "I hope most of it was something nice."

"It certainly was," Laurie returned.

"You wouldn't flatter me, would you?" Julian laughed.

"Sure I wouldn't. You see, Noel and I are roommates."

"Is that so?" Julian exclaimed. "In that case," he went on with a teasing look at Noel, "would you mind telling where you live?"

But Laurie had to wait on some of the cash customers, so Noel and Julian went on out, both of them laughing.

When they had gained the street, Julian said. "That's a nice little girl, Noel. I like her."

"Do you always size people up as accurately as that?"

"Usually," he answered, looking down at her smilingly.

"You're right in this case, Laurie is a darling. But there are times when she has a sad expression on her face, and it worries me. She hasn't any relatives. And I'm sure she's unhappy for some reason"

"There are many girls in the world like Laurie without relatives or money. Thrown absolutely on their own resources. But I believe our little Laurie can look after herself," Julian comforted.

Then he was looking down at Noel again with his whimsical smile. "Wouldn't you be interested in knowing of whom I was thinking when I planned our little holiday? I told you I was not thinking of you." "But you were just the same," Noel contradicted. "You were prescribing for me. It's only the doctor in you, after all."

"And that's where you are wrong," motive is a purely selfish one. I'm Julian began with emphasis. "My prescribing for myself."

Lad Lost Five Days In Bush Is Returned Unharmed

Vanishing in the north country wilderness near Sturgeon Falls, Ontario, five-year-old Fernand Tessier was found after a five-day search, by George Morrison, who sighted a colored sweater and started after it. The clothing proved to be the lost child who was so frightened that Morrison had to chase him for some distance before he could pick the boy up. Returned to his mother and father, Fernand, uninjured save for scratches received during his long ramble in the wilds, had one eager first question which was "I'm hungry, mummy. Did you bake a cake?" The wandering youth is shown, RIGHT, with his parents shortly after his return home, while LEFT, Fernard's brother, Raymond, poses with the family dog, Pousset, which had originally gone with Fernand on the jaunt, but returned home alone. Fernand reported to his parents that he had kept himself alive with wild berries and swamp water.

Goodnight Story

By MAX TRELL

OUT IN the garden near the stone wall Father had built a birdhouse. "It's for the swallows he told the children. It stood on a high pole, and had a little door for the swallows to go in and out of, and its roof was slanted just like a regular roof.

The children called it the swallow house. But none of the swallows came to live in it.

"They'll come after a while," Father said.

Then one day little Frank said: "I know why they don't come to live in the house."

"There isn't any furniture."

"Why not?" his sister, Dinah, asked.

"Because they don't know it's for them to live in. We ought to put up a little sign."

So they got up a little sign. It read:

TO RENT

A nice, roomy swallow house.

Just right for a pair of swallows to raise a family in.

"That will bring them," Frank said. "Just you wait and see." But though they waited quite a few days longer, no swallows moved in.

Decide to Help

Now all this time, Knarf and Hanid, who were the shadows of the two children, waited for the swallows to come, too. Finally, very early one morning, before the children had got out of bed, the two shadows slipped out into the garden. They made themselves small (shadows can make themselves any size they please, slid up the pole and went through the open door of the swallow house.

"No wonder none of the swallows wants to live here," Knarf said, "There isn't any furniture."

Hanid shook her head. "Swallows don't need furniture."

"It must be something else, then. I'm just going to sit down here and think. I can generally think of everything if I just wait long enough."

So he sat down in the doorway of the house with his legs swinging down, and with the sign hanging right over his head.

40 Doukhobors Left Homeless

NELSON, B.C., Aug. 9.—(CP) — Forty Doukhobor residents were homeless today after a fire started by a week-end electrical storm destroyed all but one house in their community across the Columbis River from Glade, 15 miles southwest of here.

Eleven cottages and a large frame house were destroyed Sunday night, British Columbia Forestry Branch officials reported. A second large house was saved. The fire started when a bolt of lightning struck a hay barn in the rear of one of the large dwellings.

Fanned by a brisk wind the flames quickly enveloped the house and spread to the group of cottages. A forestry pump and crew was rushed to the scene but succeeded in saving only the second large building.

Millions Spent On Paved Roads But Nothing For Footpaths For Pedestrians Cadi Declares

James J. Brady Is Found Not Guilty Of Reckless Driving

"Millions are spent on paved roads for motorists, but nothing is provided in suburban and country districts for foothpaths for pedestrians, and the result is that pedestrians will walk where the walking is best whether on the pavement or the shoulder of the road," Magistrate Gee of Lindsay commented in police court here Monday afternoon as he found James J. Brady not guilty of reckless driving in a traffic accident May 22 on the Peterborough-Port Hope highway near the fox farm corner.

In discharging Mr. Brady, His Worship said: "I say to you and to all young men of your age, instead of thinking of the word pay more attention to the word heed, and there will not be so many accidents. The highways are not built for speeding, but as a means of communication. I hope you will never be in any more accidents."

Magistrate Gee said if there was any question of a claim by Mrs. Edith Stewart for injuries suffered in the accident it was a matter for the civil courts. A secondary charge of operating a motor car with defective brakes was also dismissed.

T. J. Carley, K.C., counsel for Mr. Brady, argued that the driver of another car was largely to blame for the mishap.

According to the evidence Brady was returning from Bewdley. Mrs. Stewart left her home near the top of the water trough hill to call at her son's home a short distance westerly on the highway. She was walking on the south or left hand side of the highway. Brady's car, she said, began to zig-zag toward the centre of the road and back to the side, struck a sign post on the south side, then rushed along and struck her throwing her into the ditch on the south side and causing serious injuries from which she has not yet recovered. She said she was on the shoulder about two feet from the paved edge when she was hit.

Mr. Brady declared that as he approached Mrs. Stewart he saw three cars going westerly, the first one presumably driven by Robert Calder of Toronto. As they drew near Mrs. Stewart, who, he said, was walking on the pavement and about two feet from the edge, the second of the westbound cars drew out as if to pass her. He had to decide in a flash whether to try to pass Mrs. Stewart on her right and on the pavement, between her and the car that seemed to be going to pass Mr. Calder's car, or swing out onto the shoulder. As he made that move, he added, Mrs. Stewart stepped out onto the grass and was struck by Brady's car.

F. D. Kerr, K.C., for the Crown observed that Mrs. Stewart was bound to be hit no matter which way she moved. It seemed extraordinary, he added, if a pedestrian would have to move toward the centre of the paved highway to escape being run down by motor traffic.

"Mr. Brady was faced with as great an emergency as Mrs. Stewart was," Mr. Carley contended. "His position should be looked at in the same light as hers. The emergency was created by the man going west who attempted to pass the Calder car. Mr. Brady had a right to expect that this man would draw back and fall into the line of traffic on the north side of the highway.

Tested Brady's Car

The first witness Monday afternoon was Bert Cribbis, service manager for J. J. Duffus Company. He said he tested the Brady car. At 20 miles per hour the brakes stopped it in 32 feet, and at 35 miles per hour in 84 feet, and at 20 miles the emergency brake stopped the car at 39 feet. Mr. Cribbis said the brakes were not in good order because the right rear brake took a stronger grip than the left. The braking power was uneven. He also said a car with perfect brakes would stop in 16 feet at a speed of 20 miles an hour.

Mr. Carley—"If the car's brakes would hold at 20 miles per hour and also at 35, it is probable that it would hold at intervening speed."

"Yes. The ratio of stopping distance increases proportionately with your speed."

Magistrate Gee—"Was there any evidence of damage to the car when you tested it?"—"No."

Mr. Cribbis said there was a slight pull to the right when he applied the foot brake, but it was not enough "to throw me off my course."

Describes Accident

Mr. Brady, examined by Mr. Carley, said that as he drove over the little hill approaching the fox farm corner and travelling easterly he saw three cars approaching him. Possibly Robert Calder's car going west might have been the first one.

"I also saw a woman at one side of the highway walking a little on the pavement. There was also a car ahead of me going east. I noticed this car swerve over the centre line of the road. When it came my turn to pass the woman I saw one of the three cars seemed about to pass the first one going in the same direction to the west. I noticed it pull toward the centre. I put on my brakes. I didn't know whether I could get through between the car and the woman. I didn't know whether to try to pass her. I pulled to the south side to stop and hit the road sign post."

From that mishap the Brady car went on and struck Mrs. Stewart. "I thought I was doing my best," Mr. Brady said he was driving at a speed of 30 to 35 miles per hour.

Explaining the "zig-zag" course, he said it must have been when in doubt about pulling up.

To Mr. Kerr he said that when he turned out from the pavement onto the grass he thought the woman was "disturbed" and excited. Mr. Brady suggested that he would not have struck Mrs. Stewart if she had not jumped back on to the grass of the shoulder.

"She ran in front of the car," he said. The car wouldn't stop in the grass, he explained, because the grass was wet and the tires seemed to slide along.

Mr. Kerr—"Do you say Mr. Calder was wrong in his evidence no car passed him in either direction?"

"Yes. Because there was a car ahead of me going east."

Mr. Brady said he and his companions were returning from Bewdley where they had been fishing from about noon, and there had been no liquor of any kind. He declared to Mr. Kerr he had done his best to avoid hitting Mrs. Stewart.

Mr. Kerr—"Short of stopping."

Fred White

Mr. Kerr suggested to Fred White, next witness, that the Brady car, of which he was an occupant, would have hit Mrs. Stewart "in any event."

"No. I think we would have missed her."

Mr. Kerr—"You say Mrs. Stewart was about two feet from the south side of the pavement, and the car you were in was about two feet on the grass, and your car is about six feet wide. I ask you how could she have saved herself."

Mr. White was sitting on the front seat with Mr. Brady.

Mr. Calder, recalled by Mr. Kerr, said that when he stopped his car he saw two others parked near him, evidently bound westerly as he was.

As to whether he had seen any other car than Brady's going east when the accident occurred Mr. Calder said there was only one car, Mr. Brady's, approaching Mrs. Stewart from the west as Mr. Calder drew near her from the east.

dental because the gas was missing and it had rained heavily during the night.

Reuben Winter, Chandos township farmer, told the court he noticed the fire as he drove past at 6.30 Sunday morning en route to Frankford with his family. He stated he drove by the fire to the lumber camp and awakened Norris Doxsee, who in turn notified the owner. At that time, according to Winter's testimony, the entire mill was ablaze.

Elmer Aldred was the next witness and testified at considerable length. He said he was general manager acting for the Purdy Lumber Co. Limited, owners of the land on which several mills were sawing lumber in the Loon Lake district.

"What do you think was the cause of the fire?" Inspector Stringer asked.

"I believe the fire was deliberately set. The chances are very slim that it was an accident."

"Why should anyone want to burn the mill", was the next question.

An Outsider.

"Possibly because Biersworth was an outsider and had taken a contract outside of the Bancroft district", answered Aldred.

Asked if there had been any other trouble during sawing operations, Aldred said that just before the ice broke up this Spring some person had taken a boom chain which held the timbers together around logs piled on the ice and tossed the chain into the woods on the edge of the lake. The chain was found later by one of the lumberjacks, he said and when the ice broke the logs scattered all over the lake and many were lost. "We had our suspicions as to who was to blame and we heard of threats which had been made", he declared. He added this incident had been reported to the Provincial police and an investigation made without results.

At another Loon Lake sawmill engines were smashed during the Winter, Aldred told the court. "The eccentrics had been tightened so that when the engines started up the valves seized, and a belt had been slashed with an axe".

"Did you report this to the police", was a question asked

Put On Night Watchman

"No, I put a night watch on duty. He is still o nthe same job," reported Aldred.

"What were the nature of the threats which had came to you", queried Inspector Stringer.

"I have it on good authority that a man had threatened to open the booms and set the cut of logs adrift. He was one who was dissatisfied with settlement of wages".

Aldred wrote the name of his informant on a slip of paper and handed it to Inspector Stringer. The name was not divulged.

Roy Woodley of Coe Hill called as a witness explained that he and James Danford, a book-keeper for C. S. Rollins of Coe Hill saw the fire at 5 o'clock Sunday morning as they passed on the way to Lakeview Hotel at Loon Lake. It was raining at the time he said and there was no wind. Both men walked to the fire and pulled a large tool box away from the flames. Woodley stated he had taken an emery wheel from its frame and brought it away with him so that it would not be stolen. He told his companion to notify the owner that the wheel was at his home whenever he wanted it. Danford corroborated this evidence.

Several other witnesses were called but none of them gave any evidence which was of any particular value. These witnesses were Walter Purdy, Peterborough; Aaron Post, Glenalda; Neva McCauley, Glenalda; Clarence Post, Glenalda; Norman Gilroy, Coe Hill; Mrs. Christina Liscom, and her husband Theodore Liscom, Owenbrook; David McDonald and his son David McDonald, Jr., Norris Doxsee, Glenalda; Miss Verna Post, Glenalda.

David McDonald one of the last witnesses stated he believed the fire might easily have been caused by a cigarette butt thrown in the sawdust. He said he was employed as night watch by Mr. Aldred at one of the mills, and that on different occasions he had seen some of Biersworths men smoking cigarettes while they operated the sawmill.

The enquiry was then closed by Inspector Stringer who stated any report on the findings would be made direct to the Ontario Fire Marshall.

Chinese Junks Japs War Targets

A few hours before this photo was taken, the Chinese junkman and his brother were peacefully pursuing their way down the winding Han River, not far from Hankow, China. Suddenly a Japanese bombing squadron sailed overhead and rained explosives on the defenceless junk fleet believing—according to an army communique—that they carried arms and ammunition. The brother now lies seriously wounded in the bottom of the sampan, bomb fragments in his chest, while his civilian relative frantically seeks the safety of the shore. And the Japanese army is no nearer Hankow.

Boston Turns Out To Hail Corrigan

BOSTON, Aug. 9 (AP).—His Irish eyes smiling, Douglas Corrigan today dropped in on the city he visited seven years ago "flat broke"—this time to receive the acclaim of thousands for the courage that took him across the Atlantic on a "wrong way" flight.

From New York, where he won the hearts of Gothamites, he came here aboard a big airliner, a far cry from the ancient $900 "crate" in which he winged his way to Ireland, the land of his forefathers, "by mistake."

The "luck of the Irish" brought Boston a perfect day for the seldom—if ever—equalled reception for the daring young man on the flying machine.

"This was my second trip over Boston airport," Corrigan told the crowd which welcomed him.

"Only the first time," he chuckled. "I thought it was Baltimore. I realize now, of course, that it was Boston."

Soo Bush Swept By 10 New Fires

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Aug. 9.—Ten new bush fires were reported in the Sault area yesterday. One is west of Catfish Lake in the Michipicoten mining district and the other is near Pointe Aux Pins, summer resort on the St. Mary's River near the Sault.

Twenty men are fighting the Pointe Aux Pins fire, but little is know here yet of the Catfish Lake blaze which was reported late this afternoon. Fire fighting crews are now on the way to the scene.

All the remaining fires in the district, except that at Rouelle Lake, in Township 4 C, are under control. The Rouelle Lake fire, which has burned 400 to 500 acres, is fairly well in hand, but a strong wind might stir it up again and cause it to spread. It is being fought by a staff of seventy-five men with fire pumps.

Although practically all fires were under control, Forestry Branch men remained on the alert with the fire hazard at its highest point this year.

W. E. Matthews Aged 76 Years Dies In Toronto

TORONTO, Aug. — William E. Matthews, C.B.E., brother of Hon. Albert Matthews Lieutenant-Governor of Ontario, Hon. R. C. Matthews and F. Matthews, died yesterday in Montreal at the age of 76.

Born and educated in Lindsay, he was the eldest son of George and Ann Matthews. He married Fanny Ward of England in 1889. Of three children, a son and daughter survive him. The only other son, Lieut. W. Matthews, was killed in action in France.

Chairman of the Federal District Commission for six years, Mr. Matthews was a member for sixteen years. At his retirement from the Commission in 1935, Prime Minister Mackenzie King paid tribute to his fine work as chairman.

He is a member of the Masonic Order, member of the Rideau Club, Ottawa, and a member of the Royal Ottawa Golf Club.

At his death he was retired, but before that was vice-president of George Matthews Company, of Peterborough, Ottawa and Brantford; president of Matthews-Blackwell Company, Toronto, Montreal, Peterborough, Brantford and Winnipeg, and was also connected with Canada Packers.

A son, S. C. Matthews, lives in Westmount, and his daughter, Mrs. R. Murphy, lives in Ottawa.

Painters Formed Unofficial Insecticide Squad

The painters who are redeeming the old city hall building from the drab and faded effects of the years of looking up and down Water Street didn't expect when they'l began the job that they were about to form an unofficial insecticide squad. But, that is how it turned out when the brushes had done their best in giving the exterior a gay and somewhat festive air as stimulating as a new "facial," and the men went indoors. When they invaded the cells behind the barred partitions they found things, active little brown shaded fellows that are said to be of nocturnal habits, at least when opportunity beckons, but by day furtively hidden in crevices and joints and other hideaways.

Seemingly the painters put a little extra enthusiasm into the use of their blow torches when it became evident that to make a thorough job of painting they had to exterminate the—well, no use falling back on euphemistic terms—bed bugs and various other kinds of vermin that had to be put out of the way. So they turned on the heat, first spreading the floor with papers, and it is rumored that they even called in Vincent Eastwood, chairman of the City Trust Commission, to show him the heap of casualties.

However, that is only incidental to the fact that the city hall is being thoroughly painted inside and out, and the Commission is also painting all the buildings on the Hilliard Farm, occupied by seven tenants.

EXHIBITION COMES FIRST.

Peterborough County has been invited to send representatives to a forestry meeting at the York Township reforestation area on Wednesday, August 17, but as that is the opening day of the Peterborough Exhibition it is unlikely that a deputation will attend from here, Reeve Anderson told the Examiner today.

CORN FIELDS RECOVER.

With a few exceptions here and there the corn crop in the district has recovered from its recent levelling by the severe rain and wind storms of ten days ago, F. C. Paterson told The Examiner to-day. Many of the fields are standing as straight as ever with strong growth and all the present assurance of exceeding the average harvest.

MANY ENTRIES FOR EX.

Entries for the Peterborough Exhibition next week, are pouring into the Department of Agriculture, according to Frank Paterson, local representative. He is looking for more entries than last year in the Junior division of the show, finds that girls outnumber boys this year. One new competition, an inter-club demonstration with few restrictions governing choice of subject, will attract wide interest, he believes.

County's Check Is Awaited By Government

Peterborough county's reforestation project has not taken on any more substance than when the purchase of the broad acres in Methuen and Belmont townships was authorized by the county council during its June sessions.

According to Reeve W. A. Anderson of Otonabee, chairman of the reforestation committee, there is still the possibility that the deal with the Department of Lands and Forests may fall through. That remark was made off the record, but as a matter of fact no money has been paid to the Department, and a letter was recently received by Miss Jennie Batten, county cleark and treasurer, embodying a query as to when the county's check was to be forwarded.

In the meantime Reeve Anderson has been enquiring about the boundaries of the property for the purpose of defining the exact extent and limits of the woodland the county is prepared to buy. The Department apparently has no helpful information, and a survey might incur an expenditure up to $1,000. At any rate the responsibility of determining the mates and bounds seems to be pointing to the county, and for that reason the project may not be carried any further toward final purchase. Mr. Anderson said he had interviewed John F. Pierce as to whether he had any notes relating to old surveys, but there is little or nothing in the records that would be of assistance to the reforestation committee.

So there the whole deal is suspended, Reeve Anderson no doubt expressing the attitude of county that it cannot buy land that is not clearly marked out. "We have to know definitely what we are buying, and how are we going to find out, that is the problem," he remarked.

Millbrook Picnic Splendid Success

Given 7 Days Drunk Driving

George Perrin was convicted by Magistrate O. A. Langley this morning of the charge of being drunk in charge of an automobile, and was sentenced to seven days in jail.

His Worship said that although Mr. Perrin had been ably defended, and a strong plea presente that he be given the benefit of any element of doubt in the case, "after full consideration of the evidence I do not feel that there was ground for reasonable doubt." Taking into consideration the fact that the offence as charged was not a flagrant one, His Wohrship said he decided that the minimum penalty of seven days in jail would suffice. He also pointed out that no evidence was given as to the ownership of the automobile Mr. Perrin was driving on the South Beach road on the night of June 10, and if it was registered in his name it should be impounded for three months. It is understood that the car has been kept out of use since the night it was intercepted by Traffic Officer Broughton.

Hired Man Held On Theft Charges

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 9.—Arrested on charges of theft Ambrose Chard 24, will appear in police court in Cobourg to-day (Tuesday). Chard, a married man, has been working at Cole's Point since last May and is alleged to have stolen a number of articles from the summer resort, including blankets, quilts and other items totalling in value $48.00. He left his employer on July 8 and was arrested by provincial police while picking huskleberries at Twin Lakes.

Dominion's Fighting Forces Gather For War Games

The greatest peace-time troop concentration in Canadian history will be made at Camp Borden, near Barrie, Ont., when units from all parts of Canada gather for manoeuvres under the command of Brig.-Gen. W. P. H. Elkins. The war games will commence August 29, and already units from both eastern and western Canada are under canvas. At TOP, some of the early comers are seen getting settled for their stay in camp. BELOW, members of a tank corps are getting their steel steeds into shape for the review. The mechanization of the Dominion's fighting forces is expected to feature the mock warfare.

Where Is Peterborough? Tourist Asks George Street Restaurant Proprietor

"WHERE is Peterborough?" an American tourist, standing on George street in the heart of the city asked Ross Payne a few days ago.

Ross Payne believes the city could do a better job of advertising Peterborough. He points out that on only one highway leading to the city is there a sign to tell visitors to this area what the name of the city is.

Several customers have come into his George street shop and asked what city they were in, saying they had noticed no signs on entering. Traffic has been exceptionally heavy this season over highway 7 and there are no signs to tell motorists they are coming to Peterborough, or citing its attractions.

The average tourist visiting Peterborough for the first time, seeing a judicially placed sign telling him that here is the world's largest lift lock, would find his curiosity aroused sufficiently to spend a little time in Peterborough, Mr. Payne believed. A few months ago a newsreel man was taking pictures of Chemong's famed Floating Bridge when two American tourists, curious to know what he was photographing, stopped their car. They were amazed at the sight of the bridge, of which they had never heard of before. There were no signs in the vicinity to tell them about it.

Signs at each of the city's entrances, telling visitors all about the attractions of this area, would be of great benefit to all business men of the city, Mr. Payne believed.

Oshawa Follows Toronto's Lead Opens Playgrounds On Sunday

OSHAWA, Aug. 9.—Oshawa City Council at a special meeting Monday night decided to follow the example set by Toronto and allow playgrounds and swimming pools for children to be open in the future on Sundays.

Alderman William Walker brought the issue before Council when he pointed out the recent action taken in Toronto and the need for the same in Oshawa, where playgrounds were closed, together with supervised swimming pools, inflicting a hardship on children.

"It's alright for you or me to play golf or tennis on the Sabbath," he declared, "and it should be alright for little children to enjoy the privileges of the playgrounds and swimming pools despite what the psalm singers say." Alderman Walker's subsequent motion carried by a large majority.

Council also decided to recommend to the Board of Education that public school playground facilities be open to the children all the year round. At present they are closed and are opened only during certain hours when schools are open.

The press were requested to leave the meeting at the request of Mayor A. McLesse when a tentative report of the auditors, who are making a special audit of the city's books as a result of recent disclosures, was read. No indication of the report was given except that on several occasions Alderman Walker, when speaking on other matters, declared: "It all boils down to what I've been saying, that Oshawa is a chiseler's paradise."

SCOTTSBLUFF, Neb., Aug. 9 — (AP).—Bud McKinney, golf pro here, saw two fellows poking a flashlight around the course at night. It was H. D. Wells and Guy Hayes trying to find the green of the second extra hole on their tied match. McKinney told them to postpone the finish until daylight.

1,000 Windows Broken As Hail Storm Hits Prairie Town

HAIL struck this southwestern Manitoba town with devastating fury yesterday. More than 1,000 windows were smashed, roofs were slashed, gardens destroyed and crops ruined. Damage was estimated at $3,000.

At Boissevain, west of here, five horses were reported killed on the farm of Glen Martin, when lightning struck. At Portage La Prairie, in Central Manitoba, two farmers suffered 75 per cent loss from hail.

During the centenary celebrations in Manchester, England, mounted policemen wore stainless steel armour.

Wolf-Trainer's Wife Steals His Thunder Stakes Gold Claims At New Strike

Sudbury, Ont., Aug. 9 (CP)

IT'S Mrs. Joe Laflamme who now has the Laflammes in the news, rather than her burly wolf-training husband. Mrs. Joe turned "miner" to steal a bit of the thunder that usually goes to Joe.

The first woman to stake a claim in the new Osway township region, where prospector Bert Jerome said he discovered gold on the shores of Lake Opeepeesway, she flew into Sudbury Saturday to register three claims. She said they were near the original one staked by Jerome.

Mrs. Laflamme said she flew from her Gogama home, where she has resided for 18 years, to the mining site on a dare. She said she reached her claims by canoe from the spot of the original staking. Mrs. Laflamme said her husband, who hopes to drive a team of trained wolves down Broadway in New York this winter, has staked no claims.

Keen Interest In Junior Contest Is Being Taken By Rural Girls

AS THE junior farmer department of the Peterborough Exhibition is beginning to take shape from the entries received from the counties of Central Ontario by Frank C. Paterson, representative of the Ontario Department of Agriculture, it seems that girls are taking more interest than ever in this feature.

"I wouldn't say that the girls are going to steal the show next week, but the entries apparently indicate that there will be an increase in the number of girls taking part in their domestic science and other branches," Mr. Paterson said today, "and the boys will be about the same number or possibly they may not be so many as in recent years.

That is the present prospect from the entries listed so far. Mr. Paterson will be in charge of the junior department for the first time since he succeeded A. D. Runions, and he feels the junior section will again be as interesting for the younger farmers who compete as it has been in the past.

"Any way, when you have the girls of the district boosting the Exhibition you are bound to have the boys, too," Mr. Paterson remarked. The program for the junior section runs two days, giving ample time for the competitions and other features planned for the junior department.

Mrs. Gillespie Laid To Rest Keene Cemetery

Crowded St. Andrew's church was mute testimony Monday of the high regard in which Mrs. G. A. Gillespie was held by the citizens of this community. Hundreds of the city's most prominent citizens filled the church to overflowing to join in the last rites for the beloved woman, who passed away on Saturday after a short illness.

There was a profusion of floral tokens about her bier as a service of simplicity and great dignity was conducted by the Rev. George S. Easton, officiating in the absence of Mrs. Gillespie's pastor, Rev. Dr. hymns, "The Lord is My Shepherd," and "Safe in the Arms of Jesus," were sung by her many friends. Representatives of the Women's Association and the Missionary Society of the church, with which organizations she had been prominently associated, were also present.

"In the midst of life we are very close to death, and in the midst of death we are very close to a greater and fuller life," Rev. Mr. Easton said in his address. In this world there is to be seen great beauty in nature, yet all know that it has come from a period of cold and suffering and that in a short time all that beauty will once again be covered over with the coming winter. "We are a little part of the forest of humanity and now one of the trees of humanity that brought beauty with it, has fallen."

She Was Faithful.

That the sadness that attends death was more poignant and intense than usual in the passing of Mrs. Gillespie was evinced by the large number of people who came to pay a recognition of sympathy to a home which has lost a fine Christian mother, he said. "One thing stands out from Mrs. Gillespie's life more than all else and that is summed up in the one word, faithfulness," he said. "This Christion mother was faithful in her home, she was faithful to the church and to her God. She put first things first, she was an example for others to follow."

For many years he had lived in a border town but had never wanted to cross into an adjacent city on the other shore, he said, but if one of his friends had been there he would have had a greater interest in that foreign city. "So also with the city that is beyond the journey of death. They cannot come back to us, but we can go to them," he said. In that fact sorrowing relatives and friends could find comfort, could know that death is merely a transition.

Pallbearers were James Gillespie, Jack Gillespie, Russell Rowan, Roy Thompson, Jack Gall, and Stewart Laing. Interment was made at Keene cemetery following a graveside service by Rev. Mr. Easton.

Cheese Patrons In Fair Way For Banner Year

Although cheese prices shaded off slightly on the board sales of Eastern Ontario last week, the industry in this district is showing an increase in production with prices up to the average of last year.

"If the season continues as it has been going, I expect the farmers who are cheese patrons to make more money out of their milk than last year," W. J. Moore, dairy inspector, told the Examiner this morning. "Prices last week were a little set back, but everybody is hoping that decline does not go any further. The flow of milk to the factories has been heavy, but the hot weather of recent weeks has made conditions more difficult for the cheese makers. There had to be more care in the handling of milk, and also with the cheese after it came from the presses."

Pasturage continues exceptionally good for early August throughout the district, Mr. Moore added. And with an increased output and prices a little better than last year, the industry in his area is flourishing.

Rotary Will Hold Fair On Sept. 13

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 9.— Rotarians will hold their annual street fair on September 13 according to a report of their meeting held on Monday. It was Secretary Earl Bell who brought the matter before members for discussion stating that chairmen for the various committees had been chosen, and on motion the members gave their unanimous approval to the plans.

The annual installation of officers also slated for this week's meeting was conducted by Harold N. Carr, M.L.A., who offered his hearty congratulations and thanks to the retiring president, Charlie Davidson and passed the baton over to Rev. Harold B. Neal, expressing the hope that each member would, during the coming year, take his share of responsibility.

Harlemites Fall To Campbellford

(Examiner Correspondence.)

CAMPBELLFORD, Aug. 9.— Peterborough's Little Harlem A.C. took their second defeat from the Campbellford Electrics in an exhibition fixture here on Monday which the locals won 14 to 13. The heavy hitting Peterborough squad began scoring in the first inning when Price and Craig found little trouble in hitting McComb's fast pitched ball. The visitors held their lead until the end of the fifth inning when they pulled out Dennie and substituted Price on the mound. The locals found his pitching more to their liking and were able to pull ahead with eight runs in their last time at bat.

Hahoney scored the only homer for the visitors who tallied five runs in the final inning when McComb walked both Price and Hodson to bring his total up to three for the game.

Soccer Notes

At the meeting of the P. and D.F.A., Monday night, the board requested that all cups in the possession of clubs be handed over to the executive so that proper allocation of the trophies will be considered before playing for them. At present, the Packers hold three cups—White challenge Cup, Peck Cup (the oldest cup in soccer circles) and the Spalding cup. Deloro is in possession of the shield that is handed over to the runners-up in the league. The Canadian General have held the Father Phalen cup for the last three years, and the year before, the Port Hope aggregation defeated the Packers right on King Edward Park. Last week, the Briton club won the Holloway Injured Players' cup from C.C.F. One of the most coveted trophies in the soccer game is the Hon. G. N. Gordon silverware that was won for the first time by the Canadian General from the Caledonians on the Oval when over fifteen hundred people witnessed the game. Henry Turner playing centre-forward scored the winning counter with his head from a corner kick.

The entries for the G. N. Gordon cup was held in abayence until next Monday night so that the C.C.F. executive will consider the entry in the competition. Both clubs—the C.G.E. and Brinton—deposited their money before the executive. The draw will take place next Monday.

The Briton club will play Deloro in a league game tonight on King Edward Park Kick off at 6.45 prompt. Referee J. Parry.

On Thursday night, C.C.F. plays the Brinton in a league game. Referee T. Foster.

There is no game in the city Saturday afternoon, but C.C.F. will travel to the Smelters field to play a league game. T. Foster, referee.

Next Tuesday night, the C.G.E. plays the Brinton in a league match. Referee, T. Foster.

To settle the question of the decision in a recent game, in regards to a penalty kick, the board had an open discussion and it is the rule that as long as the "ball is kicked forward", whether it travels to either side or not, it is legal, and the incident relative to another player scoring the goal is legal. The rule does not say "to be kicked directly forward."

Digging Up the Local Dirt With the Odd Chuckle or Two

By CEC. PERDUE

DOWN at the George St. arena where lacrosse is staged on a dusty floor as mosquitos roar, the Petes last p.m. helped themselves to a 17-12 decision at the expense of Brampton in an O.L.A. senior "B" scrap. And some 800 fans drifted in to see some more fights ala Brooklin, but they were disappointed Lots of penalties for little offences but a clean contest at that. Oh, yes, it was late starting again, but that's hardly news, is it? A goodish sort of game with the Petes always a little ahead and looking a bit better than their rivals. Passed better and checked closely. Brampton had a few regulars off on vacation and used juniors, else it might have been somewhat tighter. Still, it was 11-9 at the start of the fourth frame.

* * * * *

SOME of our regulars who have been coasting a bit during the hot spell opened up last eve at times and played good lacrosse. We mean Mick Magee, Pete King and Ira Dundas, to mention a few. Vitarelli looked good, too, and the perennial Buster Whitton. Chute was as strong as ever on defence. Harder to get around than the judge's crack: "Six months!" Brampton had several boys who know what the gutted-stick game is all about, but they couldn't quite carry the load for their buddies. The Petes play Long Branch here this Friday, at nine o'clock—or thereabouts.

* * * * *

Let's Start All Over

TWO MONTHS AGO or more, three men's softball teams, Omemee, Westclox and Motorists, started out. They figured to play a couple of months or so to eliminate one team, the other two playing off. Last night at the Bowl, the schedule ended with Omemee getting a 9-7 nod over Westclox. And we'll be blown to bits and sold for shredded scribe if the three teams aren't right where they started in the spring! Yessir, they are all tied up tighter than a shoe-lace when you're in a hurry, each having seven wins and as many reverses. Westclox had a 12-9 lead in the ninth but darkness intervened and the score shifted back to the eighth after an interesting squabble—marked by one fight—before one of the biggest crowds of the year. A neat fray, and a nice win for the battling Villagers.

* * * * *

LET'S TAKE a quick look-see at the Southend Softball League situation as that schedule draws to a close. It ends tomorrow night with Cogs playing Quakers at the Quaker diamond and Keene meeting Little Harlem at Brinton Field. Last p.m. saw DeLaval do a 7-1 job on Quakers, the first reverse for the Porridge Punchers this half. But they kept first place as Keene copped an 11-6 smirk over Leafs. DeLaval are now sure of a tie for third place. The playoffs will commence right shortly, mes amis.

* * * * *

A Bowl Full of Softball

BEFORE checking off the subject of softball for the day, we'd better see what's slated for the Bowl the next few nights. The girls play tonight at seven, C.G.E. meeting Westclox in the second tilt of the two-in-three sectional playoff serious. A win for Westclox will put 'em into the finals 'gainst Keene. A C.G.E. win will force a third game between the Electrics and Armour Hill lasses. With the three men's teams tied at the finish, it was decided to stage a six-game round robin series for the loop title. Top team at the end of the six struggles enters O.S.A. playdowns in Oshawa Aug. 26th and here the 30th. First game sees Omemee vs. Motorists at the Bowl this Thursday. And how about starting these games at seven sharp? Then it's Motorists vs. Westclox the 13th, Westclox vs. Omemee the 15th, Motorists vs. Omemee the 18th, Westclox vs. Motorists the 20th and Omemee vs. Westclox the 22nd, all at the Bowl.

* * * * *

YOUNG PETES were rubbed out in Lakeshore Junior Ball Loop semi-finals last p.m. in Cobourg, 10 to 4. Errors cost them the decision in the deciding tussle, and now Cobourg meets Oshawa in league finals. The Lakeshore lads deserved the win on their battling spirit in recent games. Tough luck on Herb Ralph and his junior baseballers but they were in a tough, tough group this year and we figure Oshawa would have knocked 'em off, had they got by Cobourg. The boys dished up some good games before slim home crowds, and had a lot of fun—so they can't kick too much. A bit too nervous and shaky in playoffs. Gee Clark deserved a better break last p.m. as he hurled a fine game most of the way. Young Jimmy Hollingsworth is a good kid who should go places eventually after his junior training. Several other good prospects on the club, too.

* * * * *

Those Pesky Oshawa GM-Men

OH, YES, the Petes will be playing Oshawa GM-men here this Saturday in the second of the four-in-seven C.O.B.L. playoffs. At three in Riverside. Dunno who will hurl for Eddie Murphy's men, but it will be Jack Turner of Toronto for the Motor Citizens. The scribe from Oshawa says: "Frankly, we think Mr. McNally will be back again and make a much better showing before the title is decided. After all, the GM-men did well against Smokey Smith too, the first game a year ago in O.B.A. finals but look what happened the next time. On the other hand, Jake Biddle was also off-color Saturday and we doubt if the Petes will ever again get 13 hits off him."

EFFORTS are being made by officials at the Wallace Point regatta tomorrow to have an outstanding challenge race by rival Indian chiefs in full war paint. Paddling races between original North Americans of 60 years or better. Dan Whetung of Curve Lake, Zack Smoke of Alderville, Madden Howard of Hiawatha, and maybe a few other oldtimers. They expect to line it up today. Full program of regatta events in the aft and several swimming races in the eve. Ya gotta give the Canoe Club at the Point credit for encouraging junior paddlers and swimmers of this city and all over the district. They have quite a raft of lads and they teach 'em plenty about handling themselves in the water whether wrapped up in a canoe or wool trunks. Members of the club plan a mighty interesting demonstration of what not to do but what should be done if ya do what ought not be done in a canoe at this regatta—aw, live right and you won't get dizzy spells!

Lou Ambers Fails To Look Like Popover For High-Sounding Henry Armstrong

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—(AP)—It must be admitted that Lou Ambers, the lightweight champion, does not look nor talk like the pop-over he is supposed to be for Henry Armstrong tomorrow night at the Polo Grounds.

In his final training spasm yesterday the 135-pound king looked as tough as a smoked boot and his conversation was to the effect he knew exactly how to take care of the fierce little negro once he got him in the ring.

The average man wouldn't like to face Armstrong with a baseball bat, yet Ambers talks as though he can't wait to take a smack at the fireball who had dethroned the featherweight and welterweight champions in the last nine months.

"Don't worry about me," he advised. "Wait until we've gone 15 rounds and then ask Armstrong how he liked it."

Lou isn't the first one to adopt that attitude toward "Little Dynamite." Barney Ross felt the same way before Henry started bouncing him around last May. He couldn't express much of an opinion afterward because his head was swathed in three layers of toweling.

Still, Ambers makes it sound pretty convincing. At least, you gather that Armstrong is going to have to demonstrate to him, personally, that he is the better man.

"All that's wrong with this fight is that I ought to have fought Armstrong first," he complanied. "Then the winner could have whipped Barney Ross for the welterweight title. As it is, some of them are trying to say I won't be welterweight champion after I lick Armstrong."

Golf Insurance

KEWANEE, Ill., Aug. 9—(AP)—Selling golf hazard insurance appeared much easier to-day to M. G. Palmer, but his sales talk wasn't very coherent. Palmer's denture was smashed to bits when he was struck in the mouth by a golf ball. He was among the competitors in the local city open golf tourney when he was stymied by the physical hazard.

Family Reunion Takes Vancouver To Soccer Finals

WINNIPEG, Aug. 9.—(CP).— A family re-union carried Vancouver North Shore United into the Dominion football finals.

Manager Bill Thomson of the Vancouver eleven blamed a solemn between-period get-together for the form reversal that carried the British Columbians to a 4-1 victory over Winnipeg United Weston in the fourth game of the wetsern final here last night.

"After the first half in which we were outplayed," the manager said following last night's game, "we had a little family re-union and hashed it all out. We decided to go out and win and, well, you know the rest."

Fortunate to be on even terms with the Winnipeg club with the score 1-1 at half time, North Shore came back with a three-goal rally in the final half and are ready to face Timmins Dome in the Canadian final.

First game of the championship series is billed for to-morrow night here. Second of the best-of-three series will be played Friday with the third, if necessary, booked for Saturday. Jimmy Gilhooley of Calgary, will referee the championship series.

Keene Takes 10-6 Win Over Leafs

(Examiner Correspondence.)

KEENE, Aug. 9.—Keene took a 10-6 decision over Maple Leafs in a good tussle on the Keene diamond. Don McCarthy pitched good ball for Keene, sending nine out swinging and allowed but five scattered hits. J. Heffernan for Leafs struck out five and was nicked for 12 hits.

Woods for Keene hit two homers and a triple with Whalen also getting a homer and a single. O. McCarthy got two singles. J. Corbett for Leafs got three out of five hits.

Lineups:

Leafs—C. Corbett, Turner, J. Corbett, J. Heffernan, Lazure, Giardino, Holden, Hatton, Kitchen.

Keene — Robertson, Fletcher, Wood, Whalen, D. McCarthy, Brown, O. McCarthy, Richardson and J. Whalen.

The Right Idea

Cleveland fans with a sense of humor made a presentation to Jimmy Foxx that took the form of the bat Jimmy is shown holding. If they could just get the league to authorize the use of the bat, made up almost entirely of holes, there would be large gobs of joy in seven American league cities where the fans would be hoping it might stop double-x from banging runs over the plate in the devastating way he has.

Cash & Carry Pyle's Bunion Derby Once Almost Lured Armstrong

NEW YORK, Aug. 8.—For no reason at all the thought struck this department today that all Fistiana is divided into three parts consisting entirerly of blackface peformers. Reading from left to right, the cast of champions looks like a revival of Lew Dockstader's minstrels, and if Hennery Armstrong wins the lightweight championship from Lou Ambers (which he is being picked to do), five titles will rest in Afro-American hands. Joe Louis in the heavyweights and John Henry Lewis in the light heavyweights are the other champs, of course.

All three of the colored champions blasted their way to the top from humble beginnings, and it must be said of them they have done nothing to discredit the profession they have followed. But the story I like best is that of Armstrong, the little bull-dogger who came up the hard way, without much encouragement or help. Inasmuch as Hennery fights Aug. 10 for the lightweight title once held by Joe Gans, some of the highlights of his progress may be repeated.

Gans was an oyster-shucker in Baltimore before he entered the ring. Little Hennery worked on a railroad section gang before embarking on his puglistic career.

He Wanted to Run

Little Hennery was born in St. Louis, Dec. 12, 1912, the 13th child, and the youngest of the family. His mother died when he was five. Hennery worked his way through high school with odd pobs, and his ambition was to become a doctor. Lacking money, he took a job with a section gang, and it was back-breaking toil with ties and rails and heavy hammers, but the labor developed the boy's shoulders and arm muscles until he was as strong as a steel bridge.

Hennery was working in a bowling alley when Cash-and-Carry Pyle announced his famous bunion derby from coast to coast. The race intrigued the Negro boy and he started practicing by running 12 miles a day to and from work. An older brother, Harry, dissauded him from entering the derby, pointing out the rewards of the prize ring, and nine years ago Admstrong fought his first amateur bout. With his brother he drove in a battered flivver around the country, fighting here and there. In 1931 the kid arrived in California. He came under the management of Wirt Ross in Los Angeles, but when Eddie Mead saw him lick Baby Arizmendi, Eddie borrowed $10,000 from Al Jolson and George Raft and bought the youngster's contract from Ross.

Doesn't Trrain, Just Fights

In 1937 Mead stated Hennery on a whirlwind campaign. The boy fought so often he had no time to train in gyms. He kept in condition by fighting. He won 38 fights in a row, 35 of them by knockouts, 27 of the kayoes in succession, annexed two world titles.

His ring style is unorthodox, but it works. He just wades in continually throwing puches. He can hit from any position and his best defence is a headroll. Chasing an opponent across the ring he throws long hooks. His best punches, delivered in close, are his best. He hits with such speed that he can reliver two blows, one to the body another to the head, with what appears to be the same motion. His stamina seems endless.

He has been nicknamed Homicide Henry and Hurricane Hurry because of his swift and deadly style. Against Ambers he will weigh 13, according to Mead, and at the weight he is just plain bichloride of mercury.

There has been no talk of his retirement, but it is no secret the 25-year-old champion is looking forward to the day when he can hang up the gloves on the wall of a ranch in California. He is married, and has a three-year-old daughter, Lanetta.

Port Hope Beats Peterborough Team

PORT HOPE, Aug. 9.—In keenly contested matches Port Hope Tennis club defeated the Peterborough Tennis club by a score of 4-2 at the Port Hope courts, Queen street, Saturday afternoon.

Although all the games gave fine exhibition of tennis the most outstanding matches of the afternoon's play were ladies' singles and doubles. These were particularly good games and were closely watched by the spectators in attendance. Despite the presence of rain in the early afternoon, the courts were in excellent condition for the tournament.

PETES COP 17-12 LACROSSE DECISION OVER BRAMPTON HERE

Clean Contest Dished Up For 800 Fans

The Petes grabbed off a 17-12 O.L.A. senior "B" decision over Brampton here last night before about 800 fans. It was a fair lacrosse tilt with some nice work shown in spots by both sides, but draggy in spots. Play was fast the first half and clean throughout, despite a number of penalties for minor infractions. The Petes had a 3-0 lead in the first quarter and an 8-4 edge at the halfway mark. They were in front 11 to 9 going into the fourth. The locals had a better passing attack and checked more effectively to earn the verdict.

Game Starts Late

On the attack, iVtarelli, Whitton, Magee and Dundas were most effective; while on defence, Chute and Miller checked well and Red Creighton in the home net was hard to beat. The whole gang played good steady lacrosse most of the distance. Of the visitors, Hazel, Eules, Skoski, Milne and Binsell went best several of their regulars not being present and the club filling in with juniors. Harris had little chance to save on most of the goals that beat him. The game was over half an hour late in starting the car with the Brampton team's equipment being late arriving.

The teams:

Brampton: Goal, Harris; defence, Stapleton and Hill; centre, Binsell; wings, Skoski and Hore rover, Hazel;; alternates, Eules, Forest, Milne, Balfour, Payne Garbutt and Lynn.

Petes: Goal, R. Creighton; defence, Miller and Dallin; centre, Magee; wings, King and E. Creighton; rover, Crowe; alternates, Chute, Sloan, Whitton, Reid, Dundas and Vitarelli.

Champion Trotters To Match Strides At Goshen

Two of the greatest trotting horses in the game will meet at Goshen's famous Goodtime Park on August 9, the day before the running of the Hambletonian Stake, when Greyhound and Rosalind face each other in a match race. Greyhound, shown at the LEFT, with Trainer Sep Palin, won the Hambletonian in 1935 and since that time has been breaking records regularly. Rosalind, at the RIGHT, was the 1936 Hambletonian victor, and fans of the trotting game are anticipating a great battle.

Chiefs Wallop Montreal 3-1

TORONTO, Aug. 9. (CP).—Syracuse Chiefs can't expect to do much more in the International Baseball League race than get into the play-offs—possibly finish as high as second—but they may wind up by sending as many players up to the major leagues as the mighty Newark Bears.

They have, of course, pitcher Johnny Gee, who has been tagged already with a price mark high enough to take care of this season's expenses. Then they have a couple of Cincinnati "farm hands" playing in the outfield who look as if they might be good enough to stick next season.

Anthony Bongiovanni (Nine Bongy) was rated a fine prospect when he came from Portland in the coast league last spring, but the Reds decided to give him another year's seasoning with Syracuse. Then there's Jimmy Outlaw, a converted infielder who is patrolling the centre pasture and powering the ball at a .350 clip, and Joe Mack, now at first base and hitting better than .300.

Bongy showed his value last night when he provided the wallop that beat Montreal Royals 3-1, although the Chiefs were limited to three safeties by Bob Porter and Ed Chapman.

The victory gave Syracuse a full game margin over the fourth-place Buffalo Bisons. The Buffalo-Baltimore and Rochester-Jersey City games were rained out while Toronto and Newark had an open date.

Omemee Squad Beats Westclox

Final men's standing:

Team	P	W	L
Omemee	14	7	7
Motorists	14	7	7
Westclox	14	7	7

Omemee men softballers took a 9-7 win over Westclox before a good crowd at the Bowl last night to tie up the league standing in a dead heat. Facing elimination if they lost, the O's grabbed the nod in eight innings to end the schedule on even terms with the other squads. Westclox had 12-9 lead in the first half of the ninth, scoring five runs, when the game was called owing to darkness—the score reverting to the eighth. A general fight threatened in the ninth when F. Parson and Dormer tangled in a collision near the plate and several other players began pushing around, but order was restored.

Tom Parsons twirled steady ball for the losers, allowing nine hits and two walks as he fanned one. Reeds started for Omemee but left in the fourth frame. He had given up nine hits and three free bases while striking out one. Stephenson took over and hurled fine relief ball to limit his rivals to four hits the rest of the route and two walks, as he fanned one. The fielding was good with Ellis, O'Leary and Williamson pulling off nifty catches. Omemee had a double play, Parsons to Rehill. Jones had a double and single, Williamson 2 singles, Weir a triple and Rehill a two-bagger for the winners; while Currie got two doubles for Westclox, with Gainey, Carlson, O'Leary and Dormer having two hits each, as Ellis hit a double. De Laval Wins 7-1 Over Quaker Oats

Playing their best game of the season, the De Laval squad backed up Fred Naish's 7-hit ball flinging to hand the Quakers a 7-1 setback in last night's Southend Softball League tilt, played at the Brinton grounds.

Naish held the Quakers to one hit until the 8th innings and had a shutout in sight until the ninth, when the losers garnered 4 hits. He walked but three and had four strikeouts. The winners opened the scoring in the second, counting three times on three hits and as many walks. Shine settled down after this stanza and kept the De Laval's 12 bingles fairly well scattered, although he walked 8 while striking out 6 over the route. Gatfield, Pearson, Wiley and Naish led the De Laval attack with 2 hits apiece, with Wright having the only homer of the game.. Webb was the only Quaker able to garner 2 hits.

Both squads played well defensively with Starr and Coughlin for the losers and Dallin, Wiley and Weart for the winners, looking especially good. Both teams had 2 double plays. Line-ups:

Hank's 4-Ply Blow Chances Looking Good

NEW YORK, Aug. 9.—(CP). —If you're convinced the major league pennant races are practically over, even though there's an important third of the season left, it might be well to look into another of the season's interesting developments—whether Hank Greenberg has a chance to break Babe Ruth's home run record.

For a while it looked as though the burly Detroit first sacker might turn the trick. He was belting out four baggers at a terrific clip, eight of them in six games one week. Then he drew a blank for a week before connecting Sunday for his 36th of the season.

That wallop put Hank 15 games ahead of Ruth's 1927 pace when the Babe set up his all-time mark of 60 homers. Ruth's 36th came Aug. 17th in the 114th game of the season while Sunday's game was No. 99 for the Tigers.

September Counts.

Greenberg, of course, is likely to need all that leeway, for Ruth's big push game during the month of September when he smacked 17 homers in 27 games. The setup this year is so much the same that Hank's chances look pretty good.

In 1927, of course, the Yankees were so far ahead that they didn't have to worry when the Babe pulled off a homeric whiffing in an effort to sock one out of the park. The Tigers now are down in fifth place and there's not much their new manager, Del Baker, could do but haul them up into the first division. So they're not deeply concerned over the odd strikeout.

Then Hank, too, has a long stretch on the home grounds during September. Of Detroit's 55 remaining games, 27 are to be played at home and 28 away. And from just after Labor Day until almost the end of the season they'll be playing in Briggs stadium. So far Greenberg has connected 24 times there and 14 in other parks.

Court Upsetter

Elwood Cooke may soon be a name to conjure with in the tennis news. In the invitation singles of the Seabright tournament, one of the big annual United States events, Elwood (ABOVE) bowed to Bobby Riggs in the final, but to reach the final he had eliminated both Frankie Parker and Wilmer Allison. He's all right.

Fritz Is Confident Of Edmonton Eskos

EDMONTON, Aug. 9—(CP). —Coach Bob Fritz of Edmonton Eskimos, latest entry in the Western Interprovincial Football Union, refuses any predictions his team will win its first start, a game with Calgary Bronks, August 27, but he is sure his outfit will come up to the standards set by the Calgary, Regina and Winnipeg teams.

"The club is not looking too badly," he said, as he came in from a rain-marred practice session last night. "Of course we have a long way to go, but well be ready for Calgary."

The Eskimos, who have been practising rekularly, ral nor shine, for a week, have acquired several players from out of town. Already they have Fullback Vincent Yatchek, Lineman Evard Serbin, Outside Joe Perpich, Halfback Steve Olander and Fritz, who will be quarterback as well as coach.

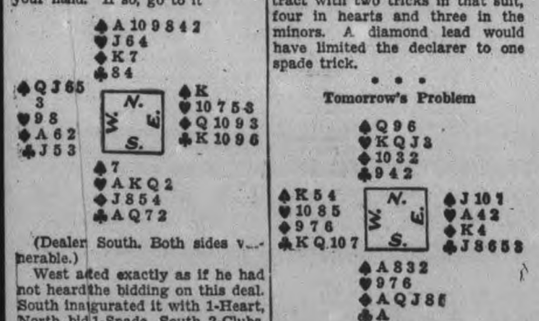
BARCLAY ON BRIDGE

WRITTEN FOR THE EXAMINER
By SHEPARD BARCLAY
"The Authority on Authorities"

LEAD WITH A RIGHT

MOST BOXING coaches tell a pupil it is sound tactics to lead with the left hand, but almost never to lead with the right. And most bridge teachers will tell you never to lead an ace against no trump, unless your partner had bid the suit or you have an almost solid suit yourself and want him to unblock for you. There are ones, however, when the opponent's bidding has made it clear that the ace is the best lead in your hand. If so, go to it'



(Dealer: South. Both sides vulnerable.)

West acted exactly as if he had not heard the bidding on this deal. South inaugurated it with 1-Heart, North bid 1-Spade, South 2-Clubs, North 2-Spades, South 2-No Trumps and North 3-No Trumps.

The worst possible lead against that bidding would seem to be a spade, giving the declarer a chance to try to set up the dummy's suit at the outset. West led a fourth-best spade, though, explaining later that he couldn't lead into either of the two suits bid by South. Perfectly true, but what was the matter with the fourth suit, diamonds?

The safest lead would have been the diamond ace, to make sure of two whacks at that possible side entry, but even a small one would have set the contract.

The spade lead, followed by spade leads from the dummy, enabled the declarer to make his contract with two tricks in that suit, four in hearts and three in the minors. A diamond lead would have limited the declarer to one spade trick.

Tomorrow's Problem

(Dealer: South. Both sides vulnerable.)

If South bid 1-Diamond, North 1-Heart, South 1-Spade and North 2-Diamonds here, what is South's next bid?

Montreal, Toronto Financial Chiefs Blamed By Westerners For Ottawa's Failure To Act

LAKE COUCHICHING, Ont., Aug. 9 (CP).—Failure of the federal government to take definite action on Dominion-provincial problems has caused a great deal of regional dissatisfaction in Canada, according to M. J. Coldwell, member of parliament for Rosetown-Biggar and national chairman of the Co-operative Commonwealth Federation.

"Ottawa's failure to act is said by many out west to be due to financial interests in Montreal and Toronto which, they say, control the strings of Dominion legislation," Mr. Coldwell told the Canadian Institute on economics and politics at Geneva Park here Saturday night. However, he thought the reason for the inactivity was due more to the fact that Canada's constitutional condition and the question of Dominion-provincial relations had not yet been clarified.

Mr. Coldwell addressed the conference of educationists, businessmen and students of international affairs after Prof. A. R. M. Lower of Wesley College, Winnipeg, reviewed the history of Canada since Confederation in 1867. Canada never has had to fight for anything and as a result lacks the spiritual bond necessary to arouse her self-consciousness as a nation, he said.

"People have asked me to account for Premier Aberhart's rapid rise in Alberta," Mr. Coldwell said. "I tell them it is because he has shown himself to be the enemy of these great eastern Canadian financial interests. I believe he will maintain his strong position in Alberta on the strength of this single detail of policy.

"In Alberta there is much talk of converting provinces into sovereign confederated states within the Dominion, with privileges to do things we believe the Dominion as a whole should undertake. In Alberta many people there have actually been convinced by a certain gentleman there that it is Alberta's mission to be first to develop a sovereign state and to assume control of the rest of the country.

"I would suggest that Canadian problems of unemployment, labor, marketing and social services are matters of central concern in any modern state and I would like to think of Canada as a modern state. Regional difficulties exist, but with a broad central program we could deal with the provinces both as individual divisions and as constituent parts of a nation."

The only ultimate method of solving these problems was to give the Dominion government greater power in proportion as the problems loomed larger and more general throughout the country. Mr. Coldwell did not believe racial differences in Canada would hinder national co-operation. "I would say this nation will emerge all the richer after incorporating foreign cultures within itself."

What he termed the failure of the present parliament to grapple with the problems which had arisen "is giving impetus to disruption in many provinces." Talk of secession was heard in the Maritimes, in Quebec and in British Columbia. Such talk could not yet be described as movements "but failure of Ottawa to act is only stimulating them."

"There are also factors making for unity in Canada which are not to be ignored," Mr. Coldwell said. "The Canadian Press, which flashes news of the day across the country, giving the same dispatches to all newspapers, is in itself a great contributor to the cause of unity in Canada."

Northern Light Songs From The Sky Branded a Myth

Washington, Aug. 8 (AP)

IF YOU SEE the northern lights some night and think you hear them singing, it may be only the blood rushing through your ears. The Smithsonian Institution said today in publishing a report by Dr. A. S. Eve of McGill University that many reputable witnesses have reported the illusion of "hearing" the lights.

This is impossible, Dr. Eve added, because the lights occur 60 miles above the earth's surface where there is virtually no air to transmit sound waves.

Enemy Raiders Get Through London Defence Lines

LONDON, Aug. 9—(CP).—Military experts checked over data and examined army photographs to-day seeking to determine the precise score in the greatest air defence manoeuvres of Great Britain's history.

Six lives were lost and four warplanes were wrecked as more than 900 first line flying machines participated in the two-day exercises through heavy rain and fog, demonstrating, according to authorities, that London and Eastern England are safe from serious air attacks.

An Air Ministry communique said the invading "Eastland" bombers, flying in small attack formations with London as their chief objective, had inflicted theoretical damage to the Air Ministry and Knightsbridge district.

The attacking squadrons, however, were intercepted successfully at many points by the defensive "Westland" airplanes.

The communique said that in "real war' few of the raiding squadrons would have escaped without loss.

Five members of the R.A.F. were killed when a bomber, attempting to land in the fog near St. Edmunds in Suffolk struck a tree and caught fire. They were: Flying Officer John Adam; Pilot Officer Albert George Gillespie; Aircraftsman Edward Raymond White; Patrick Joseph McGovern and Charles Carter Noxon. All belonged to the 37th Bomber Squadron of Feltwell, Thetford, Norfolk.

The sixth fatality was Corporal William Henry Wheeler of the 88th bombing squadron. He was killed when his plane crashed at Blackmore in Essex. The pilot and other occupants of the plane were unhurt.

Crews bailed out in parachutes successfully when two other planes had trouble and crashed.

War Minister Leslie Hore-Belisha and Air Secretary Sir Kingsley Wood inspected the mock warfare.

Crees Mourning Great Chief Calls For Aid of Manitou

NORTHT BATLEFORD, Aug. 9.—(CP).—From an Indian council tent here yesterday there went up to the Manitou the prayer of a great Indian chief beseeching his God to put into the hearts of his Indian children never to forget the noble example set by George Dreaver aged hereditary chief of the Crees, who died yesterday.

His death saddened the tribesmen assembled here for the annual council of the League of Indians. They converged on a site old in their tribal story.

To Chief Charles Fine Day 92-year-old warrior of pre-treaty days, head of no band, yet virtually leader of them all, fell the honor of making the last oration for Chief Dreaver.

Heads of Indian chiefs were bowed, and silence fell on the tent, save for the quavering voice of their leader, who spoke in Cree. Tears streamed down his wizened cheeks, as he recalled in his prayers to the Manitou those far-away treaty days at Carlton in 1876, when he and George Dreaver were braves together; when Chief Mistawasis and Star Blanket shook hand with Governor Morris, and the friends of the great white queen.

Once Chief Fine Day leaned wearily on his stick, and for a moment, it looked as if he was faltering. Then he went on to tell how his spirit still lived on through the years, guiding George Dreaver to counsel his people aright; of Mistawasis, great in wisdom, who in treaty making days saw through the veil of the future, telling his people then, "whta we speak of and do now will last as long as the sun shines and the river runs."

Wasaga-England Flier Weds Relative Of Rebel Franco

London, Aug. 9 (CP Cable)

J. R. Ayling, who with a Canadian co-pilot Len Reid, pioneered the Atlantic air route between Canada and England in 1934, yesterday married Kathleen Carmen Franco, a distant relative of the Spanish Insurgent leader, at Paddington register office here.

Mr. Ayling is so busy instructing at Moulton, Northamptonshire, where he is preparing for an influx of students under the new civil air guard scheme, that he is not taking a honeymoon now.

"I would certainly like to show my bride Wasaga Beach, where we took off from when we finally take our honeymoon," he said.

Pelee Woods Yield Ton Of Dope

Weed Worth $250,000 In Cigarets Dug, Burned

POINT PELEE, Ont., Aug. 10. —(CP).—More than a ton of marihuana weed, worth at least $250,000 if converted into "doped" cigarettes, has been pulled up and destroyed during the past week in Point Pelee National Park, it was announced to-day.

Discovered by park authorities 10 days ago, the hemp plant which produces the narcotic, has been eradicated over a six mile stretch. Growing wild in the mild temperature here, the plant has evidently flourished for years.

Three park employees have scoured the park since discovery of the weed. Nightly the pulled-up plants have been taken to the park incinerator and destroyed. Meanwhile, Royal Canadian Mounted Police, Provincial police and park officials have kept close watch on park visitors to make sure the marihuana was not being used.

A ton of the weed will produce 500 pounds of marihuana that can be used to make cigarettes or "reefers" according to the narcotic division of the Detroit police department. Approximately four grains are used in a single cigarette, which retail usually at 25 cents in the Detroit and Windsor area.

Some Already Picked

Frank Spade, Detroit police department employee and a vacationist here, first discovered the plant. An analysis by Royal Canadian Mounted Police identified the weed as marihuana. William Grubb, park employee, said the weed showed evidence of having been picked in spots and that "in one place, a whole bunch was left on the ground."

Park workmen said the marihuana had grown in the park area for years and always was known as "hemp". Seeds had been use dto feed birds and it attracted wild canaries, it was said. Heavy patches of the plant, some of which had grown to three feet, were found in heavily-wooded areas of the park.

R. J. Haslam of the Dominion experimental farm at Harrow said he did not believe the weed had been planted there and suggested seeds had been carried to the area by birds. He said the plant was confined generally to climates found in south-western Ontario because it required a fairly long season.

Quints Continue Slight Temperature

CALLANDER, Ont., Aug. 10—(CP) A slight temperature was recorded to-day by each of the Dionne quintuplets, in bed since Friday suffering throat infections induced by a tonsil condition. All are well on the road to recovery, Keith Munro, their business manager, said, speaking for Allan Roy Dafoe, their physician and guardian.

Four nurses are on duty during the babies convalescence and they are kept occupied all the time they are on duty, as the quints become more intent on a "merry time" as their health improves. Two nurses are on night duty, two on day.

Even though the babies are not recovered sufficiently this week-end to go out into the play-yard, they may be held up at the windows of the nursery so visitors may see them, Dr. Dafoe suggested to-day.

Jap Water God Fails As Grappling Hooks Find Drowned Boy

New Westminster, B.C. Aug. 10. A POLICE grappling hook succeeded yesterday where the Japanese "water god" failed in recovering the body of 15-year-old Peter Radick from the waters of the Fraser River where he drowned Monday.

Scores of Japanese led by Mrs. Sawa Omorti let loose slips of paper inscribed with Japanese characters on the river in the hope it would lead them to the body of the white boy who slipped from a log boom and disappeared.

The slips floated downstream out of sight instead of circling and sinking at the spot where the body rested.

Police concentrating near the spot where the lad was last seen, found his body just 10 feet from where he fell from the boom while paddling.

Franco's Silence On Her Plan Irks Britain

LONDON, Aug. 10 (CP-Cable).—The British government today was reported to be showing concern over General Franco's silence regarding the non-intervention committee plan for the withdrawal of foreign volunteers from Spain. The Spanish government accepted it July 26, but the insurgent leader has been considering the matter for five weeks without making a decision.

Meanwhile, reports from Paris indicate a growing demand in France to throw open the Pyrenees border to supplies for the Spanish government. The French authorities have been under the fire of left-wing parties for closing the borders to republican war supplies and it may be necessary to throw it open unless foreign troops are withdrawn soon.

General Franco's indecision is regarded here as endangering the object of the non-intervention commission, which is to localize the Spanish civil war. Delay in the withdrawal of volunteers is also holding up ratification of the Anglo-Italian treaty, based on a "settlement of the Spanish question."

Plan Submitted July 6

The plan for proportional withdrawal of volunteers was submitted to both side in the war on July 6. The republicans accepted with minor reservations but General Franco, despite two subsequent appeals, has not even replied.

There is a growing belief in some quarters here that General Franco is "stalling for time," because every day is valuable to him with Italian and German planes, tanks and men. It is believed he would have more to lose than the republicans through the withdrawal scheme and he may be putting off a decision as long as possible.

The plan, worked out in an elaborate time schedule, calls for the withdrawal of at least 2,000 men daily, with the number on each side dependent on the total of volunteers in its ranks.

Bit Too Early?

CHATHAM, Ont, Aug 10—CP) — Oshawa town council might have had Chatham councils endorsation of their proposal urging earlier closing of beverage rooms had it not been for a typographical error in their former request for endorsation. The request suggested an early closing hour of 2 p.m. Oshawa council had actually proposed the rooms should close at 11 p.m.

King Pays Visit To Boys' Camp

Attired in shorts and open-neck sports' shirt, King George walks along the beach after landing by boat at the boys' camp he supports in Suffolk, England. The King has taken an active interest in this camp from the time he organized it as Duke of York and pays the boys an annual visit. When he came by sea it was the first time in many years that a sovereign had landed from the royal yacht by rowboat. With the King is Robert Hyde, director of the Industrial Welfare Society, under whose direction the camp is operated.

Skull Fractured, Prisoner In Brantford Cell 2 Days

Discovery Is Not Made Till Man Is Freed After Being Picked Up Following Fight

BRANTFORD, Ont., Aug. 10 (CP).—Allegedly injured by an unknown person in a street fight, Arthur Robbins, no address, was taken to Brantford General Hospital today suffering from a fractured skull and brain hemorrhage.

His condition was "very serious," Dr. A. J. Craven said. Robbins lost his power of speech yesterday morning, according to Dr. Craven, and his left arm became paralyzed about the same time both as a result of the fractured skull.

Robbins was picked up Saturday, smelling of liquor, according to police, on Colborne Street, and arrested on a charge of being intoxicated in a public place. He was kept in a police cell till Monday morning, when he was remanded for a week and released. He was able to talk and appeared in normal condition Monday.

Tuesday a friend of the injured man called at Dr. Craven's office and informed the doctor that Robbins was "acting queerly." Dr. Craven attended and found the man unable to talk, and when he stopped to pick up a fallen knife he used his left arm and didn't have much power in his right.

The doctor examined him and found he was suffering from a condition, fairly common among victims of fractured skull injuries, where, following the injury, the victim feels normal for some time till the hemorrhage becomes sufficient to interfere with certain actions. Robbins would not be in any pain during the ttime which elapsed between his injury and his receiving medical attention, although in full possession of his faculties.

Sergeant Blower and Officer Kellas found Robbins intoxicated and arrested him. The fight had apparently occurred just before the officers' arrival. During the struggle, Robbins' head struck the pavement, causing the fracture. Afterward, Robbins evidently felt slightly dazed as he complained to onlookers of dizziness. Police refused to say whether charges would be laid against Robbins' opponent, when found.

Drifting In Boat Lad Of 5 Falls Out, Sinks

BOWMANVILLE, Aug 10.—Keith Beales, 5, only child of Mr. and Mrs. R. C. Beales, 33 Metcalfe Street, Toronto, was carried to his death in a drifting rowboat off Symons Beach on Lake Ontario shortly after noon yesterday.

People on shore, when they saw the boy prowling around in the bobbing boat as it was being driven quickly offshore by the wind, shouted and pleaded with him to sit on the bottom.

He waved and jumped around in response, either in play or in mad terror, until finally, a tiny figure above the choppy waves, he fell overboard at the very moment, F. E. Case, Centre Island, Toronto was driving a second rowboat in pursuit and was closing quickly the gap between the shoreline and the boy.

Still in hopes that the boy might be saved, Charles W. Beales, his grandfather, pleaded with the Toronto Fire Department to send resuscitation equipment. Fireman A. Cotton was sent in a motor dash to Bowmanville by Deputy Chief Duncan McLean, only to find when he reached the scene of the tragedy that the body had not been found.

Later, Patrol Officer Isaac Pond and Seaman Jack Cooper of the Toronto Lifesavers began searching for the body. Working at the task also were Provincial Constables Price Morris and Jack Whitty.

The first attempt to rescue the boy was made by Robert F. Robb, Centre Island, Toronto, who tried to swim out to the boat. Case had to run up the shore a quarter of a mile to get the other boat and was nearly half-way to the boy when the lad fell into the water. There was no sign of him when Case reached the spot.

The boy disappeared in about thirty-five feet of water.

Japan Calls Supreme War Council

New Russian Attack On Hill 52 Is Beaten Off

TOKYO, Aug. 10—(CP).—Japan's supreme war council today was called into emergency session to discuss the increasingly severe hostilities on the Siberian frontier.

As the council met to review military aspects of the dispute, a foreign office spokesman said Japan was preparing to concede to Russia equal representation on a joint commission for demarcation of the Siberian-Manchoukuo border.

Japan previously had insisted upon what in effect would have given her majority voting power in negotiations to settle the dispute, cause of intermittent border clashes since July 11.

The war council heard General Seishiro Itagaki, war minister, give a detailed report of developments in the zone around Changkufeng, where fighting between Soviet and Manchoukuoan troops has centred since July 29.

Shortly afterward he repeated the essential portions of his report to a specially convoked gathering of 24 retired army generals.

These deliberations followed a meeting of the principal active officers of the general staff and the war ministry that began at 11 p.m. yesterday and lasted three hours.

Russians Beaten Off

YUKI, Korea (Near the Siberian frontier) Aug. 10 (AP).—Japanese troops repelled a charge of Russian infantry and 40 Soviet tanks following yesterday's heavy artillery shelling of Japanese lines, army headquarters announced today.

The four-mile Siberian border front was calm at 10 a.m., after the Soviet cannonade which began shortly after mid-day yesterday and lasted until 8 a.m. today.

Following the preparatory barrage, the Soviet infantry charged "Hill 52," one-half mile south of Changfukeng during the night, but was repulsed the communique said.

(Soviet occupation of Changfukeng hill is disputed territory and Japanese action to recapture it provoked the present border crisis.)

Six-inch shells came over at the rate of six a minute and numerous direct hits showed the accuracy of the Soviet gunners.

From early afternoon the Russians never stopped firing for more than two minutes at a time.

High Bread Price Ordered Probed As Toronto Finds Wheat Down

TORONTO, Aug. 10 (CP).—Inquiry into the price of bread bought by the welfare department was ordered today by the board of control on motion of Con. J. D. McNish. Mayor Day insisted that in view of lower wheat prices bread generally throughout the city should be reduced in price.

Con. McNish pointed out the welfare department was paying 8.61 cents per loaf whereas, according to reports he submitted, bread was being sold at 8 cents and as low as 7½ cents by some chain stores.

"The saving, if we could buy bread at 8 cents a loaf, would be $3,000 a month or $36,000 a year," Con. McNish declared. "I understand there is no contract, but that there is a simple arrangement on price."

"Wheat has gone down and the general price should be reduced," the Mayor declared. "We cannot justify the 8.61 cents."

Wife Grabs Submarine To Pay Her Alimony

MONTREAL, Aug. 10 — (CP) — Battle-scarred submarine S49 today is the grey, cigar-shaped target in a marital war being waged by Mrs. Anna Rammel Chrestensen against her seagoing husband, skipper and owner of the craft, now anchored in Lachine Canal as a sideshow exhibit.

Once an American Navy Submarine, it reportedly was about to slip down the St. Lawrence River to the open sea when visited yesterday by Bailiff J. L. Racine with a writ of attachment.

Leading Egg Layer Dies 8 Weeks Before Contest Closed

Harrow, Ont., Aug. 10

EIGHT WEEKS before completion of the current western egg-laying contest, the leading bird, a White Leghorn owned by W. S. Hall, Oakville, died this week, it was announced today. The hen, a member of Hall's Leghorn team which is leading the contest, succumbed to an internal disorder that has already taken the lives of three other hens in the pen.

The latest bird to die had led a field of 250 since April and had laid a total of 257 eggs in that time. Despite the fact that but six birds are left in the Hall entry, the pen remains in first place.

Britain Protests Another Bombing

LONDON, Aug. 10.—(CP Cable.) —The British Government to-day protested to General Franco the sinking of the British ship Lake Lugano, which was bombed and machine gunned in Palamos harbor Aug. 7 by insurgent planes. The protest was delivered by Sir Robert Hodgson, British agent in insurgent Spain.

The protest states the view the attack was deliberate and suggested it be referred to the commission which is being established to investigate the bombing of British ships. Great Britain is also seeking compensation, to be determined by the commission.

When established, the commission will investigate all protests made by the British government to General Franco over ship bombings. If found to be deliberate, the question of compensation will arise.

The Lake Lugano, a British merchantman of 2,110 tons, was bombed last Sunday at Palamos, near Barcelona, by two insurgent planes. After the bombardment, the attackers wheeled, swooped low and machine-gunned the decks. None of the crew were injured. The vessel became a burning wreck and Tuesday another insurgent plane sank her.

Calcium tartrates will be extracted from grape seed in Italy.

New Defence Policy Seen In Lengthy List Of Military Promotions

LaFleche Becomes Major-General, Bishop Air Marshal As Mackenzie Starts Action

OTTAWA, Aug. 10 (CP).—Promotion of Lieut.-Col. L. R. LaFleche, D.S.O., Deputy Minister of National Defence, to the substantive rank of Major-General, was announced from defence headquarters today.

With the advancement of the deputy to substantive rank were announced also promotions of many senior officers of the Royal Canadian Navy and the Royal Canadian Air Force. Commodore Percy W. Nelles, chief of the naval staff, is elevated to the rank of Rear-Admiral, Commander George C. Jones and Commander Leonard W. Murray become Captains.

In the air service the substantive rank of Vice Air Marshal has been created, and two promotions made. Air Commodore G. M. Croil, senior air officer, and Air Commodore J. Lindsay Gordon, district officer commanding No. 10 Military District at Winnipeg, are advanced to the grade of Air Vice Marshal.

At the same time five other senior officers of the Royal Air Force have been promoted. Group Captain E. W. Stedman and Group Captain L. S. Breadner have been advanced to the rank of Air Commodore. Wing Commanders W. R. Kenny, A. E. Godfrey and N. R. Anderson have been moved forward a step to the rank of Group Captain.

In the permanent force service only one promotion was announced, that of Brigadier E. J. Renaud to be district officer commanding No. 5 military district at Quebec. He succeeds Brigadier J. M. Prower, who has retired.

Other Changes Coming.

It is understood further changes in the militia are contemplated, with Major-General T. V. Anderson slated to succeed Major-General E. C. Ashton, as chief of the general staff, and Brigadier W. H. P. Elkins following Major-General C. F. Constantine as Adjutant-General.

Last night the Department announced two honorary promotions, that of Hon. Air Vice-Marshal W. A. Bishop, V.C., to the honorary rank of Air Marshal, and Colonel J. Bartlett Rogers, C.M.G., Toronto, to be Brigadier.

The promotions reflect the far-reaching development taking place in the defence forces of Canada. In every branch pronounced activity has replaced the conditions which in former years, due to lack of money and the absence in great part of public sympathy, descended on them after the war.

Militia Changes Lag

The revival of public interest in the matter of national security, dictated by the disturbed state of the world, has concentrated attention on the forces and given them a prominence not hitherto enjoyed in

12 Bandits Loot Jerusalem Bank of $24,400

JERUSALEM, Aug. 10 (CP)—A dozen armed men in a daylight robbery in Nablus took £5,000 ($24,400) today from a Barclay's branch bank.

The band entered the town and closed the roads around the bank. Armed guards were stationed in front of the building while three men with pistols entered the bank and scooped up all available cash.

The band escaped in automobiles. Troops and police engaged in trying to keep down Arab-Jewish strife rushed to the scene, surrounded the town and began a search for the robbers.

One Jew was killed and another Jew and two soldiers wounded in incidents elsewhere. A bomb blew up under a Jewish truck near Medera, killing one Jewish worker. In the same locality terrorists set fire to a grain storehouse. Near Djenin a bomb blew up under a British military car, wounding two soldiers slightly. A Jew was wounded by revolver shots near Jaffa.

Urges Piping West's Oil To Lake Head

Turner Valley Head Claims Reserve Warrants Outlay

CALGARY, Aug. 10 (CP)—Turner Valley Field has at present sufficient oil reserve to warrant building a pipeline to Fort William, amortized over a 15 to 20-year period, Walter S. Campbell of Edmonton, chairman of the Alberta Petroleum Producers Association, told members of a service club here yesterday.

He urged the "long view" of the oil situation be taken and declared:

"It would be nothing short of a national calamity if the government of this country did not see to it that transporting of oil, whether by rail or pipeline, is not under their control.

"They should," added Mr. Campbell, "guarantee the bonds of the pipeline to Fort William and give statutary rate to Vancouver on the railway. This would not cost the Dominion government one penny, and would be paid for by the petroleum producers themselves."

He believed, however, the railroads should take a trial shipment of Alberta oil at low rates to see whether it is possible for them to compete with potential pipe line rates before the pipelines are financed or construction started.

"We believe oil can be carried to Fort William for 60 cents a barrel by pipeline. If that is so, with the water haul we can compete in Ontario on a competitive basis with imported oils."

A pipeline to Fort William, it has been estimated, would cost $15,000,000 to $30,000,000.

Mr. Campbell declared Sir Edward Beatty, president of the Canadian Pacific Railway, had told him in Calgary the C.P.R. would meet pipeline competition.

Plan Changes At Auburn Mill

TORONTO, Aug. 10 (CP).—Certain changes in operation at the Auburn mill in Peterborough are contemplated by officials of Dominion Woollens and Worsteds, it was stated at the head office here today by F. C. Cockburn, secretary-treasurer. Announcement of the changes will be made by managing director Henry Barrett when they are decided upon. A decision is expected "soon," Mr. Cockburn said.

A report in Peterborough that the company contemplated removal of the Auburn plant, scene of strike violence a year ago, was denied by Mr. Cockburn. "There has been no suggestion that we may remove our mill activities from the Auburn plant to Hespeler or to any other place," he said.

Industrial relations between management and staff at the Auburn plant have been satisfactory since the strike a year ago, he said.

First Chase Under New Law Nets $30,000 In Rum

HALIFAX, Aug. 10. (CP).—First victim of Canada's newly-extended rum-running regulations, the 35-ton Newfoundland schooner Nellie J. Banks, with a $30,000 liquor cargo aboard, was escorted last night to Charlottetown by the Royal Canadian Mounted Police cutter Ulna.

Police said the schooner, arrested yesterday in Northumberland Strait, was laden with 225 cases of alcohol, 50 kegs of rum, 20 cases of gin, 34 cases of whisky and 20,000 cigarettes. Value of the cargo was estimated unofficially.

The Ulna arrested the schooner five miles off Shore Point. Until the preventive division of the R.C.M.P. was armed with its new powers, she would have been hove-to in perfect safety.

The new regulations permit Canadian officers to board and search vessels of British registry under 500 tons within twelve miles of the coast. Previously they had authority to search outside the three-mile limit only vessels of Canadian registry.

Last Minute News Flashes

YUKI, Korea (Near the Siberian Frontier).—Japanese army officers today said Russian troops had dug in near the crest of Changkufeng Hill after an unsuccessful charge up the eastern slope. The charge, which took place early today under cover of tanks and mountain guns, was halted after a hand grenade duel with Japanese entrenched on the crest, the officers said. The Russians then withdrew and dug in just outside the range of grenades.

Discover Water Freezes Above, Below Usual 32

By STEPHEN J. McDONOUGH
(Associated Press and Science Writer)

WASHINGTON, Aug. 10. (AP).—A scientist described water today as a strange chemical combination which can stay liquid at temperatures far below its freezing point or freeze at temperatures several degrees above.

Dr. Ernest Dorsey of the United States Bureau of Standards said he has cooled water to six degrees below zero without having it turn into ice. This is 38 degrees below its "standard" freezing point.

Other investigators have found, he added, that under some air conditions ice forms on the wings of an airplane in flight even though the temperature is several degrees above freezing.

Water from different lakes and streams has varying freezing points, Dr. Dorsey explained, because of differences in the amounts of plant material and other chemicals dissolved or suspended in it. No two samples will turn to ice at precisely the same temperature.

Other scientists recently have created ice which flows like water and ice which is so hard that it will scratch steel. A Princeton professor, Rupert Wildt, said oceans of hot ice exist on the planet Jupiter because of intense pressure.

Coldest ice ever made is liquid helium, prepared in a few laboratories and recently seen for the first time at the University of Toronto by members of the American Physical Society. Changed from a gas to a liquid at a temperature of 447 degrees below zero, the helium ice flowed with about the viscosity of water.

Police Hunt Farmer For Ripping New Highway Surface

St. Thomas, Aug. 10.

PROVINCIAL Police officers in this city were asked this morning to investigate the extensive damage of a new stretch of asphaltic-surfaced pavement on the Fingal Road west of this city, allegedly by a farmer of the locality driving a farm tractor with five-inch cleats and a heavy farm wagon attached.

The damage to the pavement, which was only completed about two weeks ago, was discovered this morning. About 700 feet of the pavement will have to be resurfaced.

It was constructed for the St. Thomas Suburban Highway Commission.

Poor Readers, Writers

SAINT JOHN, N.B., Aug. 10 (CP), —"The great majority of students entering college and even of those in their third and fourth years, can neither read nor write properly," Prof. C. A. Krug, head of the Maritime Summer School at Mount Allison University, said in addressing students at the New Brunswick Summer School here.

Prof. Krug said he referred to the ability of understanding what was read. Students had not mastered the art of using books, he said.

Loyalists Drive Deep Wedge In Rebel Front

HENDAYE, France, Aug. 10 — (AP) — Spanish Government troops drove a deep wedge between the Insurgent strongholds of Balaguerand Lerida in Catalonia today in a sudden shift of the offensive to a new sector.

Dispatches from Barcelona said the Segre River had been crossed between the two centres and a new Government line established on the west bank of the wide stream, which flows south into the Ebro.

The offensive is the third trip-hammer blow Government troops have dealt Insurgent General Franco's forces in two weeks of pounding at weak spots in his extended eastern front.

First blow fell July 25 when militiamen crossed the Ebro and advanced to Franco's one-time regional headquarters at Gandesa just as General Franco was preparing for an offensive against Valencia.

Hit Right Flank Hard

No sooner had Franco shifted his manpower to the Gandesa sector, 12 miles southwest of the Ebro, than the Government jabbed at his extreme right flank west of Teruel and advanced nine miles.

During this time Government troops along the Segre were carrying out "feeler attacks."

Under cover of darkness Monday night the Government troops threw pontoon bridges across the river and attacked at dawn yesterday.

The Government's double-barrelled objective aimed first at recapture of the Balaguer bridgehead and second to force Franco to rush reinforcements there, weakening other sections of the line for the next Government blow.

Popular Song Nets Burglar Suspect

TORONTO, Aug. 10.—The melody of a popular song proved a clue that led to the arrest of Allen Lang, 19, Toronto, on 10 charges of housebreaking last night.

When Alderman Percy Quinn's home was robbed some time ago, a combination music box and cigaret case was stolen. When police, following up other clues, visited Lang's rooming house, they found he possessed a similar box. It played the same tune Mr. Quinn's box had played, and was identified as Mr. Quinn's property.

A search of his room showed other articles allegedly stolen by Lang, wanted on two break-in charges at Galt and one at Preston. From the room, police were able to trace two revolvers buried in a west end park, finding of which led to arrest of Albert Jacobs, another roomer at Lang's address, on a charge of illegal possession of weapons.

Lost Strike Hours Dwindle In July

OTTAWA, Aug. 10.—(CP)—Labor disputes in Canada in July were less numerous than in June and much less extensive than a year ago, the Labor Department reported today.

The number of strikes and lockouts during July was 15, involving 1,423 workers with a time loss of 10,435 man working days, as compared with 19 disputes involving 2,366 workers and time loss of 12,216 day during June.

The principal disputes in July involved time plant workers at Blubber Bay, B.C., and restaurant employees at Toronto, carried over from June, and hat factory workers at Guelph, Ont.

The total number of disputes in July, 1937, was 41 involving 7,083 workers with time loss of 67,587 days.

Of the 15 disputes recorded in July, 1938, 11 were ended, five resulting in favor of the workers, one in favor of the employer, with compromise settlements in four cases and one indefinite. Four disputes involving 240 workers continued at the end of July.

Get at the Cause of Constipation!

You know that constipation often gives you that dopey, sunken, bogged down feeling. Why not get at the cause and fix it?

If you eat what most people do—things like bread, meat and potatoes—the chances are all that's the matter with you is you don't get enough "bulk." And "bulk" doesn't mean what you may think. It's a kind of food that isn't entirely consumed, but leaves a soft, bulky mass in the intestines that aids elimination.

If this is your trouble, what you need is a dish of crisp, crunchy Kellogg's All-Bran for breakfast every day. It contains the "bulk" you need, plus Nature's intestinal tonic vitamin B_1, and iron.

Eat All-Bran every day, drink plenty of water, and see if the old world doesn't look a lot brighter! All-Bran is made by Kellogg in London, Ont. Sold by every grocer.

Wants Wheat Pegged

Following announcement from Ottawa that the price of western wheat will be pegged at 80 cents per bushel, Hon. P. M. He pointed out that the price for Ontario wheat now ranges from 35 to 65 cents per bushel. His request was refused by Premier King.

Two Drivers Escape In Havelock Crash

(Examiner Correspondence.)

HAVELOCK, Aug 10.—The third traffic accident on the stretch of Highway No. 7 through Havelock, during the past six weeks, occurred about 10 p.m. standard time Tuesday evening when a car driven by James Hefferman, aged 20, of R.R. No. 3 Norwood was sideswiped by an automobile owned by William Flynn, of R.R. No. 1 Marmora, and driven by his son Peter J. Flynn, aged 29.

Hefferman driving a 1926 sedan was going west on Highway No. 7, just past the intersection with No. 30, when the Flynn car, a 1927 sedan coming from the east suddenly swerved into him, smashing his left rear wheel and fender. The Flynn car with the whole left front of the car crushed in, and the wheel bent underneath skidded around the corner to his left. There was one other occupant in the Hefferman car besides the driver, Flynn being alone. Besides a severe shaking up all three escaped injury.

The accident was investigated by Provincial Traffic Officer John Hatch, of Marmora and it is understood a charge of reckless driving is to be laid against Flynn.

Crowe Bog Victim Improves Slightly

BELLEVILLE, Ont., Aug. 10 (CP)—Hugh Jones, 44-year-old Rawdon township farmer rescued Friday after having been marooned six days and nights in a swamp, was reported in slightly improved condition today. He is still weak and emaciated but his chances for recovery are greater.

Jones took nourishment last night for the first time since his rescue, cheering his physician Dr. G. S. Stobie who had expressed concern at Jones' lack of interest in food after his ordeal.

Jones so far has been unable to tell of his experiences in the swamp 30 miles north of here. He was found in the Crowe bog, the oozey mud up to his neck, and when he groaned to call attention of searchers to him he was clutching tenaciously a log which held him to the surface. It was not determined for how long of the six days he was missing he was mired in the bog.

MORE ABOUT—

Defence Policy

Canada. Considerable advances have been made in the expansion of the air and naval services, and, to only a lesser degree in the militia. These have been pushed vigorously by Defence Minister Ian Mackenzie, who, on more than one occasion, has paid tribute to the energy of his deputy, Major General Lafleche.

It was made clear the position of deputy minister of national defence is a civil appointment, and for this reason General Lafleche will shortly be posted to the retired list of the militia. His promotion does not entail any increased salary.

His promotion to Major General manifests recognition of work during the arduous period of the past few years in connection with the development of Canada's defence forces. Unlike conditions elsewhere, these are concentrated within the jurisdiction of one minister and one department. The responsibility of the deputy increases as the expansion of the armed forces broadens; these have recently assumed ramifications that were not foreseen a few years ago.

Bishop, who shot down 72 German planes during the Great War, was among the leaders in that sphere, outranking McCuddin, Mannock, Barker, Collishaw and others of the flying fraternity. Since the war he has been engaged in commercial pursuits largely, but has continued his interest in aviation.

Some time ago Defence Minister Ian Mackenzie called him into consultation on subjects relating to Canada's aerial defences, and in connection with a long-considered plan of establishing advisory committees for the various services. Marshal Bishop will likely be a member of whatever body is set up in an honorary consultative capacity for the Royal Canadin Air Force.

Brigadier Rogers had a distinguishd war record with the 3rd (Toronto) Battalion. He joined as a subaltern officer in 1914 and wound up as a commanding officer. He was several times wounded and was decorated four times, in addition to being thrice mentioned in despatches.

Start of Mackenzie Plan.

The advancement of Marshal Bishop was understood to be in pursuance of a long-standing plan on the part of Defence Minister Ian Mackenzie to establish advisory committees for the three defence services.

About a year ago the honorary rank of Air Vice Marshal was created and conferred on Canada's famous war-time flying ace.

Marshal Bishop, who is 44 years old, is a graduate of the Royal Military College of Canada. He was commissioned in September, 1914, to the 9th Missisauga Horse, and joined the Canadian Mounted Rifles in June, 1915. Six months later he was transferred to the Royal Flying Corps, where he began a brilliant career that was to see him among the highest ranking aces of the Great War.

During his career he won the Victoria Cross, the Distinguished Service Order (and bar), the Military Cross and the Distinguished Flying Cross. The French government bestowed on him the Croix De Guerre, with palm, and he was made a Chevalier of the Legion of Honor.

Thanks In Cash

GILEAD, Ont., Aug. 10—(CP)—Tempted by a field of ripe corn, a tourist passing through here recently stopped and picked a few ears. The farmer, passing a few hours later, was surprised to see an envelope tacked to a fence post. Still more surprised was he when he opened the envelope, and found it contained a dollar bill and a note, reading, "Thanks for the corn."

Cash To Save a Boy

OMAHA, Neb., Aug. 10—(AP)—Three offers of finacial assistance to-day assured continued treatment for Harry Gene Cato, eight, lockjaw victim who lies unconscious in a hospital here. For two days $150 worth of anti-tetanus serum has been used to keep him alive. He must have $25 worth more each day for the next seven, physicians say.

Six months after she sold an Alsatian dog to a man 10 mile saway, Mrs. M. Spanton of Durham, England, was greeted by the animal, which had walked back alone.

Coogan and Mother Shake Hands

Toronto Balks At Giving Lone Engineer Dictatorship Over Traffic

Toronto, Aug. 10 (CP)

ON OPPOSITION from Mayor Day, Board of Control today declined to give Traffic Engineer Tracy Lemay powers of a "dictator" in governing traffic conditions in the city.

The board, however, agreed, on motion of Mayor Day, to have Mr. Lemay report his views and policies on the situation and also directed a report from W. G. Angus, acting City Solicitor, as to powers of various advisory traffic bodies.

The mayor suggested a board of three might be given the traffic problem, the board to include Mr. Lemay, Works Commissioner R. C. Harris and a representative of the police board.

"We should not seek to put too much power in the hands of one man," the mayor said. Con. Fred Hamilton made the motion to make the appointment.

Ban C.C.F. Rally In New Toronto

TORONTO, Aug. 10 (CP)—Refusal of New Toronto Council to issue a permit for a Co-operative Commonwealth Federation meeting Friday night is a denial of British rights, as set out in Magna Charta, E. B. Jolliffe, provincial C.C.F. secretary, said today. The C.C.F., he said, is going ahead with plans for the meeting, and "responsibility for any resulting disturbance or injury rests on the New Toronto Council and police force."

The New Toronto "padlock by-law," the council's refusal to grant the C.C.F. a speaking permit, and the reported statement of Police Chief Padgett that "If the C.C.F. don't get a permit we won't allow them to hold an open air meeting or any other kind of a meeting here," show that somebody is trying to set up a petty local dictatorship in a free country, Mr. Jolliffe said. "We are not going to let them get away with it," he added.

"Ever since Magna Charta," Mr. Jolliffe said, "all Britishers with a love for freedom have resisted the small-time tyrants as well as the big-time dictators. We won't allow the New Toronto 'bosses' to disregard British constitutional rights. We think they will get the same licking in the courts that Aberhart had to take."

Trustee Summoned

School Trustee William D. Dennison today received a summons instructing him to appear in court a week from Friday on a charge of "causing a noise calculated to disturb the inhabitants by causing loud noises to emanate from a loudspeaker device" at the corner of Queen and Seaton last Saturday night.

"I am very pleased the summons has been issued," the C.C.F. trustee said. "I was merely using a loudspeaker, as I have used them for four years, to report to my electors what I have done in the past eight months. An officer told me I was breaking the law. I asked for his authority and he referred me to Inspector Lundy.

"I asked Inspector Lundy what by-law he claimed I was breaking and he said that it was his own regulation. I didn't like that. I'll be glad to obey any laws or by-laws, and for that reason I'm glad I shall have a chance to air the situation."

Guerillas Form Regular Army

SHANGHAI, Aug. 10 — (AP) — Formation of a "Regular Army" flying the banner of "Loyal and righteous National Salvationists" was proclaimed today by Chinese guerillas at suburban Pootung.

Chinese reports said the touch-and-go fighters, who have claimed repeated victories over Japanese units throughout China, are increasing rapidly in numbers in anticipation of an expanding guerilla campaign.

Rumors grew from guerillas from Pootung across the river from Shanghai, had entered Shanghai's foreign areas and planned a terroristic celebration Saturday, anniversary of the start of Japanese-Chinese fighting in Shanghai.

Police found a new hand grenade in downtown Shanghai and deduced it had been dropped hastily by a would be terrorist. Defence troops, voluntary units and police estimated to number 15,000 strengthened precautions against the feared terrorism. Apprehensions grew.

A box of hand grenades exploded in a French ammunition depot in the French concession in the heart of the residential section. Windows in nearby buildings were shattered. French military officials said no casualties but the populace became more nervous.

The military situation on the Yangste River front, meanwhile, was subject to conflicting claims.

Twenty thousand Japanese reinforcements were ordered from Hofei, capital of Anhwei province, to Kiukiang near where Chinese counter-attacks stalemanted the invaders' 135-mile drive toward Hankow, provisional Chinese capital.

Chinese reported they encircled 6,000 Japanese 25 miles north of Kiukiang but could not dislodge them because Yangtse floods prevented artillery movements.

$1,096 On The Street

VANCOUVER, Aug. 10—(CP)—E. R. Webber casually glanced at a piece of green paper on a Vancouver street and then gasped with surprise as a second look convinced him it was a cheque for $1,096. Made out to J. J. Miller Aug. 1, it was drawn on the B. M. Behrends bank, Juneau, Alaska, and signed by S. J. Higginbottom.

Corrigan's Beloved "Crate" Returns To New York

On its arrival in New York, the fuselage of the nine-year-old Curtis-Robin monoplane, valued at $900, in which Douglas Corrigan flew the "wrong way" into fame by way of a transatlantic hop to Dublin, is shown being hoisted over the side of the steamer Lehigh. The airplane will be reassembled at Roosevelt field for the flier's use. Note the antiquated build of the machine in comparison to modern streamlined aircraft.

WINNIPEG GRAIN

WINNIPEG, August 10 — (CP) — A good export business and firmer prices at Chicago and Liverpool combined to influence firmness on the Winnipeg market to-day. Wheat prices ruled steady throughout the session at fractionally higher levels. Final quotations were 1 to ⅝ higher, with October 72, November 73, December 71⅞ to 72, and May 74⅝ to ¾ cents.

Export trade was highest in weeks, estimated at nearly 500,000 bushels including durums and considerable new crop wheat.

Pit trading was quiet and offerings light to-day, but prices maintained early gains. Chicago moved fractionally higher and with Liverpool's firmness steadied the Winnipeg market.

Peterborough Girl Wed At St. Catharines

A wedding of local interest took place in Queen Street Baptist Church, St. Catharines, on Saturday last when Gladys May Thomas, formerly of this city and daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Fred Thomas became the bride of Charles Overholt, son of Mr. and Mrs. L. T. Overholt of St. Catharines. Rev. Dr. McLean officiated.

The bride was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Albert Merrett, and was gowned in toe length frock of baby blue triple sheer with finger length veil of matching net. She carried a Colonial bouquet. The bridesmaid, Miss Mary Klenavic, wore a gown of pale green net embroidered in gold over pink taffeta and she carried a Colonial bouquet. Mr. Walter Farr of Peterborough attended as best man and ushers were Mr. Harry Merrett, cousin of the bride and Mr. Harold Sharpe.

Cullifford, sister of the bride and the Misses Lilian Yaxley, Lilian Klenavic, and Jean Widdicomb.

Later the young couple left by motor on a honeymoon trip to the States. The bride chose a dress of mustard green sheer with white accessories for travelling and carried a silver fox fur. On returning they will live at 22 Haynes avenue, St. Catharines.

Martin Chenhall Praised

An article in the Toronto Daily Star this week dealing with the ensemble work of the summer school for teachers at Jarvis Collegiate in Toronto eulogizes the work of Martin Chenhall, A.R.C.O., of Peterborough.

The article says in part: "It was a real joy to hear these teachers sing. They seemed to feel the thrill of good choral singing. All over Ontario these student-teachers will spread the propaganda of choral music and orchestra playing. Probably nowhere else in Canada could practically the entire student body of any school have created so thrilling a sound-scene as these 500 or 600 teachers in chorus and orchestra. The fine leadership of Messrs. Marshall and Richer is publicly obvious. The more unobtrusive work of Martin Chenhall who synthetizes the various groups of the orchestra to make it easy for the conductor is not so widely known. But those who take Chenhall's tuition say that his work is really marvellous."

The Bride Who Decides To Remain As She Was Before Marriage Is Due For a Cry—Husbands Want Different Type of Wives From The Girl They Courted

A BRIDE—and a Hollywood bride at that—announces that she has found the secret that her sister women have been seeking throughout the ages with tears and prayers and with little success to boast of, and that is how to hold a husband and keep him in love with her.

She asserts she is going to turn the trick by simply being herself. "My husband fell in love with me just as I am," she says, "so evidently I possess the qualities he admires most in women and desires in a wife. Therefore, if I am satisfactory to him now, why should I try to change in any way?"

Why, indeed, except that men change their feminine ideals as often as they do their shirts. The charms and graces that intrigue them today will get on their nerves tomorrow, and the only thing to which they are really constant is change.

Besides, sweethearts are one thing and wives are another. The very thing that a man married a girl for he doesn't want her to do or be after marriage. He has an entirely different standard of virtues and conduct for before and after the wedding. That is what makes getting married such a risky undertaking for a girl. She doesn't know where she stands, nor what is expected of her.

In the days of courtship a man puts a girl up on a pedestal and burns incense before her. He lavishes flowers and gifts that he can't afford upon her. He tells her that her lily-white hands shall never do anything but soothe his fevered brow. He thinks it cute that she is such a nitwit that she thinks the Boulder Dam is some sort of a new curse word. He compliments her new clothes and tells her what a dream she is in floating chiffons.

Naturally, the girl thinks that he has fallen in love with her because she is a glamour girl, and that all she has to do to keep him kneeling at her feet, holding her hand and making impassioned love to her is just to go on being glamorous and floating around in pink chiffons and talking baby talk.

Then, to her amazement and consternation, she finds that the very qualities he picked her out for are just the qualities he doesn't want in a wife. He blames her for not being something else than what she is, which is just as unreasonable as for a man to order omelette souffle in a restaurant and then be peeved because it isn't roast beef. Most of the men who go around weeping on our shoulders because they are unhappily married and disappointed in their wives have only themselves to blame. The wives are just exactly what they were when their husbands chose them. Their only fault is that they were not magicians who could metamorphose themselves into entirely different kinds of women after they were married.

Why otherwise intelligent men marry a woman for one thing and expect her to be something else can only be explained on the assumption that it is a merciful Providence's mysterious way of providing girls with husbands. Be that as it may, it is an indisputable fact that they do. All of us know highly educated, cultivated men to whom books are just as necessary as food who are married to Dumb Doras who never read anything but the society items in the newspapers, and who bore them to death. Yet these girls were just as illiterate at 20 as they are at 40 and just as incapable of carrying on an interesting conversation.

We know poor men who married girls because they always looked like the last word in smartness and fashion, but who howl to Heaven over their wives' extravagance. We know men who married idle, useless little mamma's pets because they were so soft and kittenish and who complain because they have lazy slovens for wives who poison them on bad food. And we know men who fell in love with wild girls because they were so gay and vivacious and the life of the party, and who later consider themselves ill-used because their wives drag them out to night clubs and don't know how to make a home.

It is terribly discouraging, but it is true, that while a man's fancy before marriage may run to the parlor ornamen sort of woman, after marriage he expects her to be a combined kitchen utensil and savings bank and entertainment committee. Hence the bride who thinks she can hold her husband by just being herself and staying as she was when he married her has another guess coming to her. The wife who keeps her husband has to be a lightning-change artist.

Enquiry Column

Conducted by Mrs. MARY MOORE

QUESTION: I wonder if you could help me out. Have you a leaflet containing recipes for cordials and wines, especially raspberry and black currant and cherry. We have many currant raspberry bushes, some cherry trees, more than we can use, so I thought it would be nice to make some wine for later in the year.

I enjoy your page so much, and read it the first thing.

I hope I have not asked too much of you. Wishing you every success and continued good health and recipes.—Mrs. M. E. M.

ANSWER: Thank you for your letter.

We have no leaflet on wines and cordials but I am giving you the recipes you ask for specifically.

Cherry Wine

Wash 24 pounds cherries, black, wild, sour are all good; drain, then mash them leaving the stones in, if some of the stones are cracked in the mashing it does not matter. Let stand 24 hours, then strain through jelly bag. Measure the resultant juice and to each quart of juice add ½-lb. granulated sugar, cover the vessel and let stand 24 hours and strain through cheese cloth into a clean wine cask. Bung it closely, but the upper part of the cask must have a vent plug. Let it reman undisturbed for 6 months, then drain off into bottles. Cork closely, store in a cool, dry place and use after 6 more months have elapsed.

Black Currant Wine

Mash washed and drained black currants and let drip through coarse cotton bag overnight. Measure juice. Add the same amount of water as you have juice. To each gallon of juice and water add 3 pounds sugar. Mix very well, and bottle in stone jugs, corking loosely. Keep in cool place. As soon as fermentation ceases bottle the wine—the best time is October—this wine improves with age, but is delicious at any time.

Raspberry Wine

Ten quarts ripe raspberries, 10 quarts boiling water, 6 pounds sugar, 2 tablespoons brewers' yeast, 1 pint French brandy, ¼-oz. isinglass. Use clean dry fruit making it into wine the same day it is picked. Pour over it the boiling water (using a wooden or earthen vessel), cover and let stand 24 hours. Force all through fine sieve and elt stand 24 hours again, then strain carefully through fine cheese cloth. Add the sugar, stir in the yeast and as soon as the sugar is dissolved, pour the whole into a clean dry cask. Cover the bunghole with a folded cloth until fermentation ceases, then bung it closely. Let it stand for 1 month then rack it off into a clean cask, leaving the sediment behind. Add the brandy ,and isinglass dissolved in a little warm water, bung tightly and allow to remain undisturbed for 12 months. Then rack off into bottles, cork well, and let stand 12 months before using.

We hope you find these recipes suitable and that we can help you with cookery subjects at any time.

Note to readers: Kindly clip the above recipes now if you are interested in wine making.

QUESTION: This is to acknowledge long letter from Mrs. R. B. of Grand Bay, King's County, N.B. Thank you for your own recipe for Oat Cakes

(Mrs. R. B. of Grand Bay)

One cup of fine standard oatmeal, half teaspoon brown or white sugar, 1 teaspoon salt, a pinch of tablespoon baking soda in a tablespoon of hot water, 1 large tablespoon melted shortening. Flour your baking board and roll out after mixing well in your baking bowl. (I surmise this is made wet enough to roll with milk or water.—Ed. note.) Roll out very thin and cook on griddle until they turn up on the edges. Then put in oven to crisp, but be careful oven is not too hot.

ANSWER: Thanks for the letter and other recipes, we will file them and use them for refernece when readers ask you them. Do write again whenever we can be of help to you.

JUST BETWEEN US WOMEN

Our thoughts are friends or enemies, they are our glory or our shame, our happiness or misery, our solace or destruction—Summed up, they are the Alpha and Omega of life.—O. S. Marden.

Dear Friends:

The other day I was very irritable, too many little annoying things were happening to me, too much vitality taken out of me because others would not do their part but came like a vacuum and drew mine away.

It seemed as if everyone who came near me wanted something, my time, my counsel, my advice, my confirmation of their ideas, each and every one taking a slice out of my small vital power, so that I was left feeling empty and fagged out.

And out of all this was bred a vast irritation which seeped into each part of me, even into the marrow of my bones. Now, I am one of those helpful people, but I am finding out it can be much overdone, for if you help some people too much, they will do nothing for themselves.

But, I found out something else, and that was that this irritability which was consuming me was all in my thoughts. My body was not hurting me more than usual, my problems were no more acute, so I delved down to find the underlying cause for this feeling, and came to the surface knowing it was my thoughts which were making me so dashed uncomfortable.

We are fools indeed when we let others drain us dry simply because they do not want to use their own brain or their own abilities. It is so easy for them to shove their burdens over to us, the problems they should solve, the trouble they got themselves into, and now should be able to get themselves out of, if they tried.

And when we allow that sort of thing, we find it colors our thoughts, because if we are busy people there is a smouldering resentment started within us due to the fact we know we are being imposed upon, and so our thoughts are not calm and peaceful but turbulent.

It is the same with other phases of life. If we are unjust or careless. If we let the lower part of ourselves rule, if we don't play the game, our thoughts trouble us and give us no peace.

There are those who will not take the trouble to use the resources within themselves but must come along and take your small stock away. Their time is not valuable, so they waste yours in small trivialities.

Reading is too much trouble for them, so they want the benefit of yours. But I don't blame them so much for trying to get something for nothing. I blame the fellows like you and me who let them get away with it.

Now, there is another angle to this saying of "do unto others as ye would they would do unto you." And that is, if you knew you were making a nuisance of yourself you would thank the other for jacking you up.

And if you knew you were imposing, you would thank the other for showing you where you erred. Try it this way "See that others also do unto you as you try to do unto them." It would make for a happier world, for at present it seems there are the takers who take all the traffic will bear, and the givers who are left holding the bag.

The knowledge you are left like that will breed bad thoughts, and as your thoughts color your whole life, it is up to you to see it does not happen. Mark you, I am not suggesting you do not help others, but who are you helping when you let yourself become sick due to all this irritation? More later.

Your Friend,
ROBERTA.
